WILSON FLUSHED A BIG COVEY IN THE HUNT FOR A LOBBY

President Either Played in Big Luck or Was Very Astute in Divining Conditions, Is Washington's Opinion

LOBBY-REGULATING LAW MAY RESULT FROM PROBE

Washington Authorities Seem to Think That House Did Noble Work in Probe, While Senate Wrangled

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23.—That President Wilson had big luck, or was unusually astute in divining conditions, is the general opinion here with respect to the institution of the lobby investigation at both ends of the capitol and the developments which have ensued since the senate and house committees got down to work.

Congress took notice when Martin M. Mulhall's statement of his activities in lobby work in behalf of the National Association of Manufacturers was published by the New York World, which so seriously regarded his sworn averments that they paid him $10,000 for that much and added to it a liberal weekly allowance to run as long as he was a witness before either the senate or house committee. Mulhall's statement involved one way and another, a few seriously and the rest merely incidental and innocently, the names of nearly two hundred senators and representatives, members of the present and of past congresses.

The senate committee consisting of Messrs. Overman, of North Carolina, chairman; Reed, of Missouri, Walsh, of Montana, Nelson, of Minnesota, and Cummins, of Iowa, a subcommittee, of the senate judiciary committee, took up the investigation first and got possession of many of the witnesses that were material to the investigation of the house.

The house committee was consequently somewhat delayed by the senate committee holding on to witnesses wanted by the house, and it was not until the senate had completed six weeks' examination of Mulhall that the house was enabled to begin its own investigation.

The house committe was primarily interested in Mulhall's use of the names of house members in his alleged lobby campaigns, and determined at the outset of its own work to make investigation of all statements affecting members of the present house and employes of the present house.

The house lobby committee started with Mulhall, after a preliminary statement by James A. Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers which employed Mulhall, ostensibly, in lobby and political campaign work, and was making progress with him, when he complained of exhaustion and through a physician's certificate obtained some days rest.

The committee then resumed action by examination at length of Isaac H. McMichael, former chief of pages of the house, in connection with his employment by Mulhall for the National Association of Manufacturers and especially with reference to McMichael's relations with the lobby propaganda through his business connection with Congressman James T. McDermott, of Illinois, commonly known here as the representative of the Chicago stock yards district.

McMichael's statements on the stand were immediately sensational. Apparently he intended to make a clean breast of all his activities, and his testimony during several days of close examination, while admitting his own culpability, involved McDermott and several house employes. Mulhall's disposition to testify was used in the meantime for the committee to pursue its investigations along other lines.

Among the subjects was the lobby industry of certain pawn brokers and money lenders of the District of Columbia, during the pendency before congress of what became known as the "loan shark bill," a measure reducing the rate of interest charged.

McMichael testified that McDermott undertook, for liberal consideration supplied by the Washington pawnbrokers and money lenders, to influence legislation their way. This particular branch of the investigation developed not a few remarkably interesting features and was pursued so sharply and industriously by the house committee as not only to impress the public generally with the impartiality of the investigation, but satisfied the house membership that it was happily provided for in the emergency in the character of the committee chosen to do the investigating in behalf of the house.

Praise of the house committee's work in the investigation, critics contrasting its methods and achievements with those of the senate's committee, is heard in all directions. On the house committee are four Democrats—Finis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, chairman; Cyrus Cline, of Indiana; Joseph J. Russell, of Missouri, and Scott Ferris, of Oklahoma; William H. Stafford, of Wisconsin, and Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, Republicans, and John I. Nolan, of California, Progressive.

The house committee, it is very generally observed, has worked not only with notable vigor and exactitude, but with absolute harmony, throughout its long sessions, and manifestly in its private deliberations.

The senate committee's work was marred by no little wrangling and subjected some of its members to criticism for partisan tactics. The house committee has so far been entirely free of such animadversions.

The members have gone at their tasks energetically and with an obvious determination to confine their efforts strictly within the lines of the instructions by the house, which though exceedingly broad and far-reaching, admit of no partisan prosecution of any person or interest involved.

Chairman Garrett has been particularly careful and successful in his conduct of the examinations of witnesses along these lines and has won for him-

Judge Scores Jury Failure To Convict

(By Associated Press.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 23.—Because a jury today reported a mistrial after two days in the case of Butler Searcy, a prominent Butler county planter, accused of holding Wash Gardner, a negro, in peonage, Federal Judge William B. Sheppard, of Pensacola, presiding temporarily over the federal court here, reprimanded the jury in most sensational terms.

"This is a travesty on justice," he declared. "I do not see how any intelligent man, hearing the evidence as it was presented, could agree to such a verdict."

He hinted broadly that the members of the jury had carried their prejudices and petty personal differences into the jury room with them. This, he said in substance, was despite the oath they took and the sacred obligations to which they subjected themselves.

"While we hear much of the corrupt judiciary on every hand," he said, "do you not think it behooves every juryman to consider any case brought before him in an impartial light and to render his verdict to the best of his ability, exercising the functions God gave him to their fullest power? I know that had I given you my opinion of the case it would have had little weight on you. I will give it to you now.

"This man is guilty of peonage. Deep down in your hearts you are certain of this fact, but you bring in a verdict to the effect that you agree to disagree."

After hearing Judge Sheppard's scathing rebuke, Searcy, the defendant, arose voluntarily and pleaded guilty to the charge, despite the fact that two juries heretofore had failed to reach a verdict in his case.

He was sentenced to three months in the Montgomery jail.

BARTLETT WORKS ON SPEER CHARGES ALL DURING SUNDAY

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23.—Congressman Charles L. Bartlett will delve into the voluminous record in the Speer case bright and early Suunday morning. He conferred with Chairman Clayton of the house judiciary committee this afternoon and formally arranged to begin the examination of the report of the department of justice at once.

Judge Bartlett is anxious to complete the examination as speedily as is consistent with a painstaking study of the facts, and he has, on this account, decided to forego his day of rest and devote the time to the record, which covers over 100 typewritten pages.

As soon as he had read and digested the facts set forth in the special examiners' report, Judge Bartlett will call the Georgia delegation to meet in a second conference, when he will inform them as the character and gravity of the charges against the federal judge.

Concerning the charges against Judge Speer, as recited in the report, Chairman Clayton declared that "all of the news had been exhausted" in the stories already sent to The Atlanta Journal from Washington. He stated that the stories published by The Journal covered the essential charges made against the judge.

That Judge Speer has his dander up and is determined to fight to the last ditch any attempt to impeach him or damage his character or reputation as a jurist was established beyond all doubts today, when members of the Georgia delegation began to be bombarded with telegrams from Georgia, all of these messages commended Judge Speer in the highest terms and some of them urged the congressmen to defend the jurist against "the unjust attack."

The nature of the telegrams and duplications of signatures in certain instances caused some wonder as to whether the messages were inspired and whether friends of Judge Speer had decided to conduct a telegraph campaign in his behalf.

Congressman Hughes, of the Twelfth district, to whom Judge Speer communicated a desire to be heard by the committee, received commendatory message among many others, a highly complimentary message from Augusta signed by Jacob Phinizy, John P. Mulherin, L. C. Hayne, Mayor T. J. Hickman, W. M. Martin, Henry North, Sam Olive, Samuel B. Myers, Jr., P. Armstrong, C. Henry Cohen, Rodney Cohen, A. L. Franklin, Archibald Blackshear, W. K. Miller and others.

THROUGH WILSON'S EFFORTS, PEACE IS OUTLOOK IN MEXICO

PRESIDENT'S CURRENCY BILL WILL BE PASSED

Past Week Was Bright One for Wilson Administration Both in Mexican Negotiations and Currency Reform

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The week ended tonight was marked by two notable triumphs for President Wilson and his administration. The more important of these was the decided improvement in the Mexican situation, which improvement, it is conceded generally, has been due to the masterly manner in which the president and Secrtary of State Bryan have handled the matter.

It looks now as if peace will be restored in Mexico, and that constitutional government will be recognized, and that without armed interference by the United States.

Great Britain, France and Japan are among the nations which have interposed their influence upon the Huerta administration in Mexico in support of the efforts of the United States to bring about a peaceful settlement of the revolution.

Of secondary importance is the brightened outlook for currency legislation at this session of congress. At the beginning of the week tumblings of discord in the Democratic caucus of the house concerning features of the administration bill occasioned alarm. But when the crisis came the tide was turned and tonight everybody believes that the president's bill will have comparatively easy sailing through the lower house. It will be passed at no remote date.

The progress on the tariff bill in the senate also was a subject of gratification at the White House. It seems certain now that this troublesome legislation will pass the senate not later than September 15, notwithstanding the efforts of the Republican minority to obstruct progress.

There remains now only four scheduules of the tariff bill to be considered, before the income tax provision and the administrative features are reached. Wool, consideration of which was partly completed today, paper, sundries, and the free list comprise the schedules yet to be considered.

COTTON AND SUGAR DISPOSED OF.

The cotton and sugar schedules, two of the most difficult and troublesome in the whole measure, were disposed of during the week. The cotton schedule was passed in record time, though it gave promise of causing more delay than any other, owing to its many complicated details.

Senator Hoke Smith was in charge of the cotton schedule. He handled it with such dispatch that it was agreed to within four hours after it had been reached.

The Georgia senator had devoted weeks and weeks of study to this schedule and the result was inevitable. He had its detail at his fingers' tips and the opposition made slow progress in its attempt to complicate and delay matters. Mr. Smith would brook no delay, and pressed for a vote on every amendment as soon as proposed.

President Wilson's mastery of the currency situation in the house was demonstrated beyond question on yesterday, when the Neely amendment aimed at interlocking directorates was defeated by an overwhelming vote. This amendment was the test upon which the opposition to the bill rested its cause, and their defeat left no doubt as to the final outcome of the bill in the caucus.

As a result of the developments in the caucus on Friday it is understood tonight that Congressman Hardwick, of Georgia, who had intended to move the recommittal of the bill, with instructions, has decided to withhold his motion. Mr. Hardwick's opposition to the bill in no way involves that or complicate his relations to the president and his administration.

"COTTON AMENDMENT" UP.

The caucus tomorrow will consider the so-called "cotton amendment" which proposes that persons secured licensehouse receipts for cotton shall be subject to rediscount. It is believed this amendment will be accepted. Congressman Hughes, of Georgia, has been active in behalf of these amendments. He

FRANK'S FATE WILL SOON BE KNOWN

HIS SPEECH A MASTERLY EFFORT

DORSEY WILL FINISH HIS SPEECH IN FEW HOURS

Judge Roan Will Then Deliver His Charge and the Case Is Certain to Be in the Jury's Hands by Noon Tomorrow. Some Look for a Quick Verdict, While Others Predict the Jury Will Be Out for Many Hours

Dorsey's Speech, Interrupted by Adjournment, the Greatest of His Career—No Trial in Georgia Has Ever Been Marked by So Many Brilliant Arguments — Frank Remains Impassive Through It All

TERMINATING the greatest criminal trial in the history of the south, the life of Leo M. Frank will be placed in the hands of twelve men tomorrow. The case, after four hot, gruelling, hard-fought weeks is certain to go to the jury within four or five hours after court convenes on the first day of the fifth week.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey will resume his final argument then. He will try to convince the twelve men, "good and true," that Leo M. Frank, as he himself believes, assaulted and killed little Mary Phagan in the metal room of the National Pencil factory on Saturday, April 26, 1913.

When court opened Saturday morning it was predicted with confidence that the jury would begin its deliberations during the early afternoon. Even Solicitor Dorsey said that he expected to finish by noon or soon after.

"I was just clearing out the underbrush when I was interrupted Friday by adjournment," he remarked.

At 11:30 o'clock, after talking three and one-half hours he paused to remark: "I am still clearing away the underbrush. I haven't touched the state's case yet."

More than two hours later when Judge Roan interrupted him he declared that the end of his argument was not in sight. "I am fearfully tired, though," he said. "As you showed these gentlemen—pointing to Attorneys Rosser and Arnold—the courtesy of adjourning during their speech, I hope you will let me stop now."

So, a few minutes before 2 o'clock Judge Roan ordered an adjournment until 9 o'clock Monday morning, with the state's prosecutor in the midst of as impassioned and eloquent an accusation as has ever been uttered at a defendant in a criminal courtroom.

Dorsey attacked discriminately the witnesses put up by the defense. Flat-footedly, without qualifying his words he accused several of outright perjury. He scored the tactics of his legal opponents, Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold and their defense of the accused factory superintendent.

He Denounced Frank.

Again and again he faced the defendant, singled him out with his finger and denounced him as a "man with a reputation but no character," "as a man not like other men," and as a "murderer fit only for the gallows and a felon's grave."

And through it all Frank, college graduate, termed a mental collosus by the man who would send him to a death of disgrace, sat with inscrutable countenance. At either side were his wife and his mother, almost as impassive. But occasionally a tear would trickle down the cheek of his mother or a sob shake the figure of his wife.

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of the murdered girl, cried and shrieked hysterically when the solicitor reached one of the peaks of his seven hour denunciation. She could not control her sorrow. Mary's sister, clothed in deep black, as was her mother, also succumbed to emotion.

Climax of the Case.

Dorsey's speech is the climax of the case. The most dramatic hours of the trial were divided by the long adjournment.

The court was quieter, possibly more attentive, for as the time for the case to go to the jury approaches the public interest grows more intense. Dorsey has the advantage of the last word over the veterans of the defense. His speech has been looked forward to as the finish of Georgia's most famous criminal case. The solicitor has unquestion-

High Lights of Dorsey's Speech

Here Is a Brief Summary of the Solicitor's Argument, Which Has Already Occupied Over Seven Hours

SOLICITOR Hugh M. Dorsey, closing the case of the state against Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, addressed the weary jury for a couple of hours Friday afternoon, argued to it again for several hours Saturday, and will speak for two or three hours more on Monday morning.

His argument so far is admitted to be one of the notable speeches in Fulton county court history.

The sequence of his argument has kept it clear and intelligible. Just as he built his prima facie case against Frank by beginning with Mary Phagan's mother who testified as to when Mary left home and what she had eaten for dinner and continuing with George Epps and all the other witnesses in sequence, he has carried the thread of his argument from point to point.

Mr. Dorsey's manner of beginning his long argument was effective. With but a couple of hours available at the end of Friday's session, he knew that he could not hope to complete his argument on that day. So instead of entering upon it in detail, he laid the rock bottom foundation for it by explaining law to the jury. His elucidation of the law's conception of the term "reasonable doubt" was important, for that was one point upon which the jurors—facing a terrible responsibility under their oaths—wanted information intelligible to their lay minds.

Then, still quoting authorities, he explained the value which the law places upon circumstantial evidence. The law, said he, holds it to be as valuable as direct evidence in establishing guilt. He cited an authority for the statement that "any rule would expose society to its most depraved members," for "the most atrocious crimes are contrived under circumstances which almost preclude positive proof."

It was while he discussed circumstantial evidence that he attacked Mr. Arnold's citation Thursday of the Durant murder case in San Francisco as an example of the uncertainty of circumstantial evidence. Mr. Arnold had made a profound impression upon the jury by declaring that years after Durant was hanged for the murder of Blanche Lamont, the preacher of the church in which she was killed made a death-bed confession of his own guilt in the crime. Mr. Dorsey dramatically gave the jury information not yet a day old from the district attorney in San Francisco that "nobody has confessed to the murder of Blanche Lamont."

Of the Durant case cited by Mr. Arnold, Mr. Dorsey made an impressive parallel with the Frank case, detail by detail.

And the Durant case very naturally led to a discussion of other cases at Saturday morning's session.

Mr. Dorsey referred to the Beattie case, of Virginia, and the Richeson case, of Massachusetts.

Attacks Frank's Character.

But at Friday afternoon's session Mr. Dorsey had progressed just midway in his discussion of "good character" when court adjourned. He denied that Frank had a good character. He admitted that the accused man had a good reputation among those who knew what Frank A. Hooper had called the Dr. Jekyl side of the personality. He explained clearly the limitations under which the state had operated in attacking Frank's character after the defense had made an issue of it. He told the jury that the real and no details had been given to it by the state, in its allegation of bad character, was that the state was not allowed by law to prove details. That said he, must be brought out on cross-examination by the defense. "They dared not question our character witnesses," shouted Mr. Dorsey, shaking his finger at the lawyers for the defense. "They were afraid for those girls to tell what they knew of Leo M. Frank."

And on Saturday he continued right there with his argument.

Some Striking Excerpts From Four Remarkable Speeches

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser:

YOU heard him on the stand. You can take a counterfeit dollar of the right size and the right weight, one that would fool the secretary of the treasury, and drop it—and it will not have the ring of the genuine.

Arnold or I could have told his story but it would not have had the ring of truth to it. I have proof that I never wrote his statement. I couldn't have done it! He has more brains than either of us.

You heard his story. It had the ring of truth to it, unmistakable, unrefutable.

It was an awful crime, the killing of that little girl. But it is a far worse crime to accuse this young man of her murder. I hope I never see this trial duplicated in a courtroom.

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold:

WE are not claiming perfection for this defendant, gentlemen, any more than we claim it for ourselves, or you claim it for yourselves, or Solicitor Dorsey and his associates claim for themselves. But he is a moral gentleman.

The greatest injustice in this case has been the whispered, unspeakable things, the very suspicion of which is damning.

The state has built its case on Conley's testimony and it stands or falls with it. As that negro lay in his cell at police station, he conjured up the story he has told. And it was monstrous. If we hang a man on a story like that we are no better than grub worms.

I am glad to espouse this man and fight for his cause. I know the public eventually will commend me for it. And I know my own conscience will commend me.

Attorney Frank A. Hooper:

THIS defendant, like Dr. Jekyl, when the shades of night came, threw aside his mask of respectability, and was transformed into a Mr. Hyde. And then he did not seek the companions of Dr. Jekyl, but, like Hyde, went to a lower stratum where he picked up Dalton and his kind. And he went with them instead of the men who have come here to give him a good character.

The factory was a great place for a man with lust and without conscience. No doubt the situation under which this man worked was a great temptation—too great for him.

We say a crime was premeditated, that as far back as March Frank had his lustful eyes on this little girl. He knew that Gantt, this long-legged mountaineer was the only man in the factory who would raise his hand to protect her. So he discharged him.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey:

I BELIEVE these poor, unprotected working girls who say he is of bad character. Sometimes a man of bad character uses charitable and religious organizations to mask his real self.

Many a man has walked in high society, and appeared without as a whited sepulcher, while he was rotten to the core within.

Oscar Wilde, brilliant, whose literary works will go down though the ages, had a good reputation, but he didn't have the character.

This man has a reputation—and that is all. He has no character.

. . . . As sure as you are born that man is not like other men. Others without Mary Phagan's stamina and character yielded to his lust. But she did not. And he strangled her to save his reputation. His hands are red with her blood.

FRANK'S FATE WILL SOON BE KNOWN

ably made the most of his opportunity. In his impassioned address Saturday he showed a mastery of detail which was amazing. He expounded his philosophy and deductions of the killing. He contradicted the assertion of Reuben Arnold that it was just as logical to consider Conley the negro guilty as it was to accuse Frank. He gave his views of why he had brought Frank to the brink of death and not the African.

"I Have Done My Duty."

"In the years to come my conscience will not cry out, 'You have done wrong,'" he said. "I will go to my grave content in the belief that I have done my duty, and done it to the best of my ability."

"You will never put a rope around James Conley's neck for a crime that Leo M. Frank committed," he cried. "You will have to get another solicitor general. And the plaudit you get him the better." He echoed Patrick Henry's immortal ultimatum, "If this be treason make the most of it."

As he left the courtroom fifteen minutes after he quitted the floor he was warmly congratulated as he made his way across the street to his office.

Four Great Speeches.

Auditors differ on the merits of the arguments made by the four attorneys. Dorsey, Arnold, Rosser and Frank A. Hooper. Each has exerted himself to the utmost—everybody is agreed on that. Each has given the best that is in him. At least three of the men made exhaustive studies of the case. The fourth, Mr. Hooper, was called into it too late to assimilate all the little complexities that have puzzled the minds of the criminal experts of the city. But when he began the final act of the trial by making the first argument for the prosecution he opened the three days of speech making that are unparalleled in Georgia. Hooper argued the law rather than the crime. He defined the reasonable doubt, told the jurors the value of character testimony, showed them how they should consider circumstantial evidence and applied the intricate constructions of the law to the Frank case. He put the mind of the jury in a position to understand and appreciate the facts that Solicitor Dorsey with his mastery of details is attempting to drive home.

Yet was followed by Reuben R. Arnold, a fascinating speaker and a great lawyer. Hooper called Arnold a "great lawyer." Dorsey said of him, "the country affords none better," and his brother attorney Rosser, said of him, "Ruby's mental giant." Each one of these speeches probably excelled any that had previously been uttered for a jury's ears in this state. And each has its cohorts of supporters who say it is better than the others.

"My Conscience Commends Me."

Arnold talked for four hours and forty minutes. He went into every feature of the evidence, analyzed it, defined it clearly, from the viewpoint of the defense. His logic was clear and deadly and his words had the ring of conviction in them. "I am glad to espouse this man's cause. I know the public will eventually commend me, as my own conscience commends me now." When Rube Arnold said this those who heard him believed him.

Rosser Picturesque.

He was followed by Rosser, who made one of the strongest speeches of his long and brilliant career. In his original and picturesque style, and with his characteristic vigor, Mr. Rosser attacked the state's case.

With pointed ridicule, a weapon which he knows so well how to use to advantage, Mr. Rosser flayed the prosecution's witnesses and their evidence. Occasionally he relieved his arguments with wit; frequently he grew sarcastic, and once or twice he lowered his voice and spoke tenderly, even pathetically. His arraignment of the state's witnesses and the solicitor for their alleged illegal and unjust methods of obtaining evidence was severe and merciless, and his excoriation of Jim Conley and other state witnesses was terrific. It undoubtedly made a profound impression.

Dorsey came last. He has already talked more than seven hours longer by a considerable margin than either of the others and it is almost a certainty that when he concludes Monday with a demand for the life of Leo M. Frank he will have talked longer than both of the defense attorneys.

The month has been an ordeal for everybody, but nobody has suffered more than the four attorneys. Luther Z. Rosser said Saturday that he had lost twenty-five pounds since the trial began. The other three are nervous and weakened. All have approached the limitations of their physical strength.

Frank Shows No Emotion.

Leo M. Frank, about whom the fight has raged, has gone through it all without emotion and few comments. Only once apparently has he allowed his emotion to carry him away. That was when Rosser was interrupted Friday at noon by adjournment. The young factory superintendent jumped from his seat, grasped the hand of the big attorney and congratulated him. Frequently Frank smiles. He does it when he talks with his relatives or friends. He talks little about the trial—or if he does it never reaches the ears of the public. Sometimes he will comment on it generally. He will answer in the positive the suggestion, "Well, it is nearly over," but that it as far as he will go.

"He is the most obedient prisoner I have ever had in my custody," said Sheriff Wheeler Mangum of him Saturday afternoon. "He does everything I tell him."

It is, of course, only a conjecture as to how long the jury will remain out or how long the judge will allow it to remain out in the event of a deadlock. It is certain, however, that the twelve sworn men will get the case today near noon. Judge Roan will occupy less than an hour in giving his charge. It will follow immediately the conclusion of Solicitor Dorsey's argument.

"They're Shooting It Into Me Pretty Hard But I Am Innocent" —Frank

"They are shooting it into me pretty hard, but I am innocent," is said to have been the comment of Leo M. Frank, on trial for the murder of Mary Phagan, following the scathing arraignment of the prisoner by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, Saturday.

Through the solicitor general's speech Frank has sat quietly as he did during the taking of evidence and the argument of his own counsel, and this is the only statement from him which has reached the public since Dorsey commenced his long speech.

TENNESSEE SOLONS END LONG SESSION

Legislature Adjourns After Meeting Since January 6, Many Laws Passed

(By Associated Press.)

NASHVILLE Tenn., Aug. 23.—One of the longest and most turbulent sessions of the legislature ended at noon today when one house simply "adjourned" and the other adjourned sine die. Six members were present in each. An early call for an extra session to pass on appropriation bills is expected.

This session, from January 6 and excepting the usual recess has continued, being kept alive by regular Democrats, though since April 2 when the Fusion filibuster began in the house, only on three days has a quorum been recorded in both houses.

Among new laws passed are those providing convict paroles, indeterminate prison sentences, compulsory education, giving the schools a third of the revenues, vital statistics law, creating banking departments, state auditing department, creating the state board of charities and giving Nashville, a commission government. The prohibition laws were not affected. The attempts attempted to amend the election laws, but the legality of the procedure has yet to be passed on by the supreme court.

CARACAS, Aug. 23.—The cruiser Des Moines, which is in Venezuelan waters to protect American lives, is steaming toward Coro, capital of the state of Falcona, recently recaptured by government troops. The warship left Porto Cabello yesterday.

The Venezulan government announces that General Jurado, the federal commander, had carried the attempting Castro revolutionaries in the state of Falcon after a fight at Cumaribo. The official statement adds that the revolutionary bands in the state of Tochira have been driven across the frontier, where they were captured by Colombian troops.

There still remain a number of revolutionary groups, however, at other localities in Venezuelan territory.

picking up the thread and completing his discussion of the point just as though he had not been interrupted by night.

And from the character issue, he turned to the alibi of the defense. He defined an alibi as "the last resort of a guilty man."

He impressed it upon the jury that the law puts upon the defense the burden of proving that the accused could not possibly have been upon the scene of the crime.

With this introduction, he opened his guns upon the alibi of minutes here and minutes there. The defense had set it up by many witnesses, who swore individually that they saw Frank on the streets and at home and on the cars at definite times of the clock on April 26.

He Quotes Frank.

Mr. Dorsey started with Frank's own statement to the police, given early in the investigation of the crime, that he (Frank) left the pencil factory at 1:10 o'clock p. m., April 26. That statement the solicitor charged, was made before Frank's lawyers realized the value of every disputed minute. He contrasted it with the time chart used by Mr. Arnold in his own argument. On that chart Frank was shown leaving the factory at 1 o'clock—a difference of ten minutes.

"Up goes your alibi!" exclaimed Mr. Dorsey.

Then, with skillful analysis, he picked the alibi here and plucked it there and pounded it in another place, contrasting witness with witness, and witness with affidavit. The defense had almost split seconds with the alibi, piecing it together like the thousand parts of a mosaic to form a perfect whole. Mr. Dorsey followed the defense and was equally a minute. The discussion developed mathematical precision. What ordinarily would have appeared but quibbling became vital in its importance—for the life of the accused may depend upon that terrible problem of minutes.

Answers Perjury Charge.

And the discussion of the alibi led Mr. Dorsey to the charge of perjury. The defense had charged perjury against state's witnesses. Mr. Dorsey denied the charge later; but at this earlier juncture he launched a counter attack upon the defense itself. He said he, had imputed perjury "in terms of glittering generality." To fasten perjury upon a case, said he, one must cite specific instances. Therefore he proceeded to cite specific instances. Of them all, he attacked Lemmie Quinn most cruelly, charging that the "pet foreman of the metal department" had accommodated his sworn testimony entirely to the needs of the defense. Lemmie Quinn, said the solicitor, visited Frank's office before Mary Phagan arrived there on that fatal afternoon. Then was Conley's momentous statement for that, said he; and backing it were two of the defense's own witnesses, Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Ernest Freeman. Both of these left the pencil factory at 11:45, according to their own testimony, and a few minutes later they were talking with Quinn in the Busy Bee cafe on the corner—after Quinn had been to Frank's office. Yet Quinn swore on the stand, said the solicitor, that he visited the pencil factory at 12:20 or 12:30, which would have put him there after Mary Phagan arrived and after the state believes she had been killed, and Quinn swore that he found Frank at work in the office and that Frank was calm and natural.

The solicitor also attached the testimony of Miss Curran, who swore she saw Frank at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets at 1:10 o'clock or possibly a few moments after on April 26.

Mr. Dorsey replied to the charge of "prejudice," made by the defense. By no act or word had the state or any of its witnesses, said Mr. Dorsey, intimated whether the accused was Jew or Gentile white man or negro. The defense, said he, was disappointed because the case had not been pitched on that lower plane, so disappointed that they had raised the cry anyway. "There was no prejudice in the state's case," said Dorsey. "We would depise ourselves if we asked for a conviction upon that base plea," said he.

The solicitor declared, anent the defense charges against Jim Conley, that there was no indictment of Jim Conley for the murder. "I have my own conscience to look to," declared he, adding, "You'll have to get another solicitor general before you can hang Jim Conley for the crime that Leo M. Frank committed."

The solicitor declared that Frank's letter to his uncle betrays a guilty conscience. That letter, he admitted was written on the afternoon of April 26, after (as the state charges) Frank had killed Mary Phagan. It rings false, he charged. He quoted the passage about "It has been too short a time since you left for anything startling to have developed down here," branding it as the mark of an uneasy mind preparing an alibi. He quoted the passage about "The thin gray line of veterans marched to do honor to their fallen comrades," and declared about "the betrayal of excessive effort at factitiousness. What would Frank's uncle, he demanded, care about the thin gray line?

Significance of Notes.

Mr. Dorsey analyzed from the state's viewpoint the notes found beside the dead body of Mary Phagan, which Conley admits he wrote. Their diction betrays them as having been written as Conley tells, said the solicitor.

Conley, on the stand, in negro dialect said invariably, "I done" or "he done," said solicitor. Yet in one of the notes appears "that long tall black negro did this."

No negro, drunk (as the lawyers for the defense allege Conley was), would have written those notes, said Mr. Dorsey; and no negro, sober (as two of the state's witnesses testified Conley was that day), would have attacked Mary Phagan with Frank sitting upstairs in the office within reach of every sound.

Frank had to move the body, said the solicitor; for it lay on the second floor where its discovery would damn him. He asked Conley if he, Conley, had seen anybody come up. Conley answered that he saw two young ladies go up, but only one came down, said the solicitor, quoting testimony. There, said the solicitor, Frank saw he had to let Conley into his confidence. Then he decided to make the negro move the body and incriminate himself. He got the negro's promise in return that afternoon and burn the body, according to the evidence. The solicitor asserted that the jury has conviction that if Conley had attempted to burn the body, Frank would have betrayed him in the act to the officers of the law.

SENATE PROGRESSES ON THE TARIFF BILL

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Rapid progress on the tariff bill was made today in the senate. The wool schedule was disposed of, so far as it will be considered by the senate in committee of the whole, and a deep inroad was made into the free list.

Though no vote was taken on free raw wool, the decisive showing on that having been deferred until the bill comes from the committee of the whole, the Finance committee rates on wool manufactures were agreed to without amendment and there was every indication that raw wool would remain free. The Penrose, LaFollette, Smoot and Catron substitutes for the schedule will come up when the bill apepars in the senate proper.

With only a part of the free list, a portion of the paper schedule and the sundries schedule remaining to be considered in committee, Democratic leaders expressed confidence that the income tax would be disposed of before the end of the coming week. It was their hope to have the bill ready for the final vote in the senate within two weeks.

Among the articles on the free list ratified today were agricultural implements and machinery, alcohol, horses and mules and animals for breeding, apatite, asbestos, bauxite, bibles, brass, biscuits and many others.

POSSE HUNTS SLAYER IN CAROLINA HILLS

Tenant Kills R. F. Smathers, Farmer, and Escapes to Mountains

(By Associated Press.)

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 23.—R. F. Smathers, 35 years old, a well-known farmer and large landowner at Canton, near here, was shot and instantly killed about 7 o'clock tonight by John Waldroup, a tenant on one of Mr. Smathers' farms.

Waldroup escaped and is being hunted through the mountains by a band of armed men.

McKinley Addison, who was standing a short distance away at the time of the shooting, declared tonight that he heard the two men arguing about a lock and key and heard Waldroup say, "I'll get my gun and put you out of business." A few seconds later the fatal shot was fired.

Smathers died almost instantly and Waldroup took to the mountains with which he is perfectly familiar. A posse was quickly formed and went on his trail, but at midnight tonight no trace of the fugitive had been found.

BANKERS ASK CHANGES IN CURRENCY MEASURE

Robert F. Maddox, of Atlanta, on Committee That Goes to Washington

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Bankers from all parts of the country at the close of a two-day's conference agreed on a number of important amendments to the Owen-Glass currency bill now pending in congress and appointed a committee of seven to go to Washington and endeavor to have the changes incorporated in the measure.

Members of the conference expressed the belief that the administration forces in Washington will be convinced by the arguments they will present and modify the bill so that it will be reasonably satisfactory to the banking and business interests of the country.

The committee named by Chairman Hepburn, of New York, to go to Washington and present the recommendations of the conference to President Wilson, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, included: James B. Forgan, Chicago, chairman; George W. Reynolds, Chicago; E. J. Hill, Norwolk, Conn.; R. F. Maddox, Atlanta; Sol Wexler, New Orleans; Joseph Chapman, Minneapolis, and Festus J. Wade, St. Louis. The committee will go to Washington in a few days to begin its work.

FRANCE WILL REFOSE TO RECEIVE MEXIC MINISTER

(By Associated Press.)

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The Agence Nationale says it is practically certain that both President Poincarp and M. Pichon, the foreign minister, will decline to receive Francisco de la Barra, the former provisional preident of Mexico, who recently was appointed minister to France. His position, it is added, is considered similar to that of General Felix Diaz, the special ambassador now on his way to Japan, whom the Japanese government has refused to receive officially.

CONSTABULARY CALLED TO QUELL ERIE RIOT

Private Detectives and Iron Moulders Battle in Streets, Twenty-Five Arrested

(By Associated Press.)

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 23.—After a night of rioting in Erie, two troops of state constabulary arrived here today. The fighting was between striking iron moulders and their sympathizers on one side and private detectives who were guarding strikebreakers on the other side.

The first battle occurred at the boarding house of Edward Stafer, one of the detectives. He had been active on other occasions, it was said, and when his home was discovered it was stormed the house and almost beat him to death before he was rescued by the police.

The fighting continued in many localities during the night.

Twenty-five or more persons were arrested.

ITALIANS THREATEN TO LYNCH STREET CAR CREW

(By Associated Press.)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 23.—A mob of several hundred persons threatened the lives of a street car crew here tonight after Georgia Oddenaño, twenty months old, had been struck and dragged under the car in the Italian quarter.

As the car stopped the mother crawled beneath it, pulled out her baby and held it up, mangled and bleeding. Frank Holmes, motorman, and J. L. Robinson, conductor of the car, alighted to obtain names of witnesses. A crowd surrounded them with cries of "lynch them." Police arrived and rescued them from the mob.

Holmes and Robinson later were released on bonds of $1,000 each. The child's right foot was amputated. Its life probably will be saved.

Heat Is Quick to Affect the Bowels

Well Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation.

So many people are in the habit of eating cold food in hot weather that constipation is very common during summer. It is best to vary the food and have some hot dishes for example, soups and hot fish and meats. If that is to be diet. Iced water should be drunk sparingly.

In spite of all care people will become constipated, and if you find yourself in that condition you can get immediate relief by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. There is no time of the year when you should be more careful of constipation than in the summer, for many of the serious illnesses as well as the fatalities result from a clogging up of the bowels. You also need general good health to withstand the heat, and hence Syrup Pepsin is best to take because it contains tonic ingredients that help to build up the entire system.

Numerous users throughout the land will verify these facts, among them Mr. George C. Allen, 408 N. Main street, Roding Mass., who recovered his health completely after using only two bottles; and Miss Anna Schoff, 249 S. Washington street, Baltimore, Md., who uses it for constipation and now has her mother and friends also using it. They now avoid drastic remedies like cathartics, tablets, purgatives. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is mild and pleasant, and children like it. You can obtain it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a large bottle. Each bottle must do what is claimed or your money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington street, Monticello, Ill.

PLEASE WILL NOT GO TO GOVERNORS' MEET

Carolina Executive Prefers to Spend His Two Weeks at Red Men's Convention

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 23.—Governor Blease has decided that he will not be able to attend the annual Governors' conference which takes place on August 25, at Colorado Springs, Colo. The governor said that on account of the distance and because of the fact that he would be away two weeks in September attending the annual convention of the Red Men, he does not feel that he can spare the time.

The governor yesterday forwarded all the papers in the case against the Parr Shoals company for alleged violation of the Sunday working laws to Solicitor Henry with instructions to present a bill of indictment to the Fairfield county grand jury against the company. At the preliminary hearing of the case before the magistrate the charges against the company were dismissed.

Captain Richard F. Watson, of Greenville, has been appointed by Governor Blease a member of the military board to succeed Colonel O. W. Babb, resigned. The other members of the board are the governor, Adjutant General Moore, Brigadier General Willie Jones and Colonel J. E. Cogswell, of Charleston.

The governor has ordered that elections be held on the second Tuesday in November on the questions of the annexation of a portion of Lee county to Sumter and of a portion of Clarendon to Williamsburg. The proper petitions in each case were filed and passed on by the attorney general.

The railroad commission at its investigation into the cause of the recent wreck on the Lancaster and Chester railroad at Hooper's creek in Chester county, failed to throw any new light on the matter. Colonel Leroy Springs, the president, and A. P. McClure, the superintendent of the road, testified as did the engineer and conductor of the wrecked train. In the wreck three were killed and several score more or less seriously injured. Several of the passengers who were on the train at that time of the wreck were present and testified.

On the question of "Dispensary or No Dispensary," seven counties, Florence, Jasper, Dorchester, Orangeburg, Calhoun, Barnwell and Bamberg voted to establish the dispensary. In Lexington and Sumter the first unofficial returns showed small majorities for prohibition but it is believed that the official counts will give the dispensary a majority in Lexington and possibly in Sumter. Abbeville and Williamsburg remained in the prohibition column, the first by an overwhelming majority and the second bya much smaller margin. Formerly there were only six counties in the state In which liquor could be sold legally, but recent elections have brought this number up to thirteen and possibly fifteen. Victories of the liquor forces have emboldened their leader in the legislature to renew their agitation for submission to the people of a constitutional amendment permitting the sale of liquor under high license, which is now forbidden by the state constitution.

Commissioner Watson addressed a big farmers' picnic in Lexington county today. Secretary J. Whitner Reed, of the State Farmers' union, was a speaker on the same occasion.

The Columbia chamber of commerce is making every effort to secure the proposed railway belt line terminal and parcel post depot for Columbia and Secretary Clark is taking up the matter with President Finley, of the Southern, and President Emerson, of the Coast Line, and urging them to make this extension at the union depot immediately.

At the request of Solicitor Albert S. Hill the governor has postponed the special term of the Spartanburg criminal court called to try William Farr, from September 2 to September 8. In addition to the trial of this negro, several other cases are to come up, for the solicitor, in asking for the special term, said that the jail was crowded and he wanted to dispose of the criminal business if possible. The special term can run three weeks if so much time is necessary.

Governor Blease, acting on the request of the firemens' union, has ordered J. L. George, the Southern railway fireman who shot Special Conductor Shannon, transferred to the penitentiary for safe keeping. The jailer at the Spartanburg jail where George has been confined, is a brother of the wounded man. Mr. Shannon is lingering at the local hospital where he was carried immediately after the affair, and is said to have good chances of recovery.

7-Year-Old Boy Saves Baby Sister From the Flames

(By Associated Press.)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 23.—Little Homer Strong, aged seven, became a candidate for a hero medal today when he rescued his two-year-old sister Florence, from fire in their attic bedroom. When he discovered the flames in the hallway Homer rushed back into the room, locked the trunk containing all the child's valuables, and then, aiding his sister to his back, carried her pig-a-back down the steps, where he was hailed by neighbors. The mother had gone to work and the children were alone at the time of the fire.

FRANCIS B. HARRISON IS GIVEN RECEPTION

Will Not Resign From Congress Until Forbes Announces Plans

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Representative Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, recently confirmed as governor general of the Philippines, will not resign his seat in congress until he learns of the plans of Governor General Forbes, the retiring head of the Philippine government. Mr. Harrison who is arranging his affairs for the departure of himself and Mrs. Harrison for Manila, was given an informal farewell reception tonight by a congressional committee at the home of Representative Kent, of California. Many public men and other friends of Mr. Harrison attended.

JAILED TRAIN ROBBER CONFESSES TWO CRIMES

(By Associated Press.)

In the Mobile and Ohio hold-up the robbers got very little, according to the confession. He implicates Barney Lewis, who he said helped in both robberies.

New Sky Scraper In New York Will Rise Nearly 1,000 Feet

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—A skyscraper whose topmost tower will rise 901 feet above the curb is planned by the Pan-American States association. Unless plans miscarry, it will be built in this city, constructed wholly of materials from the Latin-American republics, will wrest from the Woolworth building the distinction of being the world's tallest habitable structure and will be ready for occupancy with the opening of the Panama-Pacific exposition in California in 1915.

Such at least are the tentative plans of the promoters. Plans and specifications for the structure have been drafted and will be given to a building committee of the association next Tuesday for review and acceptance. Francis H. Kimball, designer of notable downtown skyscrapers, made the plans. The estimated cost of the structure is $9,000,000. The site has not yet been selected. It is intended to erect the building as an enduring moment to Pan-American industry.

The Woolworth building, now the tallest in the world, is 750 feet high; the Metropolitan, its nearest rival, 700 feet.

CAPTAIN CLOPTON WINS BEST RIFLE SHOT TITLE

Annual Shoot at Camp Perry Concluded With Iowa State Team Winner

(By Associated Press.)

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Aug. 23.—By winning the president's match today, Captain W. H. Clopton, of the 130th United States cavalry, is the champion individual military rifleman of the United States. In this match he has a score of 266. Corporal O. B. Long, of Massachusetts, won second place with 260 points. Last year's record of 285 was beaten 31 points.

The Herrock cup match, which opened Friday morning on the 800 and 900-yard ranges, was concluded today on the 1,000 yard range, resulting in a victory for the Iowa state team, which scored 1,727 points. The Massachusetts team was second with 1,702.

The "Ustorwasers" team, composed of eight of the best shots which the United States had lined up a few years ago, made a score of 1,726, but they did not shoot for prizes. This score beats the Tafna score of last year, which was 1,720.

Shooting in the championship revolver match opened with three teams lined up. Colorado won with a score of 1,007, a world's record score for this match. New York was second with 916. This match was shot on the fifty-yard slow fire and the fifty-yard rapid fire with fifteen shots each for record.

The final stages of the Evans service skirmish match today gave the victory to the Oklahoma team when it showed "regos" in first team, which landed second place. Alabama took third place. This match opened Friday with eight teams. The twenty-two who finished with the highest score in the Catrow cup match will be lined up to shoot for positions on the Palma team early in the week.

Easy To Get Rid of Corns.

When you know HOW. But you can't do it by peeling, paring, gouging or picking at them. These barbarous methods are cruelly painful and seriously dangerous, for frequently the corn bleeds and then there is always the possibility of blood poisoning. Furthermore, these methods do not remove the corn completely, for the root usually goes deep into the toe to the bone.

Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid is a scientific formula from our own laboratory, which we have thoroughly tested and guarantee to be successful with any corn, whether hard or soft, and no matter how stubborn or how deep the growth. It removes the corn completely and positively without pain or danger. The first application instantly stops the corn from hurting you. Use it tonight and end your agony. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Advt.)

THAW'S CASE IS NOW IN BIG LEGAL SNARL

Neither He Nor His Lawyers Appear to Know What to Do Next

(By Associated Press.)

SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Aug. 23.—Harry K. Thaw, squabbling with the Dominion's leading lawyers retained to prevent his return to the Matteawan state hospital for the insane, from which he escaped last Sunday morning, tonight apparently was as much in ignorance of the next move in his case as the casual idler around the Sherbrooke jail.

For two hours his counsel conferred this afternoon debating whether they would produce Thaw in court on a writ of habeas corpus next Wednesday or abandon the writ, surrender him to the immigration authorities, and countermance his deportation to Vermont, a procedure to which it was said here the immigration officers had agreed. The two-hour talk resulted in no definite decision.

Thaw was loquacious, erratic, domineering, and it was decided to await the arrival here of Roger O'Mara, of Pittsburg, Thaw's detective-guardian.

In brief, Thaw is held on a commitment charging him with being a fugitive from Matteawan on the "he was confined on a criminal charge." This is an error. Acquitted of Stanford White's murder on the ground of insanity, he was held there on no charge, but as a lunatic.

Both sides had admitted that the commitment is defective and it was conceded that he would be released on the writ when arraigned. Why not then, Thaw's lawyers were asked by immigration authorities, cancel, asit were, all your objections to his being held, turn him over to us, have a hearing at Coaticook, where he was first locked up after crossing the border, and we will deport him to Vermont? It will then be up to New York state to extradite him.

But the agents of the immigration authorities here are subordinates and Thaw' lawyers believe that the final decision in the matter of deportation will come from the minister of the interior, who at present is in Vancouver on vacation. Facing such a predicament it was said tonight that the habeas corpus hearing would be held Wednesday.

Tried for Murder. Freed. Jilted By Gril, Slays Self

(By Associated Press.)

STERLING, Ill., Aug. 23.—Charles Hubner, of Tampa, Fla., committed suicide in a local hotel today. He left a note stating that he took his life because Miss Anna Kulogowski refused to marry him following his trial for murder in Tampa.

Many Believed Hubner Crazy During His Trial

(By Associated Press.)

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 23.—Charles Hubner, who killed himself in a hotel at Sterling, Ill., today, shot and killed Henry Phelts, a well-known truck grower, at Plant City several weeks ago. He was acquitted after a plea of self-defense. Following the acquittal Hubner was taken to a hospital in delirium. He created a sensation on the witness stand by antics that led many to believe he was insane.

MOTHER WITNESSES THREE CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMES

Two Boys and Two Girls Are Burned to Death in Destruction of Home

TOANO Va. Aug. 23.—Three children, two boys and a girl, were burned to death today at the home of Oliver Harkaday, at Diascond, a village five miles from here, was destroyed by fire. The dead are Mary Elizabeth and William Elmer Harkaday, James Hearth, Jr.

Returning home Mrs. Harkaday saw flames issuing from an upper window and with the help of neighbors made desperate attempts to save the children. She was unable to reach them.

Another possibility was suggested. Thaw would come into court, plead not guilty to the present charge and demand trial. This, it was said, might not take place until the October term.

"Wait for Roger," he said.

O'Mara was thus literally the missing keystone in the Thaw forces tonight. And William T. Jerome, Thaw's enemy and prosecutor, was the missing general of the New York forces. It was said here that Jerome, retained by the New York attorney general's department, would arrive Sunday.

GLYNN GETTING INTO POWER SLOW BUT SURE

Sulzer is Quietly Isolated and Appears to Have Allowed Rival to Grab Reins

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The close of the second week of rival governorship camps at the capital finds Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn in practical possession of most of the machinery of state, so far as surface indications go.

Mr. Glynn has adhered rigidly to his program of quietly isolating Governor Sulzer. He has made no spectacular attack upon the Sulzer fortress, but all the while has been entrenching himself behind the legal ramparts furnished by the attorney general's office, by means of which some of the main state departments avowedly, and others tacitly, have acknowledged allegiance to his authority. According to the Glynn adherents, the state prison department is the only big wheel in the commonwealth's machinery that is turning openly for Governor Sulzer.

So careful has Acting Governor Glynn been to avoid anything savoring of a physical contet, or which might precipitate an appeal to the courts, that he has not carried out his previously announced intention of requisitioning members of the gubernatorial clerical staff who continue in Mr. Sulzer's service.

Governor Sulzer continues to observe the policy of silence which he has followed since impeachment. If any steps have been taken on his behalf to bring the governorship controversy into court they have bene concealed.

'New York Ain't Got No Governor,' He Tells Judge

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—"Dice Box" McGuire, more properly known as Eugene Grant, wanted in New York City for the alleged theft of railway mileage books, gave a hitch to his trousers today, fixed Municipal Judge Graham with his eye, and spoke through a mat of whiskers:

"Judge, they ain't no governor in New York, and you know it. You ain't got no right to hold me, an' it's a bloomin' shame."

SCORES INJURED IN RIOT AT ERIE STRIKE CENTER

Iron Moulders Clash with the State Policemen and Bloodshed Follows

(By Associated Press.)

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 23.—Rioting in connection with the strike of iron molders broke out afresh tonight and as a result a state policeman was wounded, three men are in the hospital and a score of injured have been taken to their homes.

As the non-union workmen filed out of plants it is alleged they were met by union workers and foreigners. The Butler troops of the state constabulary which was sent here to prevent rioting, responded to the riot call. It is said the commander's orders to disperse were ignored, and that the troopers rode into the throng. The crowd resisted and a number of persons were injured.

Captain L. G. Adams, of the state constabulary late tonight, it is understood, wired to Harrisburg, asking for more state police.

LIVELY INTEREST IN MACON MAYOR'S RACE

Registration Increasing Rapidly and Young Men Are Very Much Aroused

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., Aug. 23.—The registration for the city election took another jump this morning, nearly one hundred voters registering during the morning. The various candidates continue to bring their friends to the city hall, and this building is now one of the busiest places in the city.

The announcement of new candidates in the field for water commissioner and judge of the new municipal court has had its weight in causing the registration to jump in the past few days, although most of those who registered are interested more particularly in the race for mayor and aldermen.

The committees of all three candidates for mayor are urging their friends to register, and the acticity of the committee men how that all parties are anxious for as many people as possible to have a voice in the coming election of mayor and aldermen.

It was a noticeable fact during yesterday afternoon and this morning that a large number of young men registered, and the registration books show that the number of younger voters for the coming primary is greater than usual. On all sides there seems to be a decided increase of interest among the younger citizens of the city in securing a big registration for the coming election. The total registration at 3 o'clock was twenty-two hundred and fifty-two. Registration books for the water commissioners and judge of the municipal election close on September, but the registration for the mayor's election continues until September 12.

BANKERS WANT CHANGE IN MONEY MEASURE

Suggestions Are Said to Have Been Made as Amendments for Bill

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—While the resolutions committee of the bankers in session here to discuss pending currency legislation had not reported early this afternoon, yet it was said these suggestions for amendments to the Glass-Owen bill had been agreed upon:

"Eliminating the comptroller of the currency and the secretary of agriculture from the federal reserve board, and fixing the personnel of the board at seven members, composed of the secretary of the treasury, three members appointed by the president of the United States and three members chosen by the bankers.

"Removing management of federal reserve banks from politics by limiting powers of the federal agent or chairmen of the board and closing the bankers' advisory board with a veto power.

"Making membership of national banks in the federal reserve banks voluntary instead of compulsory.

"Limiting the number of central federal reserve banks to five instead of twelve as provided in the bill."

George M. Reynolds, of the resolutions committee, said that the issue of treasury notes as contemplated by the Glass-Owen bill and sanctioned by Secretary of State Bryan yesterday was regarded as a near approach to fiat money.

"I suggested to Mr. Bryan when I was in Washington that in case of war with Mexico he might test the scheme by paying soldiers with these notes," said Mr. Reynolds.

Country bankers opposed the authorization of federal reserve banks to act as clearing houses, declaring it would deprive the banks of large sums in exchange charges for the cashing of checks and would facilitate "kiting." George W. Rodgers of Little Rock, Ark. declared that country bankers would rather have no currency law at all than one containing the objectionable clause.

Chairman A. Barton Hepburn, of New York asserted this feature should be eliminated. W. F. Fenton, of Chicago, declared that the clause was objected to by city banks also and that they were not responsible for it. Others were heard on the subject and a radical difference of opinion developed.

Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis, declared the credit men of wholesale houses and jobbers were back of the attempt to eliminate charges for cashing checks.

O. J. Sands, of Richmond, denied it.

Currency Bill Ready For House Next Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—With the so-called insurgent Democrats of the house banking committee routed by an eleventh-hour coup in which Secretary Bryan completely indorsed President Wilson's plans for the administration currency bill, the caucus today continued consideration of the measure, and took up the re-discount features with prospects of having the completed bill presented to the house early next week. Administration leaders were more confident of harmonious and speedy action.

Objections to the features of the bill, the outgrowth of the Chicago conference of bankers, probably will find expression on the floor of the house and will be presented to the senate banking committee where most hope of amending the bill centers.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION FOR SOUTHERN YOUNG MEN

Unlimited Demand for Graduates of Thorough Technical Institutions

It is undeniably true that citizenship receives its best training in the class room, whether of the public school, high school or college. Just as the state then, owes a certain sense of responsibility towards its institutions of learning and more especially those under its direct patronage, we, as citizens of the South, should feel justly proud of our high schools, and especially should we take pride in the Georgia School of Technology—the first technical school of the South.

One of the great advantages offered for the education of young men by this big institution, is the fact that practical and ocular demonstrations in all of its branches may be shown either in the institution itself or in the industries going on in the city surrounding it. The Georgia School of Technology should be and is the Mecca for all young men wishing to technical learning.

For some twenty-odd years, it has carried on and increased a splendid work, each year fitting hundreds of young men to take their place in the business world, equipped with a knowledge and training that will insure their success and contribute immeasurable service to their community. Hundreds of the South's best known men owe their success and ability to this school. Its courses are thorough and practical, its faculty excellent and its democratic life makes it particularly desirable. There are debating, literary, dramatic and musical clubs to make its social life attractive and its baseball and athletic facilities are too well known to need mention. The Y. M. C. A. Building, which cost $75,000, and in which Atlanta took so keen an interest, is the center of its religious life. Schools of this caliber deserve our support and indorsement.

Investigation reveals the fact that the enrollment of students for the South's most popular institution, indicates one of the largest and most prosperous years in its history.

While its students come from every section of the country it is to young men of the South that Ga. Tech especially offers its facilities and they are responding in very gratifying numbers.

FREE WOOL FIGHT IS AGAIN BEFORE SENATE

Substitute Offered by Senator Catron Carries Maximum of High Rates

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Free wool was the center of the tariff fight again today in the senate. Democratic leaders hoped to vote before adjournment on the sub-schedules. Another substitute was offered today by Senator Catron, Republican, of New Mexico, carrying the highest rates of any yet presented.

THROUGH WILSON'S EFFORTS, PEACE IS OUTLOOK IN MEXICO

himself is a farmer, and he thinks a great injustice will be done the farmers unless the amendment is accepted. He said tonight:

"Unless the amendment to the proposed currency bill placing the notes of the farmers, secured by his warehouse receipt for cotton on terms of equality with the note of his brother in the city, secured by personal endorsements, is agreed to, the Democratic party will make a great political blunder and do terrible injustice to the tiller of the soil.

"The farmer is one of the greatest sufferers in time of panic and to deny him the right to use his cotton as security while giving those in the city the privilege of borowing on personal endorsements is grossly unfair," continued Mr. Hughes. "The note of the farmer, secured by a receipt from a bonded warehouse for twice as much value in cotton as the note calls for in cash, is a better commercial paper than any personally endorsed note."

WILSON'S MESSAGE.

It was learned that the Mexican authorities hoped President Wilson would not read his message to congress next Tuesday as he had planned, and showed a disposition to prolong the negotiations. Unless some tangible overtures, however, are received within forty-eight hours from the Huerta officials, indicating a desire to accept the fundamental proposals of the United States, the president will proclaim to congress and to the world the attitude of this government toward the southern republic.

The insistence of the United States on a constitutional election and the elimination of Huerta was reiterated positively by administration officials—a position which Mr. Lind has been instructed to emphasize. Only concessions by the Huerta government, it is believed here, now would persuade President Wilson to hold up the presentation of his message.

The president finished the document today, read it over to Secretary Bryan, and will discuss it Monday with members of the senate and house committees on foreign relations.

Rumors of Concessions Rife in Mexic Capital

(By Associated Press.)

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23.—The return of General Geronimo Trevino from the United States to his home at Monterey and the announcement that he is coming at once to the capitol, have given rise to the report that the administration is contemplating some concession to the demands of the Washington government. General Trevino for some months has been in California, where he went after having been summoned to Mexico City last March, when it was rumored that provisional President Huerta was planning to resign in his favor and take the field against the rebels.

The fact that he is making another hurried arip to the capital through a rebel infested country by a round-about route is regarded here as significant. General Trevino is one of the oldest Mexican generals and is esteemed by the rebel leaders as well as by adherents of the administration.

Negotiations between the Mexican and American governments appear to be quiescent. The embassy evidently is not expecting any developments of importance before the delivery of President Wilson's mesage on Tuesday.

Mr. Lind, the president's personal representative, still professes optimism regarding the ultimate success to some degree of his mission, although he is not very communicative on the subject.

Captain Williams' Widow Becomes President of Road

Mrs. Cora B. Williams, of Atlanta, Is Elected President of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama Railroad

BAINBRIDGE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Cora B. Williams, wife of the late Captain J. P. Williams, was elected president of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama railway this afternoon at a directors' meeting.

The railroad of which Mrs. Williams is president and practically sole owner is 200 miles long, extending from Richland, Ga., to Carrabelle, Fla., with a line of steamers running between Carrabelle and Apalachicola.

The general offices and shops of the road are located in Bainbridge. Mrs. Williams is the only woman who is president of a railroad in the south and one of the two or three in the United States. The value of the road is conservatively estimated at $3,000.00.

She also owns the entire bond issue of the road amounting to $2,000,000.

Captain Williams, her husband, one of the wealthiest men in the south, died in Atlanta a few weeks ago after an illness extending over several years. He was one of the largest land owners in Florida, having between two and three hundred thousand acres. He left his wife sole heir of the estate, amounting to approximately $10,000,000.

All of the officials of the road were re-elected, Colonel Green Johnson, of Sandersville, retaining the vice presidency of the road and Mr. R. A. McTyre his position as assistant to the president.

self and his committee not only widespread commendation but emphatic expression of admiration. In short, the house committee's work so far promises to divulge more lobby history than even President Wilson ever dreamed of.

The consensus of opinion is that the result of the investigations, which will consume practically the remainder of the sixty-third congress, will be the enactment of what will become known as a lobby regulating law. In just what form lobbyists wil be treated is yet to be disclosed, but it is evident that they will not be permitted to appear in behalf of any interest before any committee or to represent any respectable interest unless avowedly and openly, considerable sentiment having already been heard favoring registration, the payment of a license fee and a duly certified statement of interest or interests represented, along with proper credentials.

Whatever the investigation may disclose respecting the lobby industries of the National Association of Manufacturers, it has at least even thus far revealed the fact that no organization of business men in this country for any purpose was ever so big and powerful. It embraced the leading business associations of all the large cities and of all the states of the union.

These subsidiary organizations created through the initiative of officers of the National Association of Manufacturers, another active association which became known as the National Council for Industrial Defense for which from manufacturers belonging to the parent organization, about three hundred in number, a large sum of money was annually collected.

WOULD STOP SLUSH FUNDS IN NATIONAL ELECTIONS

Bill by Senator Clapp Is Favorably Reported

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Senator Clapp's bill to stop the flooding of doubtful states with money for national elections or pre-convention campaigns was reported to the senate today with a recommendation for passage by the elections committee. It would permit a national committee to pay expenses of speaking campaigns, advertisements marked paid for, and other specified items; but would prohibit the general interstate movement of campaign funds.

WILSON COMMENDED BY PEACE CONGRESS

United States Is Asked Not to Fortify Panama Canal as Convention Ends Session

(By Associated Press.)

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Aug. 23.—The twentieth universal peace congress had its closing sitting today. The delegates voted to hold the next congress at Vienna in 1914.

The peace congress finished its labors after recording a further series of good intentions and its appreciation of President Wilson's attitude towards peace. The thanks of the congress were telegraphed to President Wilson.

The question of the fortification of the Panama canal was resurrected today by Prof. Slayden, of Washington, and Prof. Slocum, of Colorado, who secured the passage of a resolution asking the United States government not to fortify the canal.

In another resolution delegates expressed their satisfaction at President Wilson's proposal for the submission of disputes which could not be settled diplomatically for investigation by an international committee.

Atlanta Theater Prepares For Opening September 3

Den McGrath Will Appear in "Mary's Lamb," a Bright Little Musical Comedy. Painters and Cleaners Busy at Playhouse This Week

The Atlanta theater will be a busy place this week in the final preparations for the opening of the season which takes place Wednesday night, September 3. Forces of cleaners, painters and refurnishers will be working all the week and when the opening hour comes the house will be as new as when built so far as appearances can show on the inside.

The opening attraction is a bright little musical comedy, "Mary's Lamb," in which Richard Carle formerly appeared. This comedy is well worth while, as it tells a pretty love story and incidentally deals with the misfortunes of a henpecked husband. Carle was never funnier in his life than in the piece which has a number of songs which stand out as distinctive. Den McGrath is playing the role this season. He is a comedian who has won his spurs.

During the season the Atlanta will offer the richest line of attractions ever in the south. The list includes many stars who have not been seen south in some seasons and more of the number than ever appeared in one season previous to this. The list also includes many new plays in which there are really no stars, but clever actors, such as "Within the Law," "Peg O' My Heart," "Ready Money," "Damaged Goods" and similar attractions of high class.

During the coming week all the fire apparatus will be tested, the cooling fans put in fine working order and arrangements made for the icing of the house during the hot nights. This will be made a feature of the early season. Later carpets will be placed on the floor in order that no one need suffer from cold when the weather gets bad again.

Secret Marriage Out When Bride Flew to Sick Husband's Side

Illness and the shadow of death have brought forth the announcement of a romantic marriage which took place last Thanksgiving day between Miss Lula Shaw and Mr. Frank J. Baker, both of Atlanta.

They were married in LaGrange, Ga., by the Rev. Dr. Vaughn, on November 28, 1912, and had planned to keep the marriage secret until a year had elapsed and the anniversary of the wedding came.

But a short while ago, the young husband became ill with typhoid fever, and his condition was so serious that he was removed to the Georgian hospital.

The wife, who was still known as Miss Shaw, wished to have the privilege of being near her husband; and when the physicians told her that there was little hope of recovery, the bride of a year decided to announce the wedding.

The friends of both were therefore greatly surprised to learn Friday that they had been married nearly a year.

Mrs. Baker spends most of her time at the Georgian hospital now, watching by the bedside of her husband, praying for his recovery, chilled by the possibility of his death.

Mr. Baker is connected with the A. B. and A. railroad, and both he and Mrs. Baker have many friends in the city.

DR. RIDLEY SURPRISED WITH BIRTHDAY PARTY

Central Baptist congregation sprang a real surprise on Dr. C. A. Ridley, who returned to the city Friday from a three weeks' stay among the mountains of North Carolina. It was the doctor's fortieth birthday and his friends showed him they knew it.

Being considerably worn out from the return trip, Central's pastor retired soon after supper and a very few minutes later friends began calling up over the phone and others incidentally dropping in as if making an informal call, to inquire of the doctor's health. By 9 o'clock there were more than 100 present.

Of course Dr. Ridley rearranged his toilet ,brushed sleep from his eyes, and cambe down to look with wonderment upon the throng that had seemingly taken possession of his home. They laughed, spun yarns, had on old time watermelon cutting contests of various kinds and finally "pounded" their pastor with almost everything you can think of from Elberta peaches to the most elegant bits of jewelry.

It was a thoughtful and beautiful thing, and Dr. Ridley when speaking of it said: "Just to be remembered, to have somebody think tenderly of you, makes you grow young again and makes life worth living."

SUFFRAGE ADVOCATES TO MEET AT CAPITOL

First Meeting of Suffrage Association Since It Was Chartered Will Be Held Friday

The Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, auxiliary to the National American Woman's Suffrage association, will hold a mass meeting in the senate chamber of the state capitol at 8 o'clock next Friday evening.

This will be the first meeting of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association since the organization was granted a charter recently by Judge John T. Pendleton of the superior court.

Among the speakers who will address the meting will be a number of well known Atlanta ministers. The complete program for the meeting will be announced early in the week.

JESSE B. LEE CANDIDATE FIFTH WARD COUNCILMAN

Through a misapprehension, it was stated in The Journal yesterday afternoon that Dr. W. M. Etheridge was the only announced candidate for council from the Fifth ward in the approaching primary to be held September 30. Jesse B. Lee is likewise a candidate for the place, though it was announced in error, that there was some possibility of his making the race.

Both Dr. Etheridge and Mr. Lee are in the race from the Fifth, and have made formal announcements to that effect.

At that meeting an address of welcome was delivered by President Wilmer L. Moore, of The Southern States Life Insurance Company, who warmly congratulated the members for qualifying in this club, the prerequisite of which is that the agent shall write $100,000 worth of paid for life insurance in The Southern States Life Insurance company in the twelve months beginning July 1st, 1912, and ending June 30th, 1913. He also congratuated them upon the splendid start which they had made in qualifying for the nineteen-fourteen convention, for the business written by this company in July was the largest and most gratifying in the history of the company.

President's Address.

Gurr and J. R. Munroe for the first time.

Joe Vinson Absent.

Joe W. Vinson, whose absence from the meeting owing to ill health, was greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership. He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July, but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the club by the president and vice-president of the club.

Robert F. Moore, agency secretary, was unanimously re-elected secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary club badges and certificates were distributed after which the first "keystone degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subect of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

COMMISSIONER HART ADDRESSES TOWNSMEN

Newly-Appointed Tax Officer Leaves for Atlanta to Assume Duties

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
GREENSBORO, Ga., Aug. 23.—Judge John C. Hart, the governor's appointee to the recently created office of state tax commissioner, spoke to a large gathering of Green county citizens here today, assembled to bid him farewell as he leaves for the capital to assume his new duties. Judge Hart spoke on the new tax equalization law, explaining it fully and completely to his auditors.

Judge Hart stated that the chief trouble with the state finances lay in invisible property, stocks, bonds and like property, not being taxed. He also declared the state debt ought to be paid, and would be paid. He commenced his speech by telling the Greene countians how deeply he appreciated their showing him such signal honor.

His speech in part follows:

Taxation is a political and economic question. Taxation is a science, and lies at the very foundation of organized society. It is the life blood of the state. Government deprived of this function would perish.

"Conditions exist today in this state which are painful to contemplate. If I consulted alone my own feelings as a son of this dear state I would add to further publicity to her embarrassment by reciting these conditions. But it is your right to know, for in its last analysis the people constitute the state, and I conceive it my plain duty to discuss openly and frankly the conditions which confront the state. I wish you to understand and appreciate the spirit that moves me to talk plainly in this conference.

"The total revenue of the state for 1913 is estimated by the comptroller general, Hon. William A. Wright, one of the most conservative and capable men that ever held an office in Georgia, at $5,673,000. The appropriation to pensions is $1,180,000. The appropriation to the common schools of the state is $2,500,000, exclusive of the appropriations made to those institutions of higher learning fostered by the state. An analysis of the figures will demonstrate that the two items named, the payment of pensions and the appropriations to education, take 75 per cent of the state's total revenue. The balance of the state's revenue is applied to the payment of the interest on the public debt and the creation of a sinking fund amounting to $283,000, and the maintenance of the civil establishment, including the administration of justice and the support of the public institutions.

"The state has been trying to meet these appropriations, but her revenue has proved insufficient. Yearly the deficit has grown until it now amounts to approximately one million dollars.

"DEBT WILL BE PAID."

When your legislature met recently the very last thing your retiring governor said was, "The state should pay her debts;" and they very first thing the incoming governor did was to send a message to the legislature that the state's debts must be paid; and I hear now the message—God bless the people of Georgia—proclaimed by thousands of voices, from the mountains to the seashore, in harmonious acclaim sweet to me as the music of the heavenly choir, the debt shall be paid. I feel emboldened here and now to say to Georgia's sister states that no commonwealth in this union may boast of a more patriotic citizenship, and that Georgia will on or before the 25th day of December, 1914, be redeemed, and will claim her rightful place in the sisterhood of the states.

The people of Georgia when advised of the situation will pay the debt. It only remains to point the way how this may be done. It is not a hard thing to do. It is an easy thing to do, and in doing it benefit yourselves. The debt cannot and should not be paid by any particular class of persons, but should be paid by both classes, natural and artificial, individuals and corporations.

The end hoped for is that every taxpayer shall do his share, which is to be determined by the value of his property. This is the essence of justice. No fair-thinking man will object to this rule, and if the rule is observed by all taxpayers of Georgia, the debt can be paid, and taxes would cease to be a burden. But when taxpayers withhold their property from taxation, or make incorrect returns, and feel that such things can be done consistently with common honesty, the result is inequality, and one man is made to bear the burden of another.

There is enough property in Georgia today in the form of invisible property, consisting of bonds, of money, of notes, mortgages and like securities, which has never paid a cent of tax, to raise, if put upon the digest where such property rightfully belongs, sufficient revenue to pay off the state's debt and in another year result in reducing the present tax rate of five mills from two to three mills. It is to the interest of every citizen in Georgia to see that every species of property pays its just proportion of taxes. It is to our financial interest to be honest. We ought to be honest even when it costs us something to be honest, but no man can claim that his mind or his heart is right when he argues that it is preferable to be dishonest at a financial sacrifice.

The last legislature, realizing the state's financial condition, has made a start towards relieving it. The bill which has passed may not be perfect. Legislation rarely is. Where there are conflicting views of the legislators all legislation is more or less a compromise. We will, as we proceed under the new act, note its defects, remedying them where possible, and administering the law in a spirit of absolute fairness. The local assessors to be appointed in the several counties of the state should be men of the highest type. Men worthy to have and holding the respect and confidence of all the people of the county. The office of county assessor should be looked upon as carrying with it the gravest responsibility. It will be necessarily a hard office to fill. These officers are required to equalize taxes among the citizens of this county so that each man takes his part of the burden, no more, no less. They have the authority and it is their duty to see that the invisible property of the county is likewise placed on the tax digest. They have authority and it is their duty, where property has not been returned for taxation, to examine and inquire of the taxpayer why the omission. Don't get mad with the local assessors. Remember they are your servants and working for your good. Hold up their hands. And the local assessors in the discharge of their duty should remember and appreciate the delicacy of the situation and do so with the highest regard and consideration for the feelings of others. With the county board of assessors the success of this new law lies. Let them administer it in the spirit of Georgia's motto, with wisdom, justice and moderation. These are patent words, all three, but the greatest of all, moderation. Moderation combines wisdom and justice.

STATE TAX COMMISSIONER.

The principal duty of the state tax commissioner is to equalize taxation among the counties. If one county should return like property similarly situated at a lower valuation than is returned in adjoining counties, to inquire into and see why the difference. If there is in fact no reason for the lower valuation, then to raise it on a parity with like property in the adjoining counties.

It is a fact that in Georgia there are at least 125 counties drawing more money annually from the state treasury than they pay into the treasury under the state's levy. This is mentioned as a fact, but does not carry the implication that such counties are getting more than they are entitled to under the law, nor pay into the treasury the money nor does it prove that those counties which pay into the treasury the money have done more than their share. There are local conditions in counties which make property more valuable in one than in the other. Even in a county property of the same nature may differ in value, influenced by environment. This principle will be recognized in the administration of the law. It applies in administering equality between the counties of the state. Land in some localities in Georgia is sold by the acre or lot, and in others it is sold by the foot. It is the environment which reflects value and makes a difference in similar property differently located.

"MAMMY" OF OLD SOUTH DIES AT AGE OF 84 YEARS

"AUNT" SUSAN WILSON.

Ante-Bellum negress, who rema ined faithful to her "white folks" during the civil war and the reconstruc tion period, passes away. Was in family of Mrs. Pink Cherry for eighty-fi ve years.

Another one of the old-time negro mammies who served faithful to their owners during the war and during reconstruction times, passed away Friday night when Aunt Susan Wilson died at the home of Mrs. Pink Cherry, 200 Jackson street, after having lived with Mrs. Cherry's family during her entire lifetime, about 85 years.

Aunt Susan was born at Palmetto, Ga., the slave of the Rev. Dabney Jones, noted Methodist lecturer, and the grandfather of Mrs. Cherry. She nursed Mrs. Cherry's parents and Mrs. Cherry says practically raised her and her children. The faithful old woman's body was taken to Palmetto Saturday, where the funeral will be held.

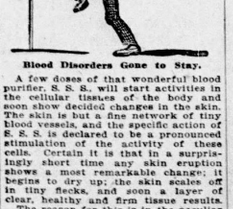
Arrendale Held for Theft of $20 Bill Here in Year 1910

When William Waldrop, a farmer of Kalb county, found Will Arrendale, who is well known to the Atlanta police, walking down Decatur street Saturday night he grabbed him and held him until the arrival of a bluecoat. Waldrop charges that Arrendale snatched a $20 bill his hand three years ago.

Arrendale was arrested on his complaint but was released when Waldrop failed to appear to prosecute him. Waldrop declares that he did not receive a supoena to come to court and did not know that Arrendale had been arrested.

The case will be heard before the recorder Monday.

Good Time Now for Blood Health



Blood Disorders Gone to Stay.

A few doses of that wonderful blood purifier, S. S. S., will start activities in the cellular tissues of the body and soon show decided changes in the skin. The skin is but a fine network of tiny blood vessels, and the specific action of S. S. S. is declared to be a pronounced stimulation of the activity of these cells. Certain it is that in a surprisingly short time any skin eruption shows a most remarkable change; it begins to dry up; the skin scales off in tiny flecks, and soon a layer of clear, healthy and firm tissue results.

The reason for this is in the peculiar stimulation of S. S. S. which enables the cells in the skin to select from the blood the nutriment it requires for regeneration.

You can obtain S. S. S. at any well stocked drug store, if you insist upon it, but be sure you are not talked into something "just as good."

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 180 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Write for their illustrated book on skin diseases.

Atlanta Cops Have Arrestea 10,000th Man For Year 1913

The name of the ten thousandth man unfortunate enough to be arrested by the Atlanta police during the year 1913 was entered on the docket at police headquarters at 9 o'clock Saturday night.

The man who first caused the numbers on the police docket to run into five figures was Charles Gibson, a negro labore, who took on too much Decatur street beer, and then tried to break up the saloon.

The local police are making arrests this year at the rate of 43 people a day, or about 15,700 per year.

Just now they are three days ahead of last year's schedule, for in 1912 the ten thousandth case was not docketed until August 26. Last year there were over 19,000 arrests, but many of them were made in the last few days of the year, during the beginning of Chief Beavers' sensational crusade.

ELKS' NATIONAL HOME WILL NOT BE MOVED

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
BEDFORD CITY, Va., Aug. 23.—C. I. Mosby, superintendent of the Elks' national home, received a telegram this afternoon from an official of high rank, stating that the building committee, which examined the inducements offered by Bedford, Ind., and other homes, has decided that the home shall be continued at this place.

Seven out of the eight committeemen decided in favor of retaining the home here. It is supposed that building on the new home will go forward at once. Half of the inmates have decided to remain with the management wherever they may select, while the others have accepted an income of a dollar a day and will return to their homes, or wherever they choose, during the building of the new home which will require a year or more.

Eating up Money

Did you ever stop to think that that pile of old, discarded furniture, clothes and other household goods that is lying up in the attic collecting dust, is simply eating up money that you might have in your pocket? Those goods that you have thrown aside are of some value to somebody, but the longer they are allowed to remain in the attic the less valuable they become.

Why not take an afternoon off and go over these old dust-catchers and make an inventory of them and then run a Journal Want Ad telling the great public just what you have for sale? If you do this within 24 hours your dust-catchers will have disappeared and you will have a comfortable roll of bills in your pocket.

Don't let the household discard pile catch dust and eat up money any longer, but make The Journal Want Ads get rid of it for you in exchange for real money.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal—see first Want Page. For charge ads, ask that they be sent for, or telephone them to Main 2000 or Atlanta 423.

Why Will a Thousand Cats Parade Peachtree Monday?

Fred Stewart "Want Ads" for Ten Hundred Tabbies Monday Morning--Why Does He Want 'Em?--Nobody Knows

"Scra-a-a-atch! M-e-c-o-o-w!"

One thousand cats or thereabouts are expected to invade Whitehall street Monday morning, perhaps to chase merrily across the viaduct or to lick up cream from Atlanta's array of drug stores, possibly to yowl their way down Decatur street pursued by an equal number of enthusiastic "pups."

The cause of it is not a cat convention, neither as Walter Taylor decided to get a cat wagon for the city. Nor has the fame of the Atlanta spirit attracted hither any rakish old boozers of Tabbyland.

The answer is very simple. Turn to the want add columns of today's Journal and you will find it there. O, well, if you're too lazy, here it is:

"We want 1,000 cats Monday between 8:00 and 10:00 o'clock. 10 cents to every school-boy for his cats.. Fred S. Stewart company, 25 Whitehall street."

That is the answer, but we don't know a thing more about it than you do. Why does Fred Stewart want a thousand cats? Why has he picked out school-boys to bring 'em when he knows that no fellow wouldu look at a cat unless he wanted his dog to chase it? And if he prices a cat's life at 10 cents, will he pay ninety cents if they have, as is said, nine lives?

Enthralling curiosity holds those who read it. They are looking forward to the spectacle on the viaduct Monday morning, a thousand pussies, Tom-cats, gray tabbies, black cats, wild cats, polecats, any old cat, every old cat, all walking up to Fred Stewart and purring "What in thunder do you want with me?"

Speculation is rife. Will Fred Stewart shut 'em all up in one room and turn one mouse loose in it? Will they yell, will they spit, will they scratch? What has Fred Stewart got against his neighbors anyway?

Even before the want ad was published Fred Stewart's designs on cats got out, and every pussy in town was beating it out Peachtree road mewing at the moon Saturday night. It is reported that the anti-vivisectionists in Atlanta have raised the advertizer for cats. They may appeal to Chief Beavers and have him send out a special force of officers to run in the cats. A thousand of 'em pursued by cops on motorcycles would be a jovial sight.

But Mr. Stewart will not tell. He was asked by a Journal reporter Saturday night what he wanted with a thousand cats, but refused to commit himself.

"Don't give me diamonds; all I want is cats," he is reported to have said.

Spaniard Fatally Shot Crawls Half a Mile For Succor

(By Associated Press.)
TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 23.—Shot behind the ear at 5 o'clock this afternoon, fatally wounded and left for dead, Jose Valles, an eighteen-year-old Spanish cigarmaker, regained consciousness after dark and crawled a half mile through dense woods to a house and asked for medical attention. Valles was alive at midnight but physicians state that he will die before day.

Valles joined a Spaniard and a Cuban for a fishing trip, leaving the city at noon. At 1 o'clock, according to his disconnected story, the party reached a byroad and the car was turned down this. Asking wher they were going, the other two told him that it made no difference. Velles attempted to leave the car when without warning, the Spaniard shot him with a revolver. He refuses to give the names of the other parties.

Alabama Minister To Face Charge of Bigamy in Atlanta

The local police took the initial steps Saturday toward securing requisition papers for the Rev. Charles L. Smith, who is now, under arrest at Seale, Alabama, facing a bigamy charge.

Smith, who claims to be a Methodist minister without a pulpit, is charged by the police with taking unto himself two wives within seven months.

It is alleged that in February of this year he married a young woman of Opelika, Alabama, but soon tired of her and deserted her.

On July 19th, it is alleged, he married a Miss Wilson, daughter of S. M. Wilson, of 221 Courtland street, Atlanta, after a brief courtship.

Soon, it is said, the Atlanta girl commenced to hear rumors that the man she had married already had a wife in Alabama. Smith denied the rumor and in order to settle it forever it is alleged started with his Atlanta wife for Opelika.

There, instead of proving his innocence, he is alleged to have been confronted by wife No. 1.

He fled it is said, leaving both wives, but was soon arrested in Seale.

LORING BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sirs:—

During December past I suffered a severe spell of LaGrippe and gradually run down in health until I had lost in weight 52 pounds. I couldn't eat any solid food at all and began to think I would never be well again, but was persuaded to try Nuxcara and its effect was something wonderful. I have used four bottles and am gaining my strength and improving every day; can again eat anything I desire in reasonable quantities and feel sure it will eventually cure me. Several of my friends who were in same condition are now using it with the same good results, I think Nuxcara a wonderful medicine for any one suffering with indigestion and a dyspeptical stomach, as it has worked wonders on me. Yours truly,

LORING BROWN.

STEALING THE REPUTATION OF "ATLANTA MADE" GOODS

The FIRST MONCRIEF FURNACE ever made was made in Atlanta in 1898. It is the only furnace manufactured in the South and was originated by Mr. S. P. MONCRIEF. Hundreds of these furnaces have been placed in Atlanta homes, and the owners have all been pleased, not only because they are buying "Made in Atlanta" furnaces, but because they are as good value as can be found anywhere in the trade.

This business has grown until there are now more than 125 people in Atlanta dependent for their support on the manufacture of these furnaces.

NOW comes the T. E. Henry Furnace Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, and establishes a branch in Atlanta, on Walton Street.

We welcome honest competition as do all Atlanta manufacturers, BUT these people are trying to STEAL the name "MONCRIEF" as well as the business which has been built up. They are represented by R. A. JONES, who is stating that he is with the original Moncrief Co., and that the firm is no longer on South Pryor Street, but is now on Walton Street.

IT IS NOTHING BUT A PLAIN STEAL. REMEMBER THAT THE ORIGINAL FIRM, MANUFACTURING THESE FURNACES IN ATLANTA, is the

MARATHON MAKES AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Herff-Brooks Corporation, of Indianapolis, Takes Over General Sales Agency

The Marathon Motor Works, of Nashville, Tenn., who are the builders of the popular Marathon car, have announced a change in their sales organization that is one of the important features of the automobile season.

In order to devote themselves exclusively to the building of their cars and relieve themselves of the heavy expenses attached to the maintenance of a large sales organization they have entered into an arrangement with the Herff-Brooks corporation of Indianapolis, whereby all Marathon cars will hereafter be marketed by this well known firm.

The Herff-Brooks corporation is incorporated under the laws of Indiana with a cash capital of $19,000 paid in. The officers are Jacob Herff, president; Herbert Herff, vice president, George Herff, treasurer; H. H. Brooks, secretary and general manager.

The Messrs. Herff are prominent Indiana capitalists and for some time have controlled the Marathon sales in the state of Indiana. They are, therefore, thoroughly equipped in their knowledge of the car and of the excellent sales points that have made it one of the large factories of the country.

Mr. Brooks has been connected with the Marathon Motor Works since its organization eight years ago, and in his position as general sales manager of the factory brings to this corporation a rare knowledge of the car itself as well as an established reputation for salesmanship that puts him in the front ranks of the big automobile men of the country.

The Marathon output this year will be five thousand cars, and the new sales agency only regret that they will not have a larger number to place.

The location and low operating cost of the factory, together with the facilities enjoyed by the new corporation, will enable them to put a price upon the Marathon cars that will make their demand practically unlimited.

HUPP PROVES ITS STAMINA IN "THE COLONIAL TEST"

Shows Englishmen How It Can Meet Difficult Road Conditions

The struggle of the American car abroad has been to convince the foreigner that the makers of the United States have not only caught up on the European manufacture, but have passed him and are today offering a better motor car for the money than can be manufactured abroad.

But the foreign buyer must be "sold" on this point. He has had it driven into him in the early days of the industry that the American maker lagged behind and that thousands of cars were imported into this country.

To convince the foreigner that American cars are the best, every possible test to which a car can be subjected is made. The cars that come through these tests with proven worth are the cars that are selling abroad.

Recently a Hupmobile in England was put to what is known in that country as "The Colonial Test," that is, a racking road trip in which the main traveled highways are carefully shunned and the worst of byways picked out for the route. The Hupp ran out of London and selected as its destination Chalk Pit Hill in the neighborhood of Dorking. The Motor, one of the leading publications on the other side, had a lengthy illustrated article describing this trip and concluded it as follows:

"Briefly epitomizing the outstanding characteristics of this car as they appeared to us, one is inclined to place first the charming response of the car in miles per hour to the depression of the throttle pedal in fractions of an inch, whilst the degree of accuracy in the acceleration is equally pronounced. Hesitancy in executing such a movement was never visible. The suspension was comfortable and the steering quite facile, the gear ratio being rather slow, so that the movements were rendered quite easy. She runs smoothly and lightly, has a good average turn of speed and behaved throughout the trip in a thoroughly pleasing manner."

IMMEDIATE TIRE DELIVERIES

Goodrich Company Announces Increased Production

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 23. 1913.—One of the indications of a healthful business condition and general prosperity has been the fact that the makers of automobile tires have been running their factories overtime to keep up with the demand.

In an interview today, Mr. W. O. Rutherford, of the great B. F. Goodrich Co., operating the largest rubber factories in the world, made the following statement:

"Yes, it is true that as soon as the automobiling season was on, our dealers were crowded with orders for Goodrich tires.

"Owing to the unprecedented demand for this popular make of tires, we have been unable to fill all of our orders within a reasonable time. As a consequence, in some cities, motorists have been subjected to annoying delays, which we very much regret."

Continuing, Mr. Rutherford said: "When we have had any changes in prices to announce in the past and wanted quick action, we have invariably used the advertising columns of the daily newspapers. In the very near future we will announce to motorists through the newspapers that we are now filling promptly all orders received from our dealers.

"It has been an uphill fight to attempt to bring up our production so that we could ship all orders promptly. But we are pleased to say that by installing new machinery and adding to our force of expert tire builders, we can, for the first time this season, meet the ever increasing demand for Goodrich Unit Molded tires. This news, we are sure, will be welcomed by motordom, especially those who have insisted on having our particular brands and been compelled to wait till our production could be increased sufficiently to meet the record breaking demand we have experienced this season."

SEARS SHOOTING IS DENOUNCED BY O'NEAL

Alabama Governor Employs Lawyers to Prosecute Him for Contempt of Court

Declaring that the shooting of Will Smith, colored, by Deputy Robert L. Sears in the city court room Friday night was an affront to the dignity of the state and a challenge of the law and the courts, Governor O'Neal Friday announced the employment of Hill, Hill, Whiting & Stern, of Montgomery, as special counsel to prosecute Sears to the fullest extent of the law.

"This was such a flagrant and open defiance of law and order, and especially by one who had been entrusted with authority as an officer of the law," declared Governor O'Neal, "he should receive adequate punishment. The offense was intensified by the fact that Sears held a commission as a deputy sheriff to uphold the laws of our state."

The governor declared that the Hillsboro affair in Virginia was hardly worse than the Sears shooting.

MOTORCYCLE PAYS FOR COLLEGE EDUCATION

Campbell attends the Kansas Agricultural college and pays his way with the commissions earned through the sale of dairy products in town.

His motorcycle makes this possible, for, strapped on either side of his luggage carrier is a five-gallon milk can. Campbell scouts through the country collecting cream from the farmers and carrying it to town in the cans on his motorcycle. Last year he sold between $7,000 and $8,000 worth of dairy products.

PEERLESS MOTOR CO. PREDICTS GOOD YEAR

Predictions of a business slump and likewise of a decline in the popularity of the high grade and costly motor car are both set at naught by the experience during the summer of the Peerless Motor Car company.

For the first time in a number of years the business of the company has not slowed during the hot months, but every wheel in the big factory at Cleveland has been turning to full capacity through July and August. It has been by far the biggest year in the history of the company.

So rushed has the plant been up to this time with orders for the open types of passenger cars and for trucks that it has only just succeeded in getting out the first closed cars of the new series for the fall trade.

Closed demonstrators have been supplied to the various branches and the booking of orders has begun. These cars have several exceptionally interesting features. These include the Swiss rallway type of window which eliminates all casings and greatly increases the lighting area, a new auxiliary seat which when not in use folds up and completely disappears into the compartment wall, and Pullman type electric lights which also disappear when a button is pressed.

REPRESENTATIVE OF KEETON FACTORY IN CITY

One of the first motor car manufacturers to send its factory representative through Georgia, with one of the 1914 models, is the Keeton Motor company of Detroit, Mich.

Mr. J. G. Carr, representative of that company, who is at present making his headquarters at the Piedmont hotel in Atlanta, is very enthusiastic over the prospects for an exceedingly large business in Georgia for 1914.

Mr. Carr expects to announce the appointment of a distributor for Atlanta in the very near future, as well as to make his agency arrangements for the whole of Georgia within the coming week. After leaving Atlanta, he will visit Macon, Savannah and Augusta.

LARGE PER CENT OF AUTO ACCIDENTS PREVENTABLE

"A large per cent of the automobile accidents could be avoided if the proper precautions were taken," says L. C. Rockhill, manager tire sales department, the Goodrich Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio.

"One of the greatest dangers is when an automobile driver in a rear car tries to make the one in front eat his dust.' On one side of the forward car or directly in front may be another machine, buggy or pedestrian, which, to the driver of the rear car, is not within his sight. Invariably when passing machines in this manner, that is, from the rear, the driver opens his cut-out, and by increasing his speed, passes the machine in front so fast that he doesn't see the other occupant of the road until nearly upon him. The result is an accident.

"Because a car is hired," says Mr. Rockhill, "many people think the driver should do things that common sense tells him he should not. A little extra change tempts the driver to comply with the passenger's request to speed up. If the occupant of the car would not tempt him, the chauffeur would not be inclined to break the speed and the police and the newspapers would not be filled every day with accounts of catastrophies.

"By standing on a busy street corner you will readily observe how many accidents result from the carelessness of pedestrians and not through the fault of automobile drivers. In every direction you will see people crossing busy streets, reading a newspaper or talking with a friend; in fact, doing most anything except paying attention to where they are going. If they would cut square corners and look both ways before crossing, you would not hear of so many accidents. The public must help the traffic policemen, if the police are to help the automobilists.

"Joy-riding is another reason why automobile accidents are continually increasing. The occupants of the machine in this case are absolutely at the mercy of the driver. The reckless and dare-devil spirit gets the best of him and many cases have resulted disastrously."

HERE'S A GOOD CHANCE FOR RELIABLE PRESS AGENT

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—The United States wants a press agent to help boom the good roads movement according to an announcement of the local branch of the federal civil service commission today.

The position may be competed for by any male, but a trained newspaper man is preferred. The position will pay $8 a day for each day employed.

A Salesman's Paradise

According to the state registration statistics, southern California, famous as a motorist's paradise, is also a most fertile field of effort for the autoomobile salesman. Of the fourteen leading makes selling at over $700, no less than 4,723 cars have been sold this season in Los Angeles, San Diego, San Bernardino, Riverside, Imperial, Orange, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, Studebaker leading with a total of 1,375 to 728 for the nearest competitor.

AUTOMOBILES CHEAPER THAN RAILROADS

In spite of the highly commendable efforts of the interstate commerce commission and the governing bodies of railways in various states to bring about lower fares and better service from public utility corporations the automobile has thoroughly demonstrated its superior economy as a cross country transportation vehicle. While two cents per mile is the lowest rate of steam railroad fare now in existence in this country, and in some localities the charge is as high as 3 or even 4 cents per mile, I. C. Emerson, a motor enthusiast of California, has recently completed a 3,000-mile automobile trip in which the rate of fare per person totaled only five-sixth of a cent a mile.

"And we had a more enjoyable trip than we could possibly have had on the railroads," said Mr. Emerson, in discussing the record he made. "We drove our 30-horsepower Overland miles and miles away from the railroads, seeing things that the train traveler never hears of and probably never will. Our route covered approximately 3,000 miles in California and Oregon, at a total cost of $150 for everything, tires, inner tubes, oil, gasoline, garaging and even team hire, when on two occasions we struck mud holes that nearly buried the little Overland out of sight. This is an expense of but 5 cents per mile, and since there were six people in my party, the cost per mile for each passenger is only five-sixth of a cent. There isn't a stea mrailroad in the United States that will give 3,000 miles of delightful travel at anywhere near this figure.

"The numerous advantages of owning a good motor car are well illustrated by our trip. You are absolutely independent of the railroads. You can select any place you wish to visit and head for it, regardless of time tables, junctions and the like. And motor car travel gives one a much better opportunity to observe the country and its people, to appreciate the scenery and understand what you are seeing from an automobile than from a car window."

BIG PITTSBURG STORES BUY 14 WHITE TRUCKS

More than half of the motor trucks in the city of Pittsburg are White trucks. The leading merchants have standardized on equipment of this make and every week records large repeat orders. Three prominent department and dry goods stores added Whites to their equipment during the past ten days. The Rosenbaum company, which has operated seven Whites, placed their order for six more; Boggs & Buhl Inc., who have operated ten, brought their total up to sixteen, and Solomon & Co. purchased two. Over 100 Whites are used to make the deliveries of Pittsburg shoppers.

HALF-MILLION FINE GIVEN RIDE IN A CADILLAC

A Cadillac seven-passenger touring car played a most instrumental part in a closing act of the Texas drama in which the Lone Star state bested the Standard Oil octopus, the automobile being used at Austin for the pleasant task of transporting the $500,000 penalty to the state coffers.

The Standard Oil's fine was paid in cash, $450,000 being in currency and $50,000 in gold. The money was loaded into a Cadillac belonging to Morris Hirshfeld, cashier of the Austin National bank. Then W. L. Folts, vice-president of the bank, Assistant Attorneys General Sweeton and Cureton and Captain J. M. Fox, of the state ranger service, climbed into the car and made a rapid run to the capitol. The cash was placed in a telescope grip and a suit case, having been drawn from a cost of $150 for everything, tires, inner tubes, oil, gasoline, garaging and even team hire, when on two occasions we struck mud holes that nearly buried the little Overland out of sight. This is an expense of but 5 cents per mile, and since there were six people in my party, the cost per mile for each passenger is only five-sixth of a cent. There isn't a stea mrailroad in the United States that will give 3,000 miles of delightful travel at anywhere near this figure.

Peace for Mexico?

Despite the unsettled conditions in the sister republic, D. B. Richardson, and F. J. Dunkerly, the latter a banker in Mexico City, have just closed a big contract with Studebaker, ensuring them the Studebaker line for the whole country. Both members of the firm are confident that peace will soon be achieved. In the meantime, however, they are selling cars steadily, their latest being a fleet of delivery wagons, to be used for government ambulances.

Warren Joins Studebaker

E. F. Warren, an automobile engineer of wide experience, has joined the staff of Chief Engineer Heaslet, of the Studebaker corporation, as chief draftsman, in charge of the big room at plant 10 where a force of forty men is continually at work, incorporating on paper the ideas of the Studebaker designers.

Big Stagnant Pond Eight Years Old Near City's Heart

There is no need to go on voyages of exploration to Africa, the north and south poles, or the Indies. Just go to prospecting round-about Atlanta, and you will find some things that will prove interesting and surprising.

For instance, a pond of water has been discovered within four or five blocks of the very heart of the city—a pond that nobody knew was there, except some darkies that live, Venice-like, above 'the dark waters of the lagoon."

This is no joke. It is a fact that for eight years and more a pond has stagnated in the center of the city. Flags are growing in wild profusion on the banks, and mosquitoes are breeding in a pond 200 by 150 feet in size in the center of the block bounded by Harris and Butler streets, Piedmont avenue and London lane.

The pond is practically hidden by the thickly clustered negro houses on the edge, and the water floods under the high piles on which the houses are built.

Residents of apartments on Harris street complained so frequently and so bitterly of the vast clouds of mosquitoes which made life miserable that the sanitary department instituted a search to find out where the pest were breeding.

Councilman C. L. Ashley and an inspector made a thorough canvass of the neighborhood and found the pond. Nobody but the negroes living near it knew anything about it, and one who had been living there eight years said the pond was there when he came.

How much longer it has been there nobody seems to know, but the flags and growing things on the edge would indicate that it has been there a long time.

Nym Hurt, superintendent of streets, was authorized to fill the pond at once with dirt from the Ivy street work, and the water is now almost gone.

NEGRO AND WIFE ARE ARRESTED FOR BURGLARY

Preston Fleming and his wife, Callie, negroes, have been arrested by City Detective Coker for the robbery of the home of J. J. Russell, in Ansley Park, last Sunday, when more than $600 worth of jewelry was stolen.

The Russell residence was burglarized between 8 and 11 p. m. last Sunday, and no clue was left to guide the detectives. Officer Coker, however, found where Callie Fleming pawned part of the jewelry on Decatur street and another part on Peters street. He arrested the Flemings and searched their home and found the rest of the jewelry hidden in a bed.

Then negroes will face the recorder Monday.

IN LOCAL THEATERS

Miss Fremont Benton, who with Fred Bond will be a feature of the bill at the Forsyth this week.

The Forsyth management presents "always a good show, often a great show." One week after another for a year seven acts are assembled from all parts of the country and placed together on a program to the best possible advantage and resulting in an entertainment that packs the theater to its capacity on Monday, and then in accordance with the merit of the attraction fills the house the rest of the week.

It all goes to show that vaudeville is surely the most popular form of entertainment. That vaudeville appeals to all the people and that vaudeville rarely disappoints is true. As a general rule the Forsyth bills suit the majority of patrons; it might be that some act does not just fit the idea of Mr. Smith, but that same act sets Mr. Jones wild with applause.

There are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of vaudeville acts that have never been seen in Atlanta. When their names are announced it may be like a line in Greek for all a majority of the people know about the value of the act, but once it is introduced and makes good it is a case of old time friends.

There is to be the sort of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week that Atlanta people like some of the acts are known here, others will have to be introduced. At any rate the Keith people in New York know the local pulse and they are sending in a combination that is going to be mighty interesting, unless, as the morning editors may write, "the dope is all wrong."

Among the features will be Fred Bond and Miss Fremont Benton in their laughable farce, "Handkerchief Number 15."

A big novelty will be the introduction of The Four Regals in a wonderful act, showing great feats of strength. They are direct from the London hippodrome and Berlin Circus Schuman.

Lewis and Dody, who are professionally known as the Two Sams, will offer an unusual comedy act in chatter, song and dance. They have been identified a long time with the musical comedy successes.

Joe Flynn, a comedian with a style all his own, will tell stories that are new and that will give the drawing room entertainers some rare material.

Meredith sisters sing the newest songs in just the fashion that Atlanta people like best. Another act will be put in this program and it will be a surprise and a drawing card.

Kinemacolor will be the permanent attraction at the Grand, starting on Monday. In addition there will be the very best first run pictures, all making a program that will be of most interesting and entertaining powers. There are hundreds of people in Atlanta who will recall seeing the Kinemacolor production of the coronation of King George two years ago. It was explained that an American and a German working together developed a camera that would take pictures in their natural color. The process was simple, and has at last been perfected, even better than when the original Kinemacolor was shown. During the last two years hundreds of pictures have been made and in the larger cities some theaters have been devoted to nothing else.

Just recently the owners of the American rights announced that they were ready to offer first-class picture theaters with a Kinemacolor service, to be used in connection with the usual first run black and white pictures. Jake Wells arranged immediately for the southern rights of production and the Atlanta Grand was selected as the opening point.

The schedule of performances, or rather exhibitions, will be from 2:30 to closing hour each day, with 5 cents admission fee up to 7 o'clock and 10 cents thereafter.

For Monday and Tuesday the Kinemacolor offering will be "Tested By Fire," a natural color picture and interesting drama, and "Life in a Maori Village," showing sunsets in Egypt. Both of these subjects have been carefully selected as the proper introduction of Kinemacolor. Then for Wednesday and Thursday the offering will be "The Scarlet Letter," a drama in three reels, that will be a drawing card, and the last two days of the week will show a comedy called "Other People's Children," in two reels, and "Beach Scenes Around New York." Each day there will be two first run regular standard pictures, selected from the Biograph, Vitagraph, Essanay, Selig, Edison, Lubin and Pathe studios. Kinemacolor can be seen nowhere else in Atlanta but at the Grand, and the first run black and whith pictures that are to be seen in connection with the natural color Kinemacolors will be shown first at the Grand before released to any other local picture theater.

The Lyric theater will reopen for the season on Monday, September 1, with a special matinee on Labor day, with Emma Bunting and her company as the attraction. The play which Miss Bunting will present is called "The Circus Girl," which was popular several years ago in London, England, and was also produced at Daly's theater, New York, under the title of "The Arabian Nights." The diminutive star will be seen in the title role, one that is said to fit her dainty personality to perfection.

Miss Bunting's popularity is so un*questioned in Atlanta that her many* admirers will undoubtedly be delighted at the announcement of her coming engagement. As on former occasions the leading man of the company is Mr. George Whitaker, while others in the cast will be Louis Dean, Jack Ball, Eva Sargent, Walter Woodall, Charles Howson and Virginia Hadley. In addition to the holiday matinee on Monday, the regular ones of Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday will prevail.

Interest is being shown in the engagement of the Jewell Kelley company which begins tomorrow at the Bijou, presenting the most popular and enjoyable comedy-dramas and melodramas of today.

The sale of seats commenced Thursday morning with a rush and indications point to a capacity house for the opening performance which will enable theatergoers to get acquainted with the company and size up the merits of the respective players.

The engagement will begin with a matinee Monday afternoon. The Monday night performance will be an event as on this occasion ladies will be admitted free, provided each lady is accompanied by an escort holding a paid 50-cent ticket to be purchased before 6 o'clock Monday afternoon.

No better play could have been chosen for the first week than "Her Fatal Shadow," as it is not only a strong drama in which much comedy is introduced but it also permits scenic effects that will give the story a setting most elaborate.

Of the company much is expected and the roster of names includes players that have won friends among local theatergoers. Jewell Kelley is a prime favorite. He will be assisted by Richard Mandell, Rose Morris, Grace Webber, Thomas McDonough, Clare Summers, Marie Claire, Earl Higley and Eddie Black.

Mr. Eddie Black is too well known to the theatergoers of Atlanta to require an introduction. He originally came to Atlanta with the Jewell Kelley company and during that company's long run won for himself a general favorite. In the opening play Mr. Black will have his star part of "Jim," the country boy, and will execute one of those specialty or vaudeville stunts for which he is famous. Eddie Black is a success in whatever he undertakes, and he will add many friends and admirers to his long list, when the Bijou opens.

During the Atlanta engagement there will be a change of bill every week and the choice of plays will be largely in the hands of patrons of the Bijou. Thtatergoers are invited to send to the management a list of plays they would like to have presented and the play getting the largest number of votes will be produced as quickly as possible. This will give every patron of the house an opportunity to see their favorite bill and is sure to make the engagement of the Jewell Kelley company an immense success.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 2:30, and the night performances at 8:30. Seats may be reserved for any night a week ahead at the Bijou box office.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

The Savoy theater for Monday in offering "The Beaten Path" has again distinguished itself by producing a feature that is par excellence from the viewpoint of scenic splendor, artistic producing and, most superior acting.

Miss Barbara Tennant has again demonstrated her talent as a photoplay artist and her interpretation of the part of Barbara Hall will undoubtedly bring forth many laudatory remarks from the patrons who have learned to love this popular idol.

That no expense has been spared in the production of this most intensely interesting picture is most apparent, when the first scenes have been reviewed.

The photoplay deals with a dispute over a boundary line of adjoining estates of two wealthy men, leading to a family feud which results in death, ruin and disgrace.

The Vaudette offers another week of feature photo plays. On Monday Warren Kerrigan, the popular idol of many theater patrons, is featured in "For the Love of the Flag," a two-reel American. During the week, a two-reel Broncho, "The Madcap," and a two-reel Kay-Bee, "The Green Shadow," will be shown.

Jack Lamey and Joe Coombs, Atlanta's favorites, will offer the best in character and harmony singing and with the organ recitals daily, give the patrons of this house a week of rare enjoyment.

The Alcazar springs a little surprise for the patrons of the movies in offering Howard Winburn, the pianist that everybody knows, assisted by Joseph Mullen in a musical novelty act, a melange of everything from ragtime to grand opera. Special scenery has been arranged for this act. With the usual *good pictures the offering of this the*ater commends it to all.

Owing to the success of the talented Miss Anna Von Hoffman, the grand opera prima donna, the Montgomery has prevailed on this gifted singer to remain another week. At the afternoon performances Miss Hoffman will confine herself to the lighter class of music and in the evening will render the more difficult operas.

"PANSY" MAGILL'S HEALTH IS STEADILY IMPROVING

The many friends of "Pansy" Magill, the efficient and popular secretary of the Southeastern Tariff association, who has been an invalid several years, will be glad to know that his health is improving.

WANT $150 REWARD OFFERED FOR SLAYER

Meriwether County Asks It for Capture of Deputy Sheriff's Murderer

A request from the authorities of Meriwether county was received at the executive department at the capitol Saturday, asking that a reward of $150 be offered for the capture of the negro slayer of Deputy Sheriff L. C. Marchman, of that county.

Walter Brewster is the negro slayer. He was under arrest and going with Marchman to Greenville when he passed by his home. The negro asked Marchman to allow him to go into his house to tell his family good-by. His request was readily granted.

The negro then slipped around the side of the house after securing his shotgot and, creeping around a corner, emptied both barrels into the unsuspecting deputy's back.

Missouri National Egg-Laying Contest

Five Hens Pass the 200 Egg Mark in Eight and One-half Months—Two Hens Ahead of Lady Showyou's Record of Last Lear—Is the Hottest Month Experienced in Many Years—The Extreme Heat is Causing the Egg Yield and Causing the Hens to Molt Earlier Than Usual—Some Interesting Results of the Contest and the Feeding Test.

While five hens have passed the 200 egg mark in eight and a half months and two of them have thus far surpassed the record of Lady Showyer for last year, the extreme heat for the entire month has been telling on the hens, causing them to moult earlier than usual and cutting the egg yield. The thermometer registered as high as 105 degrees in the contest houses at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, of one day, a time of day when it usually begins to get cooler. In some other styles of houses it registered as high as 109 and 110 degrees. You can imagine how a hen must suffer when confined in a tray pen not on a day like this, even if kept there only long enough to lay. We are surprised that they have done as well as they have. This continued extreme hot weather is unusual for this section. Hens suffer as much from hot weather in summer as from cold weather in winter.

The total number of eggs laid for the eight and one-half months amounts to 80,073 eggs. This makes an average of 118 eggs for each hen, good, bad and indifferent. The yield for the month was 9,687 eggs. The average for each breed up to date is as follows:

50 Langshan hens average	132 eggs each
30 Minorca hens average	124 eggs each
30 Ancona hens average	122 eggs each
120 Leghorn hens average	119 eggs each
120 Wyandotte hens average	117 eggs each
60 R. I. Red hens average	111 eggs each
90 Orpington hens average	110 eggs each
120 Plymouth Rock hens average	106 eggs each

There is nothing startling about these records, but we think this a very good record. It is not the sensational which we are looking for in this contest, but the true, let the records be what they may. If the hens did no better and did not lay another egg, the lowest average hen has already laid twenty-six eggs more in eight and a half months than the average Missouri farm hen lays in twelve months.

The silver cup for the best record for July was won by Mrs. Daisy Rose, of Rock Dove, Ark., on her pen of Anconas with 210 eggs. The R. C. White Leghorns, pen 10, were only one egg behind them. The remarkable thing about the records for the last few months is the manner in which a pen of Black Minorca hens is laying. Half or more of the hens are about three years old, and they have gradually crawled up to fourth place. Buff Wyandottes also went to third place this month. One pen of Buff Wyandottes from Vermont contains the leading hen, and the third pen of Buff Wyandottes from Missouri contains the third highest individual in the contest. Only seven hens laid in the English pen of S. C. White Leghorns and one died, but still they made a small gain over the other pens.

The ten highest pen records for eight and a half months are as follows:

Pen 2, S. C. White Leghorns, England	1,686 eggs
Pen 19, Silver Wyandottes, Iowa	1,418 eggs
Pen 26, Buff Wyandottes, Missouri	1,387 eggs
Pen 1, Black Minorcas, Iowa	1,386 eggs
Pen 1, Anconas, Missouri	1,385 eggs
Pen 20, White Wyandottes, Arkansas	1,376 eggs
Pen 57, Black Langshans, Missouri	1,369 eggs
Pen 30, Buff Wyandottes, Vermont	1,368 eggs
Pen 9, S. C. Brown Leghorns, Missouri	1,351 eggs

POULTRY FEED

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., April 19, 1913

Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Gentlemen:—My neighbor, Mr Townsen, formerly of Georgia, has a most beautiful flock of poultry. I never saw healthier, thriftier birds in my life, and the way he gets eggs is a sight. He tells me he feeds nothing but Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, and that he would not think of using anything else. Of course he keeps his premises clean, and his hens free of insects; so do I, and while I also use a mash, as yet my poultry do not look so well nor have I been able to get results that my neighbor does. Hence I have arrived at the conclusion that your Mash-Aunt Patsy—must be superior, or at least contains something in its manufacture that other mashes do not possess, and perhaps it is this special ingredient that causes the results. Any way I have decided to try it and will thank you to either advise where I can buy it in California, or else make me a price for shipment direct from Memphis in ton lots.

Your early reply will oblige.

MRS. A. B. ADAMS.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

REAL HOME PLACES

Every REAL HOME-SEEKER (by that we mean a person who is not satisfied with a house on a bare lot 50x100 feet, which is the average city lot), who wants a comfortable house on a big nicely shaded lot, say 100x200 feet in size, one that is large enough for a nice garden, plenty of room for a cow, chickens, or anything in the world the owner wants—

He finds this sort of a place once in a while. It is usually a long way out from town and the price is such, as a rule, that decides this problem for him; that is—sends him back to his 50x100 feet lot.

We have several places that would please this sort of person. Just off Stewart avenue, only 15 minutes' ride from town, convenient to both Stewart avenue and West End car lines, new city schools and large city park, we have a new six-room cottage, on lot 90x200. The lot next to it is 90x200, which can be bought for $900; the bungalow for $3,750, on reasonable terms. This gives you as nice a home place as you could wish for, 100x200 feet in size, for about $4,500.

We also offer, just off East Lake drive, on the Scottdale car line, only 20 minutes' ride from town, a new 7-room bungalow, situated on a pretty pine grove, on lot 100x200 feet. This can be bought for $3,000; reasonable terms.

ALTOLOMA

ALTOLOMA is situated just beyond Decatur, on the Georgia railroad and the Stone Mountain electric car line, both of which cut through the very heart of ALTOLOMA, distances of nearly 1,800 feet. ALTOLOMA is on the "New York to Atlanta Highway." ALTALOMA has three churches. ALTOLOMA has a handsome public school building, which has just been completed at a cost of $8,000. ALTOLOMA is close to Agnes Scott College and the new Lamar College. ALTOLOMA contains more than 350 beautiful lots, ranging in size from QUARTER-ACRE TRACTS to FIVE-ACRE TRACTS. Many of these tracts have running water. ALTOLOMA is unusually high and dry and enjoys perfect drainage throughout.

STONE MOUNTAIN ELECTRIC CAR LINE IS FAST NEARING COMPLETION.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company is extending the Decatur car line to Stone Mountain as fast as money, men and material can accomplish the work. It will be only a few weeks until this company will be operating its cars to ALTOLOMA, and just as soon as the first car makes its initial trip the price of every lot remaining unsold in ALTOLOMA will advance TEN TO THIRTY PER CENT. Charles A. Wickersham, the Purchaser of a Large Peachtree Road Corner, Will Build a Residence on It—Euclid Avenue, Highland View, and Other Realty Sales—Places Rented—Interesting Details of Emergency Currency

No very important real estate announcements were made yesterday, but there were some news items of considerable interest.

It became known that Charles A. Wickersham, president of the Atlanta and West Point railroad, was the purchaser of the large corner at Peachtree road and Piedmont avenue, the sale of which was announced recently.

Mr. Wickersham, who now lives in College Park, will improve the corner with a residence.

Homer A. McAfee, sales manager of the Haas & McIntyre agency, who made this sale, also made the sale from Mrs. Louis Gholstin to Julius L. DeGive of a lot on Ponce de Leon avenue, in Druid Hills, announcement of which was also recently made.

EUCLID AVENUE SALE.

The Burdett Realty company has sold for W. A. Loomis to Mrs. Martha A. Bigham, No. 254 Euclid avenue, a two-story, eight-room residence, for a consideration of $9,000.

The size of the lot is 50x165, and it begins 50 feet east of Colquitt avenue.

OTHER SALES.

M. C. Kiser's agency has sold for the Kelly-Neesely company to E. L. Echols No. 87 Highland View, a six-room house on a lot 50x150, for $5,000 and for R. J. Ingram to D. R. Matthews No. 185 Glenwood avenue, a six-room cottage on a lot 50x165, for $3,950.

It was the Kiser agency which sold for I. F. Bradley to a client Nos. 19-21 Barnett street, a three-story building, for $37,500, and 685 acres of land in Coweta county, announcement of which was made some time ago.

Homer McAfee of the Haas & McIntyre agency, has sold for Captain E. P. Winston to J. G. Puett No. 62 Boulevard terrace, a neight-room two-story house for $4,800.

MONEY DISTRIBUTION.

It was an interesting dispatch from Washington yesterday which told of the nature of the distribution of the crop-moving funds to Georgia banks.

Atlanta will receive a little in excess of $750,000, exactly how much is not disclosed. The rest of the state will get about $1,000,000 additional.

Real estate is bound to feel the good effects of this influx of currency, and, as far as loans are concerned, it is feeling it in advance. Money is not only easier to obtain, but at a lower rate.

Quite a large sum was borrowed last week to finance a considerable building operation, which will be announced within a week or so. It is doubtful whether the money could have been secured thirty or sixty days ago for such purposes. Money is not only more plentiful, but the rates are easier.

Cotton is coming now all over Georgia. In south Georgia the season is almost in full swing. Around Macon, in central Georgia, ginning has started.

The price at present is 11 1-2 cents. This represents more profit than usual, for, following the squeeze last fall, the farmers set in to make an economical crop.

This year's crop will not only turn loose new funds, but will result in the payment of old debts carried over from last fall.

It is to facilitate the movement of the Georgia crop that the government has advanced money to the banks. This money will be used for no other purpose, but it necessarily follows that the banks will be free to devote their ordinary funds to general business. In addition, the government is a competitor that hoarded private funds can't go up against. There is bound to be more and more loosening up.

Not Too Seasick to Eat

New York Sun.

In these days when the high cost of living is so much in the public mind, when the bills of the butcher, the grocer and the coal man threaten to disrupt the family happiness and bring the sheriff knocking at the door, it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship company to provide the necessities of life to the hordes of passengers who cross and recross the Atlantic. The annual statement of the North German Lloyd for 1912, just issued, throws some interesting light on the subject, and may possibly make one's own monthly statement seem small in comparison. Last year the company's bill for provisions alone was $4,920,000, while during the same period the coal man was paid $7,376735 for 1,758,740 tons of coal which were shoveled into the ships' furnaces during the twelve months. For these two items alone—provisions and coal—the company paid $12,296,735, and the greater part of this fortune dropped into the coffers of Uncle Sam.

In our household expenditures we are not likely to pay much attention to the cost of preserves, and yet the North German Lloyd spent $255,740, over one-fourth million dollars, for these sweets during the year. The bill for fresh vegetables amounted to $1,511,110, while for "sundries," including bread, flour, spices fruits and the thousand and one articles that are used in the kitchen, the company paid $1,688,890.

More potatoes were consumed during the year than any other article, the total amount having been 17,875,873 pounds. Flour ranked next with 6,313,-152 pounds, fresh beef third with 5,769,-123 pounds, while the bread was fourth with 2,252,083 pounds. The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,271,059 oranges and lemons, 707,625 pounds of onions and 983,802 pounds of salt. They used 465,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk, to say nothing of 14,918 bottles of fresh cream. It was necessary to provide 19,119,242 pounds of ice to keep things cool and 12,097 boxes of matches for fires and "lights." In the bakeshops 83,651 pounds of yeast were used, while the quantity of butter necessary during the year was 1,066,057 pounds.

Of wines, Rhein and Moselle were most popular, heading the list with 112,-211 bottles, as against 35,987 bottles of champagne. Beer, of course, was the favorite beverage, 302,321 bottles having been consumed in addition to 1,720,624 liters of beer in barrels, a liter equal to about one quart.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WITH September only a few days away plans are being made for the fall which closely follows.

The first of the summer homes to be closed for the season is that of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Pappenheimer on the Chattahoochee river, a wood brown house set in a forest of beautiful trees that climb the hill back of the house and go down in cool shade to the banks of the river in front.

Mr. and Mrs. Pappenheimer have opened their town house on Ponce de Leon avenue.

A Ponce de Leon home which is the center of much delightful entertaining is that of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson which will be closed this winter, Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson being among those who have taken apartments in the Ponce de Leon, the handsome new apartments which, with the Georgian Terrace just opposite, forms a sort of towering entrance to the wide street as it leaves Peachtree.

The Atkinson summer home at North Hatley, Canada, will be closed earlier than usual this year, Mrs. Atkinson and Miss May Atkinson to return in October.

Others who will make their home at the Ponce de Leon this winter are Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Elsas, Mr. and Mrs. D. Rhodes.

The wedding will be a quiet one solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Alice Muse Thomas, at 5 o'clock, the ceremony to be witnessed by only the family and a few intimate friends.

The first wedding of September will be that of Miss Sallie Cobb Hull to Mr. Philip Weltner, which will take place on the third at the North Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. C. E. Weltner, the groom's father, to officiate, assisted by the pastor, Rev. Richard Orme Flinn.

The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Marion McHenry Hull, on West Peachtree street.

To Discard Freckles, Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

(From Femhine World.)

The use of creams on the face sometimes causes hair to grow. You can avoid the risk of acquiring superfluous hair by avoiding cosmetics and using mercolized wax instead. There is nothing better for any condition of the skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, over-red, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and apply nightly like cold cream, erasing in the morning with soap and water. It takes a week or so to complete the transformation.

The ideal wrinkle eradicator is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost instantaneous results.—(Advt.)

Monday---a Display of New Wooltex Suits

In which you can see the most advanced style ideas in fabrics, colorings and embellishments.

There is a great range of choice of materials, many of the smartest styles being made up of smooth finished cloths, while others of equal style value have been developed from rough fabrics.

Great variety in color effects marks the season's display, and one is not confined to the dull and somber hues usually found in tailored suits. There are rich, beautiful mahogany, plum, wistaria, bronze green, taupe, russet, blues and leather.

Bright colors appear on some as trimming on collar and cuffs.

Coats are Quite Long in Back

Cutaway style—long in the back and quite short in front, and the sharp slope gives a most graceful and becoming line to almost any figure.

There is a pronounced tendency toward more freedom in the lines of suits. Coat sleeve are larger, the skirts somewhat fuller than in recent years.

Notice, too, the skirts have the new knee drapery gathered into narrow plaits at each side of the skirt, giving the correct peg-top effect.

New for Autumn--- Women's Afternoon and Evening Gowns

Already they are being chosen and fitted in our dress salons.

They are new and irresistible. So new that some of them have just gone into the little white cabinets, to be shown for the first time Monday. So irresistible that they, like others, will go as soon as they are shown.

Almost every style has a high girdle of some rich velvet. Many have the upped part of the bodice of transparent stuffs, marquisette or chiffon embroidered, and opening over lace and net chemisettes.

Sashes are plaited; some dresses have tunics or hip draperies, showing all that remains of the pannier which threatened two years ago.

It is interesting to see how the designers are dealing with draperies—the tiered skirt of combined lace and chiffon, or all lace, the girdles and what piquant little touches they add.

Colors, too, have something of autumn richness about them—while the light or white evening gowns have bright flashes of color in sash or girdle or garniture.

Prices are, $35 to $100.

SOME OF ITS STRONG FEATURES

Some of the distinctive features of Washington Seminary, Atlanta, that commend it strongly to parents seeking the best in the education of their daughters, are:

1. The exceptionally beautiful and complete equipment in grounds, buildings, furnishings and school appliances of all kinds—all on the scale of the most elegant private homes.

2. The limited boarding department, which enables the principals to make the school in reality a home for the students.

3. The personal nature of the instruction, secured by dividing classes into small sections, averaging about twelve girls to the class.

4. The OPEN AIR class rooms, connecting with each recitation room, used in all seasonable weather. The school work is thus done actually out-of-doors most of the year—a fine health feature.

5. Physical culture and a thorough Domestic Science course form a part of the required curriculum.

6. Its work accredited at the Class A colleges.

Huge banks of ferns, palms and white lilies formed a long aisle that terminated in a beautiful arch of ivy, the cool green of the foliage making an effective setting for the bridal party. Just over the arch were double hearts of white roses from which was suspended a wedding bell of white roses.

Misses Lettie Denney and Evelyn Johnson, both sisters of the bride and groom, served punch from a booth of green and white decorations with mirrored walls. Garlands of ivy were hung from each corner and caught up in the center by a wheel of smilax that held white wax candles.

Before the entrance of the bridal party, Miss Azalee Vaughan, assisted by Misses Bertha Mae Thomas and Ruth Teasley with violins, played 'Angels Dream,' after which Miss Elizabeth Ray sang "O, Promise Me."

The bride was lovely in a gown of white crepe de chine and shadow lace with seed pearls. She wore a peek-a-boo hat of white lace and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The only ornament was a necklace of pearls.

"Know-How-Itiveness Stick-to-it-Iveness"

These two words embrace the motto of the most successful manufacturing drug man in the country.

He began using them after a careful study of the best means of reaching the consumer and interesting the retailer. He knew how.

And he stuck to it.

He has got rich in a few years, and he has the most loyal following of retailers of any manufacturer in the world.

The retailers swear by him, because he has made money for them—and taught them how to sell goods.

That manufacturer and his retailers all over the continent are planning one of the greatest co-operative advertising campaigns ever undertaken.

And newspapers like THE JOURNAL will be the medium used in that campaign.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 23.—There isn't another resort in the country like White Sulphur Springs. There isn't another place in the country where things happen that happen here. Where could one find a hotel register where a prominent railroad official gives a morning german for a company of three hundred friends, when champagne flows more freely than the famous White Sulphur water at the midday luncheon which is served during the intermission, where ten of the most prominent habitues decide to give an exclusive evening cotillion, subscribe five hundred dollars apiece, have the drawing room, ballroom and grill, which are reserved exclusively for the party, decorated with a couple of thousand dollars' worth of flowers, send out individual engraved invitations and give out souvenir favors of spangled gauze and ivory fans from the most famous jewelry house in America, with a seated supper that would rival a Lucullan feast, where a prominent society leader from Atlanta gives his daughter and the girls from Georgia a send off with a three hours' entertainment to the tune of a thousand dollars an hour, starts the affair with a lawn fete and finishes it with a tango contest in the ballroom after a cotillion, the favors including lampshades from Paris and platinum-set moonstones?

White Sulphur, which in days gone by was noted for the magnificence of its entertainments, has outdone itself this summer and the past week has eclipsed anything at Palm Beach in the height of its season. Those who are spending their first summer and have been luckly enough to receive bids to the various functions which have made the week the gayest in the history of the place, have marvelled and haven't ceased to wonder yet at the prodigality of the brilliant entertainments, many of which are given by the southern sojourners, with Atlantians vying for first honors.

Probably the most attractive affair ever given here was the subscription cotillion of Monday night when the hosts included Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, who was the chairman of the committee, and the Messrs. Doughty Manley, also of Atlanta; Billups Phinizy, of Athens, Ga.; Marion Whaley, of Charleston, S. C.; Garrett B. ...all, Joe Lane Stearn, Henry W. Anderson and John Aiken Branch, of Richmond, and Mr. H. Snowden Marshall and Dr. John Herndon French, of New York.

The Messrs. Paine and Stern alternated in leading the figures which were unusually beautiful. During the seated supper which was served in the grill at midnight before tangoing, one-stepping and "fish-walking" were resumed in the ballroom, toasts were drunk to the leaders and the hosts who sat at a circular table in the middle of the room with Madames Paine, Phinizy, Wall, Whaley, Marshall, Manley and French, while the one hundred couples who danced, and the honor guests, numbering fifty, who were invited to see the affair, sat in congenial groups at small tables.

Thomas Nelson Page, who arrived last Friday to attend the annual morning german given by George W. Stevens, for his daughter, Miss Helen Stevens and her guests, the Misses Alice Young, Mary Moution and Nan Godwin, was present. Miss Mary Custis Lee came in with Mr. and Mrs. Decatur Axtell and joined the chief justice and Mrs. White. Others invited included Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John Kerr Branch, Colonel and Mrs. James Ransom Branch, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Blain Elkins, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Cabaniss, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun, Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mrs. Leon Dure, Mrs. Everett Colgan, Mrs. John Somerville, Mrs. John Chisholm, the Misses Whiting, Stevens, Mooulton, Young, Loring, Orme, Haywood, Hearin, Branch, Allen, Bobb, Ross, Kohlsaat, Burke, Ellis, Calhoun, Crall, Grant, Hamilton, Nott, Phinizy, Preston, Walters, Godwin, Foss, Lewis, Hathaway, Thom, Higgins, Helm, Roach, Hager, and the Messrs. Hanewinckel, Ross, Hubbell, Gray, Cochran, Scovil, Blandy, Dunlop, Lewis, Haywood, Sams, Robinson, Ridgeley, Turner, Helm, Rosenbaum, Hunter, Bell, Nottingham, Gilmore, Wilmer, Stone, Hearin, Capito, Eskew, Lambert, Rumbolt, Lory, Stevens, Janney, Breckenridge, Henderson, Boyd, Royster, MacMullan and many others.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, of Atlanta entertained their daughter, Miss Margaret Grant, and the Georgia girls here, including the Misses Harriet Calhoun, Katherine Ellis, Martina Burke, Martha Sue Phinizy, Nell Phinizy and Marguerite Wright at a lawn fete, which was followed by a cotillion where many beautiful favors were distributed. A buffet tea was served on the lawn under markees, before the company, which numbered nearly two hundred, adjourned to the ball room where dancing continued until long after sunset. The decorations were American beauty roses and palms which were banked high enough to obscuure the walls, and screen the musicians. Mrs. James H. Preston, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Frank Ellis, of Atlanta, assisted Mrs. Grant at the favor table. Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, E. Pendleton Turner, of Washington, and Jo Lane Sterne, of Rishmond, led the cotillion figures.

All the prominent southerners here were invited to the Grant party.

The morning german given by Mrs. Stevens for the Misses Stevens, Young, Moulton and Godwin was very attractive. The invitation list numbered very nearly three hundred, while only about half danced in the german, while the others occupied chairs arranged in semi-circles around the ball room.

At the annual fancy dress dance for juniors on Tuesday evening the youngsters from Atlanta made a big hit. Some of those whose costumes attracted attention were Rankin Manley, clown, Doughty Manley, a daisy, Frances Ellis, morning star; Pamnie Manley and Valeria Manley, ballet girls, Douglas Gay Paine, a daisy.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

FINDING the picturesque in our Atlanta streets is what Miss Virginia Woolley is doing and is something no other artist here has before attempted.

In the big studio in the Wesley Memorial building the young artist looks out over a waving sea of green trees and the clear north light shines in the slanting windows on canvasses which show the course of Miss Woolley's travels and study, years of hard work which have made it possible for her to find the beauty that is all around us, but for which few have eyes.

The canvasses are charming views of Cape Cod, where Miss Woolley studied with Mr. C. W. Hawthorne a painter whose name is beginning to count for big things in American art, sketches from Holland—quaint interiors and stolid Dutch faces—the colorful canals and old doorways of Venice; interesting towns of France and much of her beloved Paris with still life studies original in treatment and vivid in color.

Of special interest, however, are the new things she is doing, things in which her inspiration has been found in our crooked streets, tall buildings, sunny spaces in the parks and interesting bits in the residential portions.

One study made from the balcony of the Aragon looks south down Peachtree with the Candler building in the foreground, and farther down, the shadowed outlines of the different bank buildings, which show from that viewpoint.

With her pictures about her and her ambition urging her to work and effort, Miss Woolley stands as a sort of prophet of the brush foretelling Atlanta's possibilities from an artistic standpoint and proclaiming the beauty of her present assets.

HELEN Keller's address at the National Conservation exposition on September 30 in Knoxville will be one of the features of the conservation meeting.

The wonderful story of what this blind girl accomplished despite the triple handicap of deafnes, dumbness and blindness has made absorbing reading in the magazines and papers for a number of years; and many who have never witnessed her skill nor heard her talk will welcome the opportunity to hear her.

Lacking three of her five senses, Miss Keller has yet graduated with honor from Radcliffe, and has acquired the art of speech. She, who was deaf, dumb and blind from infancy, will deliver one of the main addresses at the exposition, and her teacher, Mrs. Albert Macy, who will accompany her, will tell the story of Miss Keller's struggle to learn.

ART lovers, too, will find something of special interest at the Knoxville exposition, as an unusually fine display will be shown. Particularly interesting will be the exhibition of Mrs. George Vanderlip's art treasures, many of which will be sent from Baltimore for the exposition.

THE house party given by Mr. and Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown in honor of their niece, Miss Hildreth Burton Smith, closed Saturday with a dinner dance at the Wambek, one of the gayest and most interesting hotels in that wonderful White Mountain country in which motorists have discovered "the ideal tour."

Mr. and Mrs. Brown's camp is at Rangeley Lakes and they have given a series of parties during the visit of their niece this summer, the last being that at which a number of Atlantians were entertained, the party including Miss Lula Dean Jones, Miss Marion Goldsmith, Miss Passie May Ottley, Miss Nancy Prince, Mr. Gabriel Solomon, Mr. Tracy Dillard, of New York; Mr. Langdon Thaxter, Mr. Downing Brown, Mr. W. R. Brown, of Portland, Mr. Kilburn Gordon, of Washington; Hugh Gordon and Mr. and Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown.

The French guides led the way to numbers of interesting trips into the heart of the mountains; there were swimming, canoeing, fishing and all the outdoor sports which are features of a White Mountain camp.

The return from the camp was made by canoes and motor boats, the party being met at the head of the lake by motors for the ride to Berlin, where they were guests of their hosts before the dinner dance at the Wambek, which closed their stay.

Miss Burton Smith will remain with her aunt some time longer, the girls in the party to make a number of interesting visits before returning south. Miss Lula Dean Jones will be the guest of her aunt in Binghamton, N. Y.; Miss Passie May Ottley will join Mrs. Albert Heywood at her summer place on the Massachusetts coast, going later to visit Miss Marjorie Brown at their summer home in Ohio; Miss Nancy Prince will be with friends at their cottage at Deal, N. J., going afterward to Paterson, where she will be until the middle of September, and Miss Marion Goldsmith will spend several weeks at Atlantic City, chaperoned by Mr. Edward Hall, of Morristown, and Mrs. Hall, formerly Miss Charles Owens.

Needed Both at Once

"Liniment and cement?" repeated the pharmacist, puzzled by the unique order.

"Going to use 'em at the same time?"

College Men Advocate Suffrage

At last week's meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association in Carnegie library, Mrs. M. L. McLendon introduced several young college men, the first speaker being Mr. Victor of Atlanta. He began by saying that he had not always believed in suffrage but had been converted to it by reason. That suffrage was not the inalienable of right of either man or woman, nor was it a privilege. Much time had been lost by the suffragists in combatting the theory that the purity of the home would be lost if women had the ballot, and by other fallacious arguments. We, men should cease to beg for votes. If they would demand them they would be benefactors.

The next speaker was Mr. Hewitt Chambers, a young student of the University of Virginia, who testified that he was a co-operator of women's suffrage as were many of his fellow students. That dwomen did not need sympathy but assistance and that is what the Men's Suffrage leagues were doing. That the opposition's idea that women wanted to change every thing must be fought against, as all they wished to do was to carry out certain improvements along moral lines which they could not do without the ballot. He hoped Georgia would be the first southern state to get the ballot.

He was followed by Mr. eGorge Baker Mayer, of Cleveland, O., who is an active organizer of Men's Suffrage leagues. These leagues were for the purpose of giving money and publicity to Women's Suffrage. That meetings were held in the colleges and in halls. That they obtained speakers, among whom they were fortunate to eGt Miss Jane Addams to lecture for the benefit of the public who know little about this great movement. That the men did the "hustling." Leagues had been organized at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and many other well known universities and colleges. In Philadelphia there are four.

A rising vote of thanks was given these young speakers by the audience for their interesting and instructive talks.

Dr. Grace Kirkland, formerly of Atlanta, but now of California, gave an amusing talk on the feeling the antis have in California when the "rascals" in their party now fear that some matter of importance in politics is pending. They almost collapse and ask each other, "What are the women going to do to us now?" Many men who were against it now are glad for the good citizen knows that whenever a good measure is wanted to be carried, they have the women's vote to carry it through.

Nothing terrible had happened because women could vote. They meet in their parlors and discuss what is wanted. They go to the polss, many escorted by their husbands who formerly were against it. Instead of the voting place being in the back of some garage it is now in some school house. Many women vote contrary to the other members of the family, and to their employer. There was no sex antagonism which was a good example for the daughters.

The most gratifying event that has happened to the association was the tending to is of the Georgia State association's charter by Mr. L. G. Grossman, its legal advisor. It is the first charter of its kind in Georgia. In delivering it Mr. Grossman paid a beautiful and deserved tribute to Mrs. McLendon for the noble and untiring work she had done for the cause of women.

At the close of he meeing Mrs. McLendon announced that there would be a state-wide rally for three days at Taf hall in Sepember. They will be a suffrage meeting in the hall of representatives on Monday evening, September 1, to which the public is invited.

"The Land of the Sky"

The principal hotels in "The Land of the Sky" have been tested to their capacity during the past week by the happy crowds of excursionists that have poured into the country from all points, but notwithstanding an excursion of people exceeding the records of all previous season by more than 25 per cent, the entertainment facilities hav eproven of such an elastic nature that it would be difficult to estimate th ecapacity of the country in this respect. Private houses, that on no other occasion are open to visitors, throw open their portals to the stranger within the gates and when pressure demands it, and everything and everybody seems imbued with a spirit of cordiality and hearty welcome truly typical of a warm hearted and hospitable people.

The weather has been delightful and continues so with light cooling showers, and a steady mountain breeze that invigorates and fairly compels exercise. Entertainments following in rapid succession, and the towns present scenes of th eutmost animation and bustle.

Grove Park Inn contains a large number of guests drawn from as far west as Kansas City and representing a majority of the states in the union. Toxaway Inn is crowded and overflowing. Battery Park, the Manor, Margo Terrace, the Langren, Highland Lake and the Heidleberg at Flat Rock, White Sulphur Springs, and Eagles Nest at Waynesville, etc., are crowded but still seem to be able to take care of new comers.

A bureau of information has been maintained for the past week at the city ticket office of the Southern railway at Asheville, where the officials of the railroad, as well as representatives of the Greater Western North Carolina association have been of material assistance in securing accommodation for those who did not make this provision in advance. Similar bureaus are in operation all over the territory and none need worry over the possibility of finding himself homeless upon arrival in "The Land of the Sky."

The following have registered during the week at Grove Park Inn: Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Mansfield, Mrs. G. L. Wood, Miss Annabelle Wood, Dr. and Mrs. John White and Miss Gladys White, Mr. Bruce White, Rev. Charles W. Daniel, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Scales and Mr. H. J. Scales. Misses Ida and Francis Winship, Miss L. Brumby, Mr. H. H. Birch, of Atlanta; Mrs. and George H. Baldwin, Miss M. V. Stiles, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Elliott, Mr. R. C. Harrison, of Savannah; Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Tarpley and J. E. Tarpley, of Albany.

At the Manor: Mrs. W. M. Davidson, Savannah.

The putting contests have become very popular at the Manor, and the ladies' golf cup was captured at the last contest by Mrs. Thompson Frazier, Mr. S. B. Girdler winning the gentleman's prize.

At the Battery Park hotel: Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Roberts and family, Mr. Charles C. Hicks and family, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd W. McRae, Atlanta; Mr. H. C. McFadden, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Carlington, Mr. John Read, Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Ashley, Douglas.

Bisland Stars During Defeat Of Billikens

Dent Pitched Grand Ball in Futting Crackers in Second Place—Joe Agler Had 21 Putouts and Bisland Accepted 16 Chances at Shortstop

Bisland to Agler was a most common game between Atlanta and Montgomery there with twenty-one putouts at shortstop, and when Bisland handled his fifteen assists and one putout, and Agler added even a grouchy man would have to admit that there was nothing to it but for Atlanta win. And Elliott Dent did the twirling. The score was 8 to 1.

It was "Bisland day" and this lad was given the most rousing welcome accorded any ball player on the local ball yard. He pulled down many hard drives and turned them into sensational assists, got a couple of smashing hits, walked once and once was thrown out. He was "ever present on every play that was made to him, even starring when it came to running the bases.

Running a close second to Bisland was Joe Agler. While Joe had many easy chances it is real good ball playing for any first sacker to stand by and hold to the ball for twenty-one putouts. Some of the throws were low and some high, but they all looked alike to Joe.

Bisland's fifteen assists and Joe's twenty-one putouts are right near the record in these two departments of play, being especially good when you consider that neither made a bobble.

And the rooters were there. Something like 5,000 fans turned out and from the way they cheered you would have gained the idea that it was a college football game instead of a professional diamond battle. Bleachers and grand stand became a unit in cheering every pretty play and there were plenty. The fact that Atlanta was winning put them all in a good humor and it was then easy to cheer the good plays, but there was some work pulled which even a grouchy man would have appreciated.

DENT HAD SOMETHING.

Elliott Dent was given the task of putting the rackers in second place and he did the work nobly. Not a man did he walk, he allowed just five hits, drove out two hits himself and should have been credited with a shutout battle. He had the whole Montgomery club baffled and got better as the game progressed. It was just another case of Dent pitching his standard brand of ball that he has shown so often of late.

Curly Brown tried the come-back stunt and fared well until the sixth round, when he blew sky high and Carl Reid, a bush league star, recently acquired by Dobbs, had to be called in.

Albert Nixon debuted in right field for Atlanta and made a good showing. He played a drive to his territory rather badly, but more than made up for that with three hits and a neat throw to third base which cut off a runner.

This lead lasted just half an inning, when Bisland singled went to second on an error to third on a sacrifice and scored on a hit. In the sixth the game was put on ice when Agler hit safe, Smith sacrificed, Bisland walked and Manning errored. The six hits produced six runs. In the seventh another was added on Manning's error, Long's hit, a fielder's choice and Smith's sacrifice fly.

Manning and Wares pulled sensational fielding plays for the Billikens and staved off defeat during the early part of the game. Manning's catch off Welchonce's bat in the first round was a pippin and Wares did almost equally as well in the second when he gathered in Holland's line drive.

ATLANTA HAS HIT HARD; FIELDING A BIT ERRATIC

For the past week Atlanta has been leading the class of ball that will set the Cheney Mobile pennant claimants crazy when they visit the Cracker box. Billy Smith's boys have done no less than bat over three hundred for the week using the pill at the rate of .322 in the Birmingham series and .371 in the series with the Billikens.

In fielding they have not done so well as they did on the road. They have played no errorless games, but have got-ten away just the same. They won four out of seven, nuf sed.

In the field Atlanta showed a percentage of only .919 against Birmingham's .881, while in the series where in the second place laurels were wrested from the Billikens the Atlantians fielded .944 to Montgomery's .940.

Play for Davis & Freeman Trophy Brings Out Big Field of Stars

Sixty-four golfers qualified in the Davis and Freeman Cup Tourney Saturday afternoon on the East Lake club course, and from these four flights were formed.

All players qualified from scratch, but the regular club handicaps will prevail in the flights.

W. R. Tichenor turned in the lowest qualifying score making the course in eighty strokes. eGorge Adair was a close second with eighty-two and the other sixty-two qualified with scores ranging from eighty-four to one hundred twenty.

The play in the flights will start immediately and the first and second rounds must be completed by August 26, and the semi-finals by August 31. The finals in the first flight will be thirty-six holes, all other rounds will be eighteen holes.

This is the fifth time the Davis and Freeman trophy has been contested for by the local golfers. The beautiful cup becomes the permanent possession of the player winning it three times. As yet only one man has two legs on it. F. G. Byrd is the man and he was not entered in the present tourney. W. R. Tichenor won in 1912 and Hamilton Block in 1912. Both of these cracks have qualified, are in the first flight and are out to put another leg on the cup if possible. Tichenor qualified nine strokes better than Block.

CUBAN LOVES THE GAME

When any ambitious young man takes up a game for the pure love of the sport you can just put it down that he is to be a big success. He puts his whole heart into his work when he likes it and it is only a question of time before he is to be one of the stars in his class.

And this love for the game is just why Jacinto Calvo, the gentlemanly young Cuban recently with the Atlanta ball club, is some day to become a star at the national pastime just as is the case with Rafael Almeida and a few other Cuban ball play... who have lately broken into the game. You must love any game to be a success at it and the right kind of love for baseball is now in the heart of Jacinto Calvo.

The young Cuban who made so many friends during his short sojourn in Atlanta is a superior gentleman. He is of the very best people of Cuba and plays the game because he likes to run the bases, chase long drives and hurl the ball. It all has a certain fascination for him. He was among the very first to take it up when introduced in Cuba, and though not a star at the hitting game he has mastered the finer points of inside baseball in a comparatively short time and he is out there to pick up every pointer possible.

It was Clarke Griffith, the wily Washington manager, who first took a liking to Calvo and gave him a job. He was with the Washington club right up to the time he came to Atlanta a week ago. All the time he was sitting on the bench and he was learning. Griff is the kind who believes in giving them a chance to learn the game and right now he is confident that with a bit more training will develop Calvo into a good player.

Calvo was with Atlanta just two or three days before he suffered a broken bone in his left arm. This incapacitated him for further duty and Sunday he returns to Washington where he will watch the wind up of the American league race.

Atlanta was just as big a hit with Calvo as he was with the fans here. And he has already announced his intention of requesting Griffith to send him here for a trial in 1914. He is sure he can learn to bat and with improvement in this line he will be a good ball player.

COBB VS. JACKSON

Cobb, in the last two double-headers has batted over 500, getting five out of nine in Friday's frays and four out of seven in Saturday's making his total for the two days 9 out of 16. This has boosted Cobb above Jackson for the first time in many moons.

Jackson got only two out of three Friday and one Saturday he failed to hit in four times up.

TEN BATTLES DURING WEEK

Memphis and New Orleans Here for Many Games–Big Field Day With Memphis

Atlanta fans will certainly get their money's worth if they attend the games at Ponce de Leon park next week. There will be ten games in the six days, will mean four double-headers. Some menu for the hungry fans, and a glance at the schedule would make you think it a big week for the Crackers.

Monday Bill Burchardt will bring his braves over for four flings at the Crackers in three days. Memphis is playing hard to finish in the first division, but the Crackers are fighting equally hard for second place, with one eye on the pennant, so four good games will by the schedule.

After the series with Memphis the Crackers take on the Pelicans for three double-headers in as many days. The going will b good and hard in this series, the Crackers should give their system a good boost at the expense of the tail-enders.

BISLAND HAD 15 ASSISTS; JOE AGLER GOT 21 PUTOUTS

RIVINGTON BISLAND.

Rivington Bisland was right after the assist record on Saturday when he got away with fifteen chances without a bobble. And with all that assisting he got one put-out, bringing his chances for the day to sixteen without an error.

Never before this season has any Southern League infielder come within a mile of equalling this mark. Often there have been those who had something like a dozen or more chances, but for them to accept each is remarkable. And when you consider that many were of the hard kind the work is all the better. And Bisland copped off the afternoon by getting two hits in three times up and he also scored a couple of runs, making the game have the appearance of "Bisland Day."

The Cracker short fielder had a chance in every inning, but the first. In the second he threw out three batters, in the third he got one assist and a put-out, in the forth it was two assists, in the fifth one assist, in the sixth two assists, in the seventh one assist, in the eighth one more and in the ninth it was two.

JOE AGLER.

Joe Agler took a most peaceful stand at the first corner in Saturday's game and the way he handled the assists from his infielders was good to witness. Just twenty-one times he received the ball in time to get credit for a putout and this work beat any previous mark ever made by a first baseman in a game at the local diamond.

While many fans consider the work of a first baseman rather easy, it is not the case by any means. He has to handle low and high thrown balls, often being forced to jump high into the air to flag a bad heave and then come down on the bag. You have always got to keep your foot working for that old bag.

Welchonce with two putouts and Bisland, Holland, Nixon and Dunn with one each were the only other players to get credit for an assist. All of which showed Dent was working in the best form of the present season. e/

Mobile Looks To Be Winner; Atlanta Next

Six and One-Half Games a Mighty Big Lead With Such a Short Time to Go, Yet This May Be Overcome

While right now it looks that Mobile has won the 1913 Southern league baseball pennant it is by no means a certainty, for you can never tell when a club will blow and even the very best often fall down at the most critical stages of a game. There is just one big series that will figure in the final outcome and that is when the Gulls and Crackers get together for four battles. And such a state of affairs come to pass within the next eight days.

Right now the Mobile club has a lead of 6 1-2 games on the Atlanta crew and Mike Finn's bunch shows not the least sign of slowing up. In fact, it looks as if the team has taken on new life and is going as it did at the start of the season. Atlanta is also going most excellently, but when Mobile goes just as well there is but a very slim chance to do the overhauling stunt and Mobile must break before the Crackers can get out in front.

While it looks most evident that Mobile will win the flag it is a good bet that Atlanta will waltz to the end in second place. However, this is not so certain as is the winning of the flag by the Mobile Gulls. The Crackers' new lead hardly a game and over Montgomery, and it is going to require good playing to hold or increase this lead.

One big advantage enjoyed by the Crackers is the fact that the club is on home soil and all the boys have their heart in the game and are playing to win. Six wins in seven games during the past week clearly demonstrated that the team is out to get a high place in the standing and a repetition of this class of work during the next seven days will undoubtedly bring the outfit much closer to Mobile and get Mike Finn to worrying.

EASY GAMES COMING.

The ten games booked for next week should be rather easy sailing. The team should not find Memphis and New Orleans half hard, and it may be that the Gulls will decide to lose a few games. The Finn clan is on the road, and has to play mighty good ball to win out. At home it is much easier. All the players are more confident and have the fans with them.

Six and a half games with just two weeks to go is a mighty hard proposition, but Billy Smith and his team may be able to turn the trick. However, it is now a bit doubtful. It all depends upon the way the Mobile club keeps up, it being a foregone conclusion that the Crackers will go good.

But then a pennant is not all that there is in life. The Atlanta team is giving the fans a run for their money. Every time you go to the ball park you get a good article of ball, and just so long as this keeps up there will be no kicking. The team finished last in 1912 and a jump to second place this season is all good enough.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—New York made it a clean sweep over Chicago today, the visitors losing 3 to 2. Marquard had a slight edge on Smith, who tossed his game away in the fifth when he threw wild to first on a grounder into the hands by Schafer. Schafer took two bases, stole third, and scored on Fletcher's infield out. Evers and Zimmerman were put off the field in the seventh inning for nagging Umpire Rigler.

PIRATES TAKE TWO

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Pittsburg's hard hitting caused two defeats for Philadelphia here today by 10 to 5 and 13 to 8. In each game the home team knocked the opposing pitcher off the rubber in an early inning, but the visitors rallied at the bat and caused Manager Dooin to use four twirlers in each contest. In the first game Alexander's right hand was hurt by a drive off Gibson's bat in the second inning. Cooper lasted only one inning in the second game and Luhrsen, formerly of Albany, Ga., then held Philadelphia down.

Track Is Heavy

SALEM N. H., Aug. 23.—The track at Rockingham Park was very heavy from last night's showers when racing began late this afternoon and the Grand Circuit horses were compelled to face three lengths out from the pole.

Jack Barry, of the Athletic baseball team of the American league, and Bobby Hart will manage the Meriden, Conn., roller polo team this winter. The league will consist of Bridgeport, New Haven, Meriden, Waterbury and probably Hartford.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Mobile won her game after an uphill fight, but did not increase her lead any over the Crackers, as they made the best of their series with Montgomery by taking the last game.

The Crackers went into second place. Birmingham is not to be counted out of the fight for second place yet as she has trounced the Pels on two successive occasions.

The Phillies slumped off for two games and the Giants crawled up another game by downing Chicago.

Cleveland and the Athletics both dropped one.

NAPS LOSE TO BOSTON

CLEVELAND,

Most Modern of Golf Course Is Right in the Heart of Atlanta

Druid Hills Golf Course Almost Ready

Course Has Been Mapped Out Just Right—Club House Is Now Under Construction. Begin Play Shortly

As popular as the game of golf has become practically every course of any consequence has the one drawback of being so remotely located that scores of lovers of the game are kept away owing to a long car ride, bum schedules and other like hindrances. Right now not a city of any consequence in the United States can boast of a course that is termed convenient and here again Atlanta is to show the way.

Right in the heart of Atlanta, just three miles from the center of the city, easily accessible by trolley or automobile, there is to be one of the most up-to-date and modern courses ever built in the United States. It is to be known as the Druid Hills golf course and is a fitting mark to the enterprise of George W. Adair, who is one of Atlanta's most enthusiastic and well-versed golfers.

The Druid Hills course is right in the heart of the Druid Hills subdivision and practically right on Ponce de Leon avenue, which is one of the best automobile thoroughfares in the city. This makes it easily accessible and as a car line with a ten-minute schedule runs right to the entrance to the property it can be reached in this way without any inconvenience, the cars leaving the center of the city and reaching the links in twenty minutes.

The new course was mapped out by H. H. Barker, rated as one of the best professionals in the country. Before deciding upon the many intricate and pleasing features he studied the golf courses the country over and the Druid Hills course comprises the very best feature of the best known courses in the world. There are short and long holes with many natural hazards throughout the course.

Right now Willie Mann is in charge of the course and is working overtime each day to get the place in shape for the grand opening. Mann has had long experience at many of the larger links and knows thoroughly just how they should be cared for. Proper care of a course after it is built is a big help and at this line of work Mann is right there.

FEATURES OF COURSE.

Two of the biggest features to the course is the manner in which most of the tees are placed and the new idea in putting greens. First you will find a tee that is greatly elevated and then you will run across one where you have to give the ball a good hit to start it on its trip up a good hill. This kills the monotony and at the same time makes the player become accustomed to hitting his ball properly. And another feature of the teeing system is that most of the tees are placed back of wooden spot. Besides giving the player a chance for a bit of shade it keeps the sand box from going dry.

Each hole is surrounded with the usual large putting green, but for 18 holes the ground where the cup is and a piece of ground. This is made even hard clay covered by sand treated with oil. This makes it stay perfectly over the year round and affords a balance for accurate putting. You won't find any hilly places in the 18-foot putting green and accuracy will give you the desired result. Bermudas grass has long been tried in this section, but it will not stand the test the year round. This climate is just not suited.

Already the work on the handsome two-story club house has been started and is being rushed to completion. The house is built along the Dutch line. It has every new feature that should go with a club house for an up-to-date country club. The first floor consists of a large reception room, lounging room, cafe and dance hall.

On the second floor will be the locker rooms for both men and ladies and the baths. This new feature of placing the locker rooms down away from the usual murky basement and will be of big benefit to the health of all. Around the first floor will be a wide screened porch. The service will be confined to a wing of the house.

It is expected that the club will be officially opened within a very few weeks. Nine of the eighteen holes are now ready and play over these will be started at once. The club is being run by the board of directors which is made up of H. M. Atkinson, president; J. Carroll Payne, vice president; John W. Grant, Ernest Woodruff, Frank Adair, Lowry Arnold, T. B. Payne, Dr. T. P. Hinman and George Adair.

Hawkins, Cassidy and Rutherford starring on the infield. Griffin featured with the stick. The batting of Williams and the fielding of Donaldson were the features for J. M. High. The score:

FEW OF THE SPORTY HOLES NOW READY FOR PLAY AT DRUID HILLS COURSE

WATER FETE SUCCESS; BIG GALLERY PRESENT

Work of Younger Swimmers Proved Pleasure of the Evening

The largest crowd that ever witnessed any event at the East Lake Country club packed the shores of the little lake to watch the water sports Saturday afternoon.

The society folk of the city turned out and the club house and lake shore were dotted with merry parties enjoying the nautical feats. Fully five hundred people were present and over a hundred machines were parked within the club grounds.

The events of the water Saturday were the most interesting of their kind ever held in the city. They put the big golf tourney in the shade when it came to attracting and interesting the spectators.

The nine events for ladies and gentlemen of the club included short dashes, longer distances and canoeing events.

The handsome silver cup offered by Mr. J. Frederick Hoyt for the best all-round waterman at the meet was won by Walter Dubard. It was required that the winner be entered in every event in order to qualify for the cup. Walter Dubard made 11 points over 9 by his nearest opponent, William Logan.

The feature of the whole afternoon's meet was the diving and swimming of Nora Sterling, who won handily the silver vase offered by Mr. A. Doonan. She scored 15 points, which was over half the score made by Lida Nash, her nearest opponent.

The little swimmer is certainly the "Lady of the Lake." Her swimming and diving won the applause of the crowd gathered on the shore. Her strokes combine speed with endurance, and her diving is a marvel of perfection.

Silver medals were presented to William Logan and Lida Nash for second places in the meet. Logan made 9 points, while Lida Nash made 7. Walter Locke won the consolation bronze medal in the hundred-yard dash for men.

The entire meet was a great success and thoroughly enjoyed by the large crowd present, and the club should be encouraged by this to give more like it.

The events, with the winners and the time made, are given below:

First Event—Quarter mile race for ladies: Alexa Sterling, Lida Nash. Time, 10:55.

Too Much Cheek

In a fairly interesting game O. A. C. beat the P. O. team. Check pitched a good game and with perfect support was never in danger of losing. Hursts' home run with two on bases was the feature of the game. Spurlock and Griffin divided fielding honors. O. A. C. would like some out-of-town games, any day except Wednesday. Call Main 5285-J for information.

Albany had several chances to score which were nipped in the bud by the locals taking too over many chances. Pawnall, Melchoir and Weimer starred with the stick.

Point Scoring In Big Races

Again Tuesday night the purr and sputter of the motors at the big 'Drome will be heard. The management has arranged an excellent program for the night, the track has been renovated and repaired in the weak places and the riders are ready to pull off the races of their lives.

The races were postponed from Friday night of last week in memory of Jock McNeil. The lucky little Scotchman will be missed, with his dared evil spurts but their are others who will furnish the thrill for the public.

The races will continue on the French point scoring system and the southern championship face heats will also be run.

The big race of the night is the Colonel W. L. Peel Sweepstakes. Mr. Peel will be out in person to start the heats.

The heats in them will be of different The heats in them will be of different lengths giving the riders their chances at their favorite distances.

Southern championship race, one mile to qualify and two miles in the final heat. The first two in the heats to race in the finals. The value of the race is 25 points to the winner, 15 to the second man and 10 to the third man.

There will be a special matched race between Morty Graves and George Renel. The heats will be one, two and three miles in length.

The final race will be the Col. W. L. Peel Sweepstakes of three, four and five miles heats. Six riders will ride the boards in this race. Ten points will be given to the winner six to the second man and three to the third man.

Chance Buys Hurler

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Manager Frank Chance, of the New York Americans, today purchased the release of Pitcher Rose, of the Houston (Texas league) club, and he will report here September 10. Rose is a left-hander, and leads the Texas league pitchers in winning percentage. He has won 25 games and lost 7.

Champion Maurice McLoughlin Favored to Again Win the Honors

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—Wallace F. Johnson and R. Norris Williams, Jr., won their way into the semi-final round of the all-comers singles championship today, defeating J. R. Strachan and W. M. Washburn, respectively, in the sixth day's play of the annual tournament of the United States National Lawn Tennis association.

Johnson defeated Strachan 2-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4, and Williams eliminated Washburn 6-4, 6-3, 6-4. In both cases the scores indicated clearly the superiority of the victors. Williams will play Nat Thornton Johnson will face Champion Maurice E. McLoughlin, should both winners in turn, will play for the national singles Tuesday. As the field stands McLoughlin is opposed by three eastern stars, but after his wonderful playing against Clothier, he is overwhelming favorite to win the championship again.

The tournament committee allotted the grandstand court today to the Johnson-Strachan match. Johnson started slowly and for a few minutes the stocky Californian appeared to be making a runaway match of the play. The Philadelphian devoted more attention to his opponent's style of play than to the ball and Strachan quickly ran out the set 6 to 2.

This was his only opportunity to shine, however, for Johnson had solved Strachan's game and proceeded to work out the succeeding three sets with only occasional stands by the California youngster.

On earned points Strachan had a slight advantage over Johnson, the earned side of the card Strachan was a heavy loser, for he gave 88 points to Johnson, receiving in return but 96.

Williams made short work of his match with Washburn winning the first and third sets in easy fashion. Washburn made his stand in the second set which he carried to deuce chiefly because of careless play by Williams.

Williams' record against Washburn was 15 games and 96 points to nine games and 75 points.

During the day arrangements were completed for the banquet to be tendered the winning Davis cup team in New York city next week. It is planned to hold the celebration of the return of the international trophy at Delmonico's Wednesday evening if the tournament ends here Tuesday. Dwight F. Davis, of St. Louis, donor of the cup, will deliver a speech of congratulation to the victors.

Disturber III. Winner Of Motor Boat Race

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Thirty thousand spectators today saw Disturber III, owned and piloted by Commodore James H. Pugh, of Chicago, win the American motorboat championship. Disturber III did the fifteen laps, over a distance of thirty miles in 42:27, while Baby Reliance, of Canton, Ohio, was second in 43:02 3-5. The championship, which carries with it a $5,000 trophy, was open to boats of all sizes and the Pugh boat, Baby Reliance, Barnacle, Oregon Kid and Kitty Hawk V won the right to contend in previous trials. Barnacle failed to start. Pugh's boat is among those that will represent the United States at the international races in England. Disturber III has twenty-four cylinders with 600 horsepower and takes 100 gallons of gasoline an hour.

Sporty Shorts Are Plentiful At New Course

You Find Long and Short Pitches at Druid Hills Course—Right Now Course Is in Good Condition

Each hole on the new course has been arranged with the idea of furnishing plenty of real pleasure for both the expert and beginner. You can either try for long shots and a par score or play it safe and get just one stroke over par. This causes the player to study carefully each shot and it has to be made carefully and with some definite end in view. Most of the hazards are natural and are arranged scientifically.

A review of the holes would not be out of order.

No. 1—The first tee is situated just 40 yards north of the club house and runs due north. It is wooded on each side, requiring a straight drive to get the par score of 5. The distance is 430 yards.

No. 2—This fair green is down hill practically all the way. A good tee shot with a wooden club followed by a neat half iron shot to a plateau upon which the cup is to be found. A bad first shot puts one in bad shape for a green shot as number two. The distance is 350 yards with par at 4.

No. 3—This tee is elevated and the first shot requires a 150-yard carry to get a true line of play. The green is surrounded by a creek where an overshot will get you in trouble. Distance is 310 yards with par 4.

No. 4—From an elevated tee you have a straight course. A first shot of 225 yards will carry over the branch and make par 4 easy.

No. 5—This 420-yard hole circling around a long hill is one of the sportiest on the course. The fair green is guarded on the left by a branch. It is a typical dog-leg hole and is probably the best of its kind in this country. The par is 4, but that requires good shooting.

No. 6—Tee is elevated and drive must carry over a branch which angles as to vary distance 120 to 150 yards. Second shot is hard, being up hill and requiring placing. Branch also penalizes top section. Distance 480 yards, par 4.

No. 7—This tee shot is the most picturesque in the country. The tee has an elevation of 50 feet. There is a branch on left to penalize a hook and the same branch guards green. It takes well hit second shot with mashie to get on green. Distance 300 yards, par 4.

No. 8—This is a short down-hill hole with par 3.

No. 9—This is probably the hardest hole in the United States. The tee shot is up hill and must be placed to left as green breaks rapidly to right. Second shot is equally as hard, requiring long carry over hollow os as to give player an open shot. This hole is 550 yards with woods on either side and par at 5. It finishes almost at the club house.

No. 10—This tee is just to the right of the first. It requires a long drive to get an open shot to the green on the second. The path down the fair course is very narrow and accuracy is required. The distance is 410 yards with par at 4.

No. 11—A good carry on the first shot around a hollow places the player in good position for the second. The distance here is but 360 yards with par at 4.

No. 12—This tee is well elevated with the play to a valley 40 feet below. Second shot must be placed on top of steep hill and topped by green guarded by a branch. The distance is 380 yards and par 4.

No. 13—This is a fine one-shot hole. The carry requires 170 yards to the plateau green. The distance is 190 yards and par 3.

No. 14—This is where accuracy in a drive counts for a great deal. With an accurate first shot the green is open for the second, enough on this distance is necessary. The second shot must cross a creek which guards the green on this 367-yard hole with pah at 4.

No. 15—Here is mashie pitch to the green guarded by a creek is all that is required. The hole is 155 yards in length though par is 4.

No. 16—From an elevated tee a splendid first shot is absolutely necessary to a good score. Both distance and accuracy must be there. The creek runs at an acutne angle making a good shot of 180 yards necessary for a player after a drive of 120 yards for one who is satisfied with a 5. The hole angles to the left. An open shot is gained by taking the long drive to the right. Distance 408 yards, par 4.

No. 17—Here is found a good one-shot hole. The green is just over the creek which is at an angle. A carry of 130 to 150 is required the longer the carry the better, as a short carry means a poor lie on the fair green. Distance 165 yards, par 3.

No. 18—Tee play runs back to the club house. There are trees on both sides of the fair course. Plenty of ground is to left and care is required to keep out of woods on the right. Distance 488 yards, par 5.

First Baptist won from the First Christian by the score of 10 to 6, making 18 out of 19 games won by First Baptist.

ROY MORAN, EX-CRACKER, STARS IN COAST LEAGUE

By BUEL.

Roy Moran, affectionately called "Morey" by his teammates, star center fielder for the Senators, broke into professional baseball in the Kitty league back in the Sucker State.

Morey was the choice of Peoria for center fielder against nine competitors, and made good from the start, tsarting off hitting the pill at a .348 clip and finishing with an average of .305f

From the Kityy league he went to the Ohio State league, playing the season of 1907. He was drafted by Atlanta and played the seasons of 1908-09-10 in the city made famous by a certain General Sherman.

Then a year with Chattanooga, where his playing attracted the attention of the big league scouts from Washington.

He played mostly on the bench with Washington, taking part in a few games. Sacramento bought him from Washington, and Sacramento made a great buy.

Roy Moran is second to none as an outfielder in the Coast league. He covers center field, scooping up Texas leaguers, spearing embryo home runs, and keeping down the hits in the hit column in a sensational manner most pleasing to our fans. Sacramento swears by him and never at him, for Sacramento's outfield is not the smoothest in the league. A few rough spots and a mote hinde more or less get by.

Moran is hitting .281. He is among the first ten as a run getter, and he ranks high as a base stealer.

Roy belongs to the modern school of ball players, nothing of the old roughhouse style about him. He gives his team the best that's in him during the season, and during the winter months he works as an electrician. Yes, girls, he is married.—Saramento (Cal.) Exchange.

When Roy Moran was in the Southern league he always played a jamb-up fielding and base-running game, but was not overly strong with the willow. However, in this lineo f work he was fair, and with the improvement he has made there is no doubt but that he is right now good enough for the majors.

With Atlanta fandom Moran was always a big bit. And Atlanta is a hit iwth Roy. During the off months he lives in Atlanta and has thousands of friends. There are many who keep up with his record on the Pacific coast and are wishing for him another trial in the big show.

Jackson Won't Be Put Down From the Top

Tyrus Cobb Continues to Chase the Naplander, but to Date He Has Failed to Land. Joe Leads in Many Ways

Joe Jackson and Ty Cobb still keep their relative positions in first and second, with only a few points separating them. Both are around the .390 mark, and have started on a hitting streak which bids fair to land them close to .400 before the season is over.

This is the tightest race that the big league batters have had for a long time. Tris Speaker holds third place, with an average of .365, while Larry Lajoie continues to hit over .350.

Joe Jackson leads in slugging, with 235 total bases to his credit.

Claim Baudet Will Be Outlaw

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Throughout the west there is an undercurrent of unrest in baseball regarding the activities of the Federal league for next season. Rumors are rife, especially among the big league players, that the new organization is planning a raid on the National and American leagues next winter that will make the invasion of the Ban Johnson act in 1901 look like a street parade.

Of the most persistent reports emanating from Pittsburg is to the effect that Jake Daubert of the Brooklyn Superbas will be the first of the stars coaxed "across the border." It is stated "on the authority of one of the Pittsburg stockholders" that Jake is to receive a contract of $5,000 a year for five years, the $25,000 to be deposited in a bank to Daubert's order and to his, "win or loose."

When sounded on the subject Jake said there was absolutely no truth to the story. "I have a three-year contract with the Brooklyn club," said Jake, "and that has two more years to run, so I couldn't very well talk business with the Federal league, even if I wanted to. I am perfectly satisfied with the treatment accorded me by President Ebbets and the club owners, and that is the signing of a long term contract. I don't think there are advantageous to any player. However, that can be remedied. You can say that I have not been approached by the Federal league and would not listen to any proposition from them if they do approach me."

Another yarn was to the effect that Larry Lajoie had been offered $10,000 to join the Pittsburg Feds, but that also could not be verified. It is certain, however, that the Federal league will have plenty of rumors to digest during the coming winter months.

Brooklyn Star Is Grid Coach

ANNISTON, Ala., Aug. 23.—Frank Allen, star southpaw of the Brooklyn Nationals, who was largely responsible for the successful inauguration of athletics at the Alabama Presbyterian college here, has been re-elected coach, according to a message just received from Dr. E. D. McDougall, president, who is now in the east.

Allen, besides being an A-1 pitcher, is one of the fastest and most aggressive backs ever produced by the south. He played on the Southeastern university eleven and also against Vanderbilt and other S. I. A. A. teams during his active service.

"Carl Hannon, whom Allen succeeds, will leave within a few weeks for Tuscaloosa to take the place of assistant coach at Alabama, his alma mater. He has done a creditable work here in remolding a winning squad out of green material.

Perfect Plans At Paris Meet

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The International Athletic federation has adjourned today, leaving the completion of the code of rules for international competition to the 1914 Paris congress.

The most important achievement of the federation was the formulation of a track and field sports program applicable to Olympic games.

The committee's suggestions eliminating the standing high and standing broad jumps, limiting shot putting and javelin and discus throwing with the best hands only, inserting the 56 pound weight and the 400 meter hurdles and retaining the walking events were adopted.

The Olympic track and fiel dprogram it accepted by the Olympic committee will include:

Standard runs up to 5,000 and 10,000 metres; 110 and 400 metres hurdles; 3,000 metres steeplechase; 10,000 metres cross country run; 3,000 metres race for teams of five men, three to count; 400 metres and 1,800 metres relay races; 3,000 and 10,000 metres walks, marathon race; running broad and running high jumps; pole vault; hop, step and jump; throwing the javelin, throwing the discus and putting the shot best hand only throwing the javelin with the javelin held in the middle; throwing the hammer; 56 pounds weight; tug of war, teams of eight men; pentahlen and decathlon.

PALZER IS NOW MATCHED TO BOX WITH FRANK MORAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Another important heavyweight bout has been clinched and the date set for its settlement. A match has been arranging for some time between Al Palzer, the big Iowa farmer, managed by Tom O'Rourke, and Frank Moran, the Pittsburg aspirant to the heavyweight throne, guided by Dan McKetrick. The managers of the two men and Promoter Jimmy Johnstore of the St. Nicholas rink finally agreed on terms and definitely arranged for the bout to be decided on Wednesday, September 3.

The boxers believe that the date named will give them plenty of opportunity to get in fretclass shape for the battle. Moran is in Stratford, Conn., where he is working off and on. Palzer is at Woodlawn Inn getting into form.

Palzer declares that when he enters the ring this time he will be in the best condition of his career. He says when he met Jim Flynn on the coast that he was not in good trim and that it was lack of form that caused his undoing. He is hoping that Flynn will give him a chance to get another crack at him, for he feels sure that in another trial he can prove that he is the fighting fireman's master.

Moran has never fought Flynn, but he has met Gunboat Smith. He claims that the worst he should have gotten in his twenty-round bout with Gunboat on the coast should have been a draw, and he adds that he was terribly sick when he entered the ring.

It will be remembered that it was Moran who fought Arthur Luther McCarfy in the fight just before his fatal bout with Arthur Pelky. Moran entered the ring with a broken hand—his right—but he managed to beat McCarty for nine rounds and blew up in the tenth. Had it not been for the hand finish Moran would undoubtedly have been given the popular verdict.

Moran fought McCarty, broken hand and all, for nothing. Before the bout he agreed to take 50 per cent of all in the house after McCarty was paid his $1,000 guarantee. As there was nowhere near this sum in the box office he had to be content with fighting just for the experience.

Moran and Palzer have already met. Their bout took place in the Clermont avenue rink of Brooklyn some two years ago, and they battled hard and furiously that opinions as to the winner were about evenly divided. Both are determined that the next encounter will determin for good and all time who is the better fighter.

Chance Willing To Make Trades

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Manager Frank Chance, of the New York American league club, announced Friday afternoon that the deal with the Baltimore club, of the International league, for the services of Ed Maisel had been completed.

The Orioles' star infielder comes to the Yankees in exchange for Bert Daniels, Shaiah Midkiff and $12,000 in cash. Maisel will report to Chance in this city Sunday.

Maisel, who is considered one of the star infielders of the International league, has been in great demand among major league clubs this season. The Chicago Americans, Boston Nationals and New York Americans have all been bidding for him, and it was not until today that Chance and Manager Dunn, of the Baltimore club, finally came to terms.

Maisel and Truesdale plays shortstop or third base equally well.

During the 1912 season Maisel batted .276 in 129 games, fielded .925 in 128 games, put through 3 and 321 in 23 games at third base. Maisel is considered a coming star and a player who will solve the infield problem, which has been worrying Manager Chance.

In giving Baltimore $12,000 in cash in addition to Daniels and Midkiff (worth perhaps $5,000 more), the local club deal takes rank with the history-making trade of Manager Chance, those that brought Larry Chappelle to the White Sox, Rube Marquard to the Giants and Marty O'Toole to Pittsburg.

Old Salaries Proved Small

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Baseball managers and players of a quarter of a century ago received salaries that appear ridiculous as compared with the fabulous sums which those of today are said to receive, according to information brought to light by a Chicago sporting writer.

"Cap" Adrian C. Anson is said to have received the princely sum of $2,700 for managing the Chicago White Stockings in 1888, the year after he had finished the season with a batting average of .421. And of this amount $700 represented his service as acting captain and manager of the team, the major portion being his salary as a player. R. E. Smith of this city, claims to possess the contract.

Smith also has the contracts signed by N. Fred Pfeiffer and Edward N. Williams, when they consented to play in the Brotherhood league in 1889. These two players were talked of at that time as the greatest in the game. The Chicago club paid Williamson $3,000, while Pfeiffer, one of the greatest of all second basemen, received only $2,000 and the score card privilege.

A larger salary than any of those old time stars was paid to Charles Comisky, present owner of the Chicago White Sox, when he jumped to the Brotherhood league. His contract, also held by Smith, called for $7,000 in 1890. Comiskey was then then regarded as the dean of fielding first basemen, although he was not regarded as good at bat as Anson.

Won't Post Forfeit For Ritchie Bout

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 23.—Harry Pollock, manager for Freddie Welsh, is reluctant to post a forfeit for a match with Willie Ritchie on September 29 until he is sure that Welsh can condition himself. Hugh Springer, head of the local fight syndicate, announced today that in response to Ritchie's repeated demand to have $2,500 forfeit posted a meeting had been arranged for next Monday. Pollock said he knew nothing about such a meeting.

Conzelman, Price and Dent All Have Good Averages—Coveleskie Is Out to Better Mark Held by Prough

Bill Prough, of Birmingham, holds his lead of the Southern hurlers with a percentage of .800. Prough has participated in thirty games and has credit for forty wins and five losses.

"Some" Fish Story

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 23.—Establishing what was declared to be a world's record with rod and reel, W. C. Beechem, of New York, brought to gaff off Catalina island today a 255-pound swordfish in a 92-minute fight. The fish was twelve feet long and had a four-foot sword.

Planning Racing For Sonder Boats

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—As an aftermath of the international contest, which comes the story of a probable challenge race for $1,000 a side over a 200-mile course at sea between Commodore Lagen's Dream and Tocsam II. The latter is owned by Mr. Mulford.

In the Bermuda race Tocsam had the misfortune to run past the islands and therefore made the poorest showing of the three motor boats entered in the long ocean event for the Gordon Bennett cup. Naturally her owner wished to race the Dream back to the United States, but the Dream had trouble at the last minute and Tocsam had to fight it out with the Barbara. She came home first.

Rating always plays a prominent part in these races, and with the Tocsam II loaded until she rates forty or under she could beat the Dream a good race, but it would not be a walk-over. This would give the Dream a time allowance of about two hours and Tocsam II would have to hustle.

In the Winter Quarter Shoals race of 200 miles Dream defeated the Tocsam II, but she rated four-three, and had to give Dream 2 hours and 40 minutes. Tocsam II came home with a two-hour margin to her credit.

There is a plan on foot to have the boats race from the Corinthian Yacht club at Cape May. This is not official, but there has been some talk of it, as the Cold Spring inlet can be crosed at night or day with perfect safety to the racers, and the event can be run directly from the doors of the club and the finish be made at the same place. Yachtsmen from the Delaware would have a sail of a hundred miles to witness the race, and those of the New Jersey coast would have about the same distance to go, too.

Regulate All Field Rules

NEW YORK, July 27.—Rules for track and field contests in the future have been made by the provisional committee of the proposed International Athletic Federation, and will be discussed at the meeting of the federation at Berlin, on August 21. The committee is composed as follows:

J. S. Elstrom and Kristian Hellstrom, Sweden; P. L. Fisher, Great Britain; Pierre Roy, France; Carl Diem, Germany; S. Stankovitz, Hungary, and J. E. Sullivan, United States.

The functions of the federation will be restricted to the following points: To draw up and agree to rules and regulations for international competitions in athletics; to register world's, Olympic and national records; to draw up a common calendar; to establish the international association for competition. Every governing international association for athletics has the right to send to five representatives to the congress in question, but only two of these shall have the right to vote. The proposed rules of the federation are as follows:

The highest legislative authority shall be the Federative congress, which shall consist of two representatives from each national association affiliated to the federation, together with the president and honorary secretary, who shall be specially chosen at each congress.

The president and honorary secretary shall belong to the same country, and the honrary secretary shall, in addition, act as honorary treasurer. These two officials, together with five others chosen by the congress (and preferably belonging to different countries), shall form a council, which shall have the care of the affairs of the federation from congress to congress.

A congress of the federation shall be held, summoned by the council, at least every four years. The venue and time to be fixed at the preceding congress.

Special congresses may be held, providing four associations affiliated to the federation give notice in writing to the honorary secretary that they desire such congress, and stating their reasons for the same, of it the committee decides to hold special congress. On receiving such notice, the honorary secretary must summon the congress within three months of such request.

The leading athletic associations of the following nations shall be eligible for affiliation to the federation: Argentine Republic, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chili, China, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Luxemburg, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Servia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, United States of America.

New Tennis Champ

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 23.—Roland Hoerr, of St. Louis, won the Southwestern district tennis singles championship here today, defeating Bradley B. Hague, of Dalals, 8-6, 12-11 and 6-4. He is the first title holder for this district, which was created this year by the American Lawn Tennis association. It includes Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

GEERS MAKE FAMOUS HARNESS RACING GAME

Mr. Longfellow has made immortal in verse the tendency of the little brook to overcome all obstacles and forced wend its way to its coveted goal, the sea. But this said brook of our champion, which was created this year by the persistence on Mr. Edward Geers, the veteran and world's greatest reinsman, whose characteristic of winning classic harness events is even more pronounced than the celebrated flow of Mr. Longfellow's brook.

Geers' methods are efficient and above all confident. Geers year after year trains trains and then plots the course of his horses to be entered into coveted prizes in competition with hundreds and thousands of other drivers. For size the harness race is the wonder of the Grand Circuit. Geers is the wonder of the harness racing world as well as its idol.

"Pop," as he is familiarly known and loves to be called by his close friends, captured his sixth Merchants and Manufacturers stake with a purse of $10,000 attached at Detroit last week.

This probably was as great a race as that classic of classic harness events has ever witnessed. Reusens was driven by Geers, Reusens whose showing had been mediocre until taken by Geers four weeks before and under the Geers hand and guidance he made such improvement each day that from an outside long end bet he soon traveled into the favorite's chair.

Out of six entries Reusens and Tenara were soon called as the favorite. And Tenara lived up to her reputation in the first heat when she finished first, Andrews, while Geers' gelding finished a far fourth. Tenara won the second heat without effort, and Reusens broke at the turn, probably being reined by Geers' master hand, and finished in trailing fashion.

With Tenara holding two heats out of two, and needing one to win, the third heat was bitterly contested. Geers allowed Reusens to take the lead with Judson Girl to the stretch, and then with a burst of speed unrivaled in the years on the Grand Circuit, Geers piloted the gelding down the stretch in front of Tenara by a nostril quiver with Judson Girl a short stride behind.

The next two heats were battles of speed between Tenara and the gelding Reusens, although the latter was driven by Geers until the stretch was nearly finished and then sent his charge under the wire a nose and neck in the lead.

Geers got his first M. and M. in 1897 with The Corporal. Five years later he repeated with Lady Geraldine, and in 1904 gilded the double first. In 1910-11 he won with the Anvil and Dudie Archdale. And two years later made it a total of nine from the M. and M. $60,000 when he drove Reusens against Tenara.

Geers has won the chamber of commerce cup three times, and has numerous firsts to his credit in other annual events not so classical.

Among the great horses Geers has developed in recent years are the world's champion stallion, The Harvest, the world's champion new class mare filesh; Charley Mitchell, the Anvil, Dudie Archdale, The Abbe and Uhlan, holder of the world's harness record without a windshield at 1:58.

"Grub" Is Bad At Marlin and Giants Kicking

Probable That New Yorkers Won't Again Train at Texas City—Put Marlin on Map, May Now Erase It

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Unofficially the news leaked out that the Giants—which means John J. McGraw—are seriously considering changing the scene of their spring activities. In other words, they are seriously considering depriving Marlin, Tex., of the lone distinction that the place has enjoyed for the last several years. The Giants put Marlin on the map and now they may erase it.

The Giants are Marlin. Marlin is the Giants. Therefore, it follows that if the Giants discard Marlin that Marlin won't be Marlin any longer, or if it is no one will care much except Marlin. And this condition has been brought about by the "grub" as it is sometimes called.

That Marlin is an ideal place in which to work out the winter's kinks and attain quantities of physical condition cannot be denied, but like most southern training camps, the food is not all that it might be. Southern chefs, or a good many of them, have a tendency to use cotton seed oil with a liberality that is not conductive to the best results when a northerner's stomach is the point of consideration. If this could be rectified fine and dandy Marlin would be the one best bet to play in the spring of the year.

There are two ways of overcoming this feature of spring training at the Texas city. The Giants can either cut out Marlin and take the chance of getting as bad, if not worse, food elsewhere, or they may import their own chef as the Yankees did in Bermuda last spring. Of the two it seems as if the most feasible arrangement would be to import their own chef, and that is just what they may decide to do.

It would be quite an expense, but it undoubtedly would be worth it. It would do away with many cases of indigestion and general unfitness. One has to become acclimated ,so to speak, to the cooking below the Mason and Dixon line and it takes from ten days to two weeks to form a sufficient appetite to be able to stave off the ravages of hunger by eating a regular sized meal without thinking that it's medicine.

Even though, the Giants are considering other places for next spring's workout, it is not at all likely that they will turn a cold shoulder toward Marlin. They have been very successful in their training stunts there, and when the matter of cooking can be so easily rectified by taking a cook along it is but logical to reason that they will stick to Marlin, but not to Marlin chefs.

The Best Hopes Bar Langford

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—If a man happens to be the best heavyweight fighter in the world, but is not permitted to win the title of the class and enjoy the fruits of victory, he can fully be blamed for railing at fortune. Samuel Langford, of Cambridge, Mass., is the unfortunate athlete referred to, and if he were rewarded in proportion to his pugilistic skill he would be riding about in benzine wagons and wearing diamonds the size of walnuts. In fact, Langford would be enjoying, as a result of his scientific attainments, all the privileges and luxuries that fell to J. Arthur Johnson shortly after the Reno horror.

There is not a shadow of doubt that Langford in his present form could go through the ranks of the white hopes like a scythe through grass, and the only thing that prevents his doing so is the earnest disinclination of the whites to enter into a Queensberry dispute with the sepia negro.

In fact, every white hope of any prominence, and several of no prominence whatever, have drawn the color line on Langford and refuse to associate with him pugilistically.

Therefore, there is nothing left for Samuel to do but to make war on men of his own color. Of these but one remains in this country at the present time. This is Joe Jeanette, and Langford already has two decisions over Joe. There is small doubt when they meet on the coast, as seems probable, that Langford will score another victory.

The other negro is Jack Johnson, at present in Paris, where he will doubtless remain for some time to come. Johnson has one decision on points over Langford, which was gained in 1906, in a fifteen-round bout at Chelsea. Langford could doubtless beat Johnson now, for Sam, who has taken care of himself, is but twenty-seven years of age, while Johnson, who has burned the candle at both ends, is now thirty-five, and deteriorating rapidly.

If Langford went over to Paris and defeated Johnson the situation would be decidedly interesting, for Johnson is still the holder of the world's heavyweight title, the championship in possession of Pelkey being restricted to the white race.

Had Johnson been imprisoned it would have meant his complete elimination from the game, but as he has escaped to Europe and resumed boxing, he must be considered the holder of the title which he won from Burns. Therefore, if Langford went to Paris and beat Johnson the stumpy knockout performer would certainly be entitled to the championship.

But even if he did, it would not be of any value to him in America, for public opinion here has set the seal of its disapproval on bouts between negroes and whites.

The New York Boxing commission took the initiative by prohibiting bouts between whites and blacks in this state, and the officials of San Francisco followed suit and prohibited a bout between Langford and a white boxer named Miller on the coast.

The Utica Kennel club show will be held at the fair grounds, Rome, N. Y., on September 3 to 5. The prizes will be cash.

One by one the foreign countries are coming around to the viewpoint that American track and field coaching methods are the best. This is shown by the visit of the German commission to study American methods and the announcement that Jean Bouin, the French distance runner, will soon make a tour of this country to pick up athletic points of training.

YONKERS WON'T HOLD MEET

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—There will be no Grand Circuit meeting at Yonkers. The text of the bankruptcy laws, it has been decided, will prevent the federal government from conducting its horse racing enterprise, which was scheduled for the Empire City track next week. Federal receivers of the National Fair and Exposition company had been authorized by the United States district court here to hold the Grand Circuit races and the court had enjoined all creditors from attaching the receipts or interfering with the meeting in any way.

The National Trotting association, however, it was announced last night, has refused to sanction the meeting or collect the $19,380 in forfeits due until the receivers will agree to recognize unpaidd claims of horsemen who raced at the first meet on the same track early this month.

Another Tennis Tourney On August 30

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 23.—The annual invitation tennis tournament, under the auspices of the U. S. N. L. T. association, will be held on the clay courts of the Hollywood Golf club, Deal, N. J., beginning August 30. Matches will begin at 3 p. m. on August 30 and will be scheduled at the close of each day for the following day.

The events scheduled are men's singles and men's doubles. The trophy in men's singles is the tennis committee cup, which must be won three times (not necessarily in succession) for permanent ownership.

NOW SEEKING MANAGERS RAISED ON THE GAME

Club Owners Seek the Men Who Have Been Through the Ups and Downs of Baseball—No More Theorists

NEW YORK Aug. 2.—There was a time in baseball, and it is not a great many years ago, when the owners of ball clubs were inclined to select men to act as managers of their teams who were more theorists than they were players. The club presidents were inclined to be impressed with the ability of these men to decipher—on paper—plays and combinations that seemed to be unbeatable.

Not many of them got a chance to show their worth even at that, but some few did. Nowadays club owners want men for managers who have been brought up in baseball. They want men who are in a position to know just how much to expect from their players; men who will not demand the impossible, but still insist upon baseball being played every minute that the contract beginning April 15 and ending October 15 calls for.

Not one of the sixteen managers is a "theorist," like Frank Selee—a man who had had no experience in major league ball, and guided the plays or by an outsider's judgment. Even Stallings was a big league catcher many, many years ago. Of the sixteen, one is a catcher, two are first basemen, two second basemen, one shortstop and two outfielders—eight, in all—are still in the game. All the rest, except Mack and Stallings, have been in the game so recently that they can practice with their men and know, by actual feel of the bat and ball, just how everything is going along.

St. Louis—Miller Huggins, second baseman.

Boston—J. Garland Stahl, first baseman.

Cleveland—"Joe" Birmingham, outfielder.

New York—Frank Chance, first baseman.

St. Louis—George Stovall, first baseman.

Washington—Clark Griffith, retired pitcher.

Two—McGraw and Jennings—are graduates of the great Baltimore team. Three—Chance, Evers and Tinker—worked together on the conquering Cubs. Oddly enough, three more—Dahlen, Callahan and Griffith—all had their schooling on the Chicago team that preceded the Cubs—a gang of merry joy riders whose individual abilities were superb, but who could win no flags.

Stallings is a come-back. Evers, Tinker and Huggins get their first show this spring. Chance has been transferred from one league to another. As to the actual skill and knowledge of the game these managers may possess—well, figure it this way: If each of them had the arm and the wind that they had a few years ago, what team of either league could stand against them? How far would any club get if matched against this aggregation—Dooin, catcher; Griffith and Callahan, pitchers; Chance, first base; Evers, or Huggins, second base; Jennings, Dahlen or Tinker, shortstop; McGraw, third base; Clarke, Birmingham and Stahl, outfielders?

Racing Agreement Sent to America

NEW YORK Aug. 23.—Contracts between the New York Yacht club and the Royal Ulster Yacht club for next year's race for the America's cup have been signed, sealed and delivered and nothing now stands in the way of the contest. The official announcement to this effect will be made in a day or two.

The New York club is going ahead with its plans for the defense of the cup, and announcement will also soon be made as to the size of the boat which will meet Sir Thomas Lipton's seventy footer, Shamrock IV, as well as the owner or owners of the boat or boats to be built to meet her. That Mr. Lipton will be met with a yacht of the same size as his own is believed to be a certainty and that there will be at least three yachts striving in trial races for the honor of defending is also practically assured.

Rugby football is the latest addition to the curriculum of sports which have been adopted by th ecolleges in Japan. Louis Vass, varsity rugby captain of the Leland Stanford university last season acted as coach of the students of the Keio university during the recent stay of the Pacific coast college nine there recently in Tokio and the Japanese quickly caught on to many of the points in passing and dodging with the ball.

This "On-Air Cure" In No-Rim-Cut Tires Costs Us $1,500 Daily
No Other Maker Employs It

Done to Save Blow-Outs

Here is another reason why Goodyear tires hold the leading place in Tiredom. Another big and exclusive economy.

No-Rim-Cut tires are final-vulcanized on air-bags, shaped like inner tubes. All other tires are vulcanized on iron cores alone

We cure the tires on elastic air, because they are used on air. Thus the rubber and fabric adjust themselves to actual road conditions. Every part of the fabric bears its share of the strain.

Curing involves a tremendous compression. When this is done on an iron core, the fabric often buckles, This wrinkled fabric escapes its share of the strain, and that leads to countless blow-outs.

We add to our cost $1,500 daily to save those blow-outs by this "On-Air Cure." And no other maker does that.

Our Treads Alone Are Rubber-Riveted

This occurs near the breaker strip—the fabric strip at the base of the tread in every well-made tire.

We use a patent fabric, woven with hundreds of quarter-inch holes. The tread rubber is forced down through these holes. Thus hundreds of large rubber rivets are made to prevent tread separation. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse.

This is done in no other tire, because we have exclusive use of this patent.

How We Alone End Rim-Cutting

Then we control the No-Rim-Cut tire, which makes rim-cutting impossible.

The braided wire bands, which make this feasible, are controlled by secrecy. No one else can make them.

No-Rim-Cut tires end this waste entirely. That we guarantee.

No Extra Price

We offer you tires that can't rim-cut—

With "On-Air-Cure" to save blow-outs—

With the rubber-riveted treads—

Yet they cost you no extra price.

No-Rim-Cut tires, with these costly features, used to cost one-fifth more than clinchers. We brought the cost down by our multiplied output. Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires. Some lesser tires cost more.

All these economies, which we alone employ, add not one penny to the price to you. That's why Goodyear tires outsell any other tire. Our dealers are everywhere.

The Administration's Triumph In the Banking and Currency Bill.

The administration's banking and currency bill has weathered its roughest gales and will now move auspiciously forward to enactment. For weeks past there have been ill-advised though well-intentioned efforts on the part of a few House Democrats to burden this measure with amendments which, however commendable within themselves they might be, are not essential to the larger principles at stake, but would merely confuse the issue and delay, if not defeat, a sorely needed reform. These untimely proposals were rejected by the banking and currency committee but they were none the less vigorously revived in the sessions of the Democratic caucus where, for a while, they threatened to split the party's well-ordered ranks. But on last Friday there came a decisive test from which the administration forces emerged stronger than ever and which, it would seem, virtually assures the passage of the banking and currency bill before the present session of Congress adjourns.

By a vote of one hundred and thirty-two to sixty, the caucus decided that an amendment proposing to place in the currency bill a ban upon interlocking directorates should not be included in this measure but should be referred to the judiciary committee as a basis for future legislation in regard to trusts. The question did not concern the rightness or wisdom of prohibiting interlocking directorates, which are generally conceded to be a blight upon normal and wholesome business competition; it concerned the advisability of encumbering currency and banking reform with an issue apart from the main purpose in view. It was a test of Democracy's clear-headedness and workmanship, a test of whether the majority in the House would continue to do the right thing at the right time, all hands working together, or would fall into jarring groups like the vain builders of Babel.

The President has stood firmly by the House leaders in insisting that the banking and currency bill should be kept free from irrelevant issues; and the House leaders have stood stanchly by the President in insisting that none of the vital principles of the bill be compromised. Mr. Bryan in his admirable and effective letter to Chairman Glass stated the case convincingly when he said:

"In attempting to secure remedial legislation care must be taken not to overload a good measure with amendments, however good these amendments may be within themselves. A boat may be sunk, if you attempt to make it carry too much, however valuable the merchandise. The President and Secretary McAdoo, in conjunction with the chairmen of the currency committees of the House and Senate, have formulated a tentative measure. It was prepared after extensive investigation and comparison of views. It embodies certain provisions of great importance and is, I believe, fundamentally sound. These main provisions are, to my mind, of such transcendent importance that I am relatively but little concerned with the details of the bill. I do not mean to say that the details are unimportant but whatever mistakes may be made in details can be corrected easily and soon. A wrong step in the matter of principle would be more difficult to retract. I take it for granted that no one who really is in favor of the bill will permit a difference of opinion on a matter of detail to jeopardize the bill."

That is the pith of the entire banking and currency issue. The administration bill was not presented as ideal in all particulars but it embodied three great provisions for adequate reform—public control instead of private control of the country's monetary system, a currency that will be elastic and responsive to the needs of sound credit instead of rigid and unresponsive as now and, finally, due safeguards against the abnormal concentration of monetary resources at particular points and by particular interests. These principles are the important things in the pending bill, and it is their triumph in which the country is vitally interested. Whatever differences of opinion there may be in regard to details, the fact remains that the essential features of this bill satisfy more thoughtful people than any other measure of the kind ever proposed; and by rallying unitedly to its enactment the Democratic Congress can render a service which for timeliness and practical value will be almost unparalleled in the nation's legislative history.

Unless all omens fail this is what Congress will do. Last week's significant vote in the Democratic caucus practically puts an end to serious opposition in the House. The bill will now be speedily ratified by the caucus and that means its prompt adoption by the House. The Senate Democrats have agreed that the bill shall be taken up immediately after the tariff measure is out of the way, and that at the latest will be only a few weeks hence. They have agreed furthermore that if need be they will stay in Washington "till the snow flies" to carry out the work before them. They have the determination, the loyalty and the votes to put through the banking and currency bill.

The enactment of a thoroughgoing tariff measure alone would be a monumental achievement for the Wilson administration but when to this is added an equally important currency measure, both within the same session of Congress, the record becomes truly marvelous.

Government jobs go begging, even ambassadorships that require large chunks of capital.

Huerta will also find that the soldier, like everybody else, doesn't like to miss a pay day.

Dispatches continue to indicate that the tariff bill will be passed; that the currency measure will meet a similar experience; that Japan is mollified and that Huerta is about to resign; and yet there are some who complain because Wilson uses good grammer and Bryan drinks grape juice.

The President's Mexican Policy.

If Huerta ever really thought, as he said he did, that President Wilson's Mexican policy was "partisan" and not approved by public sentiment in the United States, he is now convinced of his serious misapprehension. The attitude of Congress, regardless of party alignment, and of representative newspapers the country over clearly shows that the American people are of one mind in indorsing the President's course, not only in his refusal to recognize the lawless Huerta regime, but also in his patient, earnest efforts to restore peace and orderly government in the neighboring republic.

If the would-be dictator of Mexico expected any sympathy or countenance from Americans who differ with the administration on political and domestic issues, his hopes were vain. The Mexican situation has been treated at Washington as entirely non-political and non-partisan. Mr. Wilson has taken all the members of the Senate foreign relations committee, Republicans as well as Democrats, into his counsel. His policy has been neither Democratic nor Republican in any narrow sense but distinctly and wholly American; and he deals with this grave matter from first to last not as a party issue but as a national issue.

"The country knows," as the New York Herald declares, "that the President will not under any pretext plunge us into war, if war can be honorably avoided. It knows, too, that President Wilson would not willingly pursue any policy that would result in a prolongation of the internal strife from which the Mexican people are so grievously suffering. It understands, in a word, that President Wilson's policy is a policy of peace and that all his efforts are being bent toward finding some means to promote the restoration of order and tranquility in Mexico."

That this prudent and far-sighted course is about to bring desired results, there is abundant evidence to believe. It has not only arrayed the public sentiment and public judgment of this country squarely behind the administration but it has also won the hearty approval and support of foreign Powers. So thoroughly in accord with the Wilson policy are the leading Governments of the Old World that they are bringing to bear all the diplomatic pressure at their command to force Huerta into retirement. Thus deprived of all moral sympathy and of every means to replenish his exhausted treasury, this usurper who stole into brief authority through crimes that outraged civilization is now toppling to his fall. He must either accept the proposals of our Government, that he resign in favor of a provisional president who shall administer Mexican affairs until a constitutional election can be held, or else be crushed beneath the weight of his own crumbling regime.

When Huerta is eliminated, as he soon will be, the Mexican problem, so far as the United States is concerned, will be practically solved. And it will be solved without forceful intervention, without the war that would have burdened our country with incalculable ills; it will be solved peacefully and honorably, for all of which the prudence and foresight of President Wilson will deserve chief credit.

The Vital Need of The United States Army

"The vital need of the army of the United States is to have the people of the United States know more about it and care more about it."

Thus does Secretary of War Garrison, in a recent number of Harper's Weekly, sum up an issue in which thoughtful citizens are now particularly interested. His point is well taken. Public ignorance or indifference is responsible for most public ills. The impelling and guiding power behind Congress rises directly from the rank and file of the people; indeed, popular interest and support are essential to every sphere of government, if a nation's life is to be wholesome, efficient and secure. Congressmen cannot be expected to recognize the needs of the army unless their constituents recognize those needs; and, so, it is important above all else, as Secretary Garrison declares, that the average American citizen should know more about the army and care more about it.

His counsel in this regard is all the more trustworthy for the reason that he is pre-eminently a man of peace, with no tinge of the alarmist and no sympathy for the professional warseeker. "Militarism," says he, "with all its great financial and other burdens, is the last thing that I should advocate or that anyone connected with the war establishment advocates." Yet, he is none the less mindful of the wisdom, the absolute necessity of maintaining an army sufficient to uphold our national policies and protect our national interests in any contingency that might arise; for, as he well says, "It takes two parties to keep the peace and, at best, any nation can control only one party, namely, itself."

The Secretary of War does not advocate a large standing army but he urges earnestly and soberly the maintenance of an efficient army and the development of a reserve force which could be drawn upon in the hour of need. Only thus, he emphasises, can our present small army "effectively act as a school of military instruction for the nation and as a nucleus for the expansion that will be necessary in time of war." The fact is our one practical assurance against the cost and the burdens of a great army are the proper support and perfection of the present army, together with an adequate reserve force and an adequate navy. The country must either be intelligently prepared for emergencies that may arise or pay the staggering bills which lack of timely preparation always entails.

The remoteness of the United States from the tumultuous Old World, where clashing interests and ambitions are a continual menace to peace, have proved distinctly a blessing. We have no neighbor whose power or policy requires us to maintain a big army in tranquil times. But, as Secretary Garrison remarks, the expanse of sea that separates us from other great nations are no longer the safeguard they once were.

"The oceans furnish fine highways for the transportation of troops and supplies, and improvements in shipping have made it easily possible to utilize these highways over long distances. The distances, it is true, are still a protection; but it would be foolish to close our eyes to the fact that at various points of the public domain of the United States we are still vulnerable to attack. The great benefit accruing to us by reason of our distance from other nations is that it frees us from the necessity of maintaining an army upon war footing. We are free to count upon the time necessary to pass from a peace to a war footing. But this time is of little or no avail, if previous preparation for such passage has not been provided."

Americans are peace-loving people; they have no territorial greed to sate, no dollar diplomacy to ply, no entangling alliances to support; but they have certain national ideals that must be upheld and national interests that must be conserved. If their nation would be permanently peaceful, it must be powerful, for, weakness in an open invitation to attack. Let the United States be so strong that it will not have to fight, and it will then not only be free from the menace of war but also mightily effective in its influence for peace.

This is a matter, as Secretary Garrison declares, that comes home to the business and bosom of all thinking citizens. The army should not be regarded simply as a machine maintained against remote or imaginary dangers, but as a branch of all the people's vital interests. Its value are in no wise limited to contingencies that may arise either in the near or the faraway future; on the contrary it is of immediate and continuous use. It was the army that solved the great problems in the building of the Panama canal and carried forward the vast engineering and civil and sanitary tasks involved. It is the army that comes to the people's aid in disasters of fire or flood or earthquake. Its service in the field of sanitation and medical progress is almost immeasurable. Indeed, the army is a great constructive as well as defensive force in our national life. Its claims should receive generous consideration both at the hands of Congress and the public. It is a part of the country's common interests of which the people "should know more and care more."

Mark Twain Among the Pirates

In the September Strand appear some reminiscences of Mark Twain, written by Marion Schuyler Allen, the lady in whose house, in Bermuda, he stayed during the last months of his life.

"During his first visit to our home," she writes, "a touch of the picturesque signalized a step in our acquaintance, just such a scene as might have come out of one of his own books. The flagship Eurydus was entertaining, and we had received word that something unusual and mysterious was to take place during the afternoon. So we persuaded Mark Twain to go with us, on a particular boat which we had been warned not to miss. As the steady old steamer with its burden of light-hearted humanity calmly steamed through the Narrows, we were startled by the appearance of a ship's longboat, boasting a formidable gun and full of fierce-looking pirates! They were armed to the teeth and wildly gesticulating. Our ship was hailed, but on receiving no reply, three shots were fired across our bow, which quickly brought us to anchor. They boarded us so eagerly that they failed to secure their own craft firmly, and she was caught in the tide, swirled upon a rock, and sank in the channel. They swarmed over our ship in their blood-thirsty array, capturing the officers, two of whom were made to walk the plank in full regalia. They hauled down the British flag and flew the skull and cross-bones in its place. And when the crew and passengers were thoroughly intimidated they ordered the ship to proceed to the Pirates' Lair, officially known as the Eurydus, that awaited her guests, drawn up to the jetty, at the dock yard. The joke was wonderfully well done, the costume most realistic, and the acting so good that one felt transposed into the far-away days of Bermuda's early history, when tradition says that to be captured by pirates was nothing unusual, and almost to be expected, in *these waters. The refreshing piquancy of it all ap*pealed to Mark Twain, and this delightful adventure charmed him exceedingly."

(Arthur W. Howlett, in Manchester Guardian.)

I have just finished a journey which must ever be memorable to me. For of many appealing parts of the world few held such a lure for me as the Himalayas, which lair in their recesses of snow and forest some of the fiercest of earth's creatures. Their naked peaks glitter a hundred miles away, and their unfathomable ravines and forests even the Indian sun leaves damp and cold. The trees are sublime in their profusion and in their beardings of mosses and creeper drapery, and they throw out wholly unlooked arms across immense gulfs in which the eagle swirls.

Amid it all the narrow paths go twining, now clinging to some precipitous ledge, now caving deeply into a hillside, then coming out suddenly upon a corner that dominates a depth of immense profundity in which the very air seems to assume a tint of blue. At these corners cold winds come rushing by, edging along the cliffs, and salute one with the tang of the far-off snow. Elsewhere, where the track winds into the re-entrant of a ravine, the air is still, the sun is hot, and from the depths below creeps up, as through the mouth of some alchemist's funnel, the subtle odor of the pines. You may see a hut far down, with its row of terraces of cultivated land cut out of the steep above it, and a cow or buffalo grazing there, while a crumbling ruin lolls beside it.

The forest is full of citizens, furtive, busy and watchful. You know not what strange, wild creature slinks from your patch as it hears your footfall, nor if there be not a panther watching you with stealthy eyes from the shadow of an overhanging rock. As I have been walking I have twice startled khakum (barking deer) in the thicket beside me and seen them leap forth and away like arrows, with a noise of crashing boughs. The magnificent hill pheasants, pecking on the track among the droppings of the pack ponies, slide like shadows into the undergrowth as you draw near.

To a stranger this is all romance, but to the poor peasant it is sadly work-day. It is not only by the sweat of his brow that he must eat bread, but at the peril of his life. No place is so devastated by wild animals. They take their toll of the flocks and herds—aye, and of his family! In the verandas of the dark bungalow where I am staying is a printed notice of government offering 500 rupees for the destruction of a man-eating tiger that is infesting this region. Leopards are extremely bold, and seem to have no fear of man, though they seldom attack him. One, however, was destroyed this year—the famous Almora Leopard—which within five years had taken three hundred human lives.

Self Faith the Best Substitute for Genius

(Orison Swett Marden, in September Nautilus.)

If we could put a measuring line around a man's faith, it would give a pretty good estimate of his possibilities. No man ever does a great thing with little faith. If his faith is weak, his efforts will be weak.

Faith is the great leader in every achievement. It shows the path which leads the way to our possibilities. Faith is the faculty or instinct which knows, because it sees the possibilities within; it does not hesitate to urge us to undertake great things, because it sees reserves in us capable of accomplishing them.

How common it is for people to think that if they only had this quality or that one greater ability or better opportunity they would do wonderful things! As a matter of fact, it is not so much more ability or a greater opportunity that is lacking as faith in ourselves to do what we are perfectly able to do, and what we know we ought to do.

If we believe in ourselves we will be much more likely to do the larger things we are capable of than if we were to hold the self-depreciatory, lack-of-confidence attitude.

Many of us have native ability to enable us to reach a creditable position in life, but we lack the ability to get hold of ourselves. We lack the arousing yeast. Our ability lies deep and dormant in us. It needs expelling. A man must go mining for his ability. He will not find all of his gold upon the surface. Many of us have to drill through the hard strata and do a lot of blasting in our rocky natures before we bring out the gold nuggets.

One Kind of Loneliness

(Harper's Weekly.)

Ibsen makes one of his persons say that the greatest man is most alone. Shelley said of Wordsworth:

"Thou wert as a lone star," and Wordsworth said of Milton:

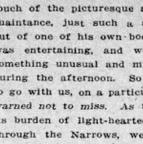
Perhaps, indeed, greatness has a loneliness which is harder to reach, but surely not more sorrowful, than that of common man. The great man is able to explain his loneliness, especially if his is the greatness of art, and everybody can be made to see it; but what of the loneliness of the most obscure of human beings—some shopgirl in a great town, some farmer's son alone and dreaming, some child with unknown parents? That loneliness is not less which has not the halo of greatness to give it glory.

OUR DAILY BREAD

XII. CORN AND OTHER HOT BREADS.

By Frederic J. Haskin



Hot corn bread still remains the favorite bread food with hundreds of thousands of American citizens. Notwithstanding the increasing use of raised white bread, the delicious hot corn breads of the southern states will not soon lose their popularity. Corn breads of various kinds are known in all parts of this country, but it is the flaky, white corn meal, ground in the old-fashioned water power mill, which is the basis of the corn breads so long the delight of epicureans in the south. It is being replaced in cities by other breads, not so much because it is no longer recognized as an excellent bread food, but because modern conditions are such that good corn meal is not so easy to obtain. The speed at which the modern roller process mills are operated produces more heat and, therefore, extract more oil from the meal than did the water wheel process. The water ground corn meal is, therefore, different in its chemical composition and distinctly different in taste. It is also more perishable, as the oil becomes rancid and in a few weeks causes the meal to lose flavor. Good meal must be freshly ground.

• • •

Several varieties of corn bread are recognized as standard by the true southerner. The hoe cake is most frequently referred to. This consists of nothing more than water, corn meal and salt mixed to the proper consistency. In old slavery days the colored laborers mixed it at each meal time and baked it upon the blades of their hoes by simply holding them over an out-of-door fire. But up in the "big house" hoe cake was just as popular as in the field, cook baking it on the top of the stove on a griddle, as every good southern cook does today.

• • •

The corn dodger rivals the hoe cake in popularity. Its ingredients are the same; water, corn meal and salt, but it is mixed stiffer. The cook molds it into shape with her hands and bakes it in the oven. It consists of rich, brown, crumbly crust with a small amount of soft crumb between. The true dodger is practically all crust. It has to be made fresh for each meal, and any left over is thrown away or used as chicken feed, but the process is such a simple one that the average southern housewife still feels that it is well worth the trouble to supply her family with so toothsome a food. Johnny cake is a term applied rather at random to several forms of corn bread. In most southern localities it may be baked either as hoe cake or dodger and the ingredients are the same, only the meal is scalded before mixing which renders it more elastic than when only cold water is used. The scalding process also produces a different flavor in the meal.

• • •

The far southerner also has what is simply known as "corn bread." It is made by mixing a fairly stiff batter of water, corn meal and salt, although occasionally sweet milk is substituted for water. Corn bread is of two kinds, "plain" and "short." The only difference is that the first contains no shortening of any kind, while the second has a small amount of lard or other fat added to it in the mixing.

• • •

When a more elaborate bread is desired, "egg bread" is baked. For this eggs are added, milk is used instead of water, and baking powder is added to give it lightness. The white of the eggs makes it possible to "raise" this bread, the albumen supplying the mucilaginous substance, taking the place of gluten in wheat.

• • •

Another corn bread in great demand for occasional use, especially for breakfast, is "spoon bread." In Virginia spoon bread is said to have always been more popular than farther south, although it is known throughout the entire south. This is made similar to egg bread, excepting that the meal is thoroughly scalded, and the mixture is thinner. It is baked in rather a deep pan and when finished has a crisp crust on the top and bottom, but inside is soft and custardy, so that it is served from the baking dish with a spoon. In many families spoon bread is a favorite breakfast dish and serves as a cereal. It is also used at many dinners as an accompaniment to the delicious southern fried chicken. A yeast bread is also made in the south by adding corn meal instead of wheat flour to the sponge used in making ordinary raised bread.

• • •

A distinct difference exists between the corn bread of the south and that made in other parts of the country. The southern corn bread is always made of the white corn meal. A true southerner regards yellow corn as unfit for human food. The difference between the flavor of the southern white meal and the yellow corn meal of the north is so great that it is difficult to understand how a person who is fond of one can tolerate the other. Another difference between the corn bread baked in the south and the middle west and that in the south is that the northern cooks are addicted to the use of sugar with corn and never make corn bread without a little flavor of sweet, whereas, the southern corn bread has absolutely no sweet added to the natural taste of the corn.

• • •

The corn bread of the north varies greatly in its composition, and is much more elaborate than that baked in the south. Frequently it is not all of corn meal. In fact, with the granulated yellow corn meal a little flour is almost essential to hold it together because the meal has so little tenacity. The formula used in many northern families and in some cooking classes frequently calls for a third or a fourth part wheat flour in every recipe for any kind of corn meal bread. Milk and baking powder are always used, unless sour milk or soda is preferred, and few women attempt to make corn bread in the north without adding eggs. Shortening, too, is almost always used together with more or less sugar, or molasses, according to the taste of the cook.

• • •

The New England brown bread as baked in colonial time consisted of a combination of rye flour and corn meal. This is still popular in many families, as is also rather a deep corn cake formerly known as spider cake. The old-fashioned cooking spider was a low, broad iron kettle standing upon three legs, and having a tight lid. A batter composed chiefly of corn meal and milk was poured into this and the lid fastened on, after which it was covered with hot ashes on the side of the hearth and baked slowly for several hours. The same recipe is used by modern New England women who bake their spider cake slowly in the oven in a covered pan.

• • •

Cona-a-hanna is the name of a sort of corn bread long used by the Cherokee Indians. The squaws still bake it in their reservation in Oklahoma. The corn is first soaked in a strong lye made from wood ashes after the colonial way of preparing hominy. The lye loosens the hulls. After this the corn is put into a large mortar made by hollowing out a log of wood and it is crushed or pounded with a heavy pestle. As the corn is broken it is taken out and riddled in a sieve made of cane to remove the last bit of hull and then returned to the mortar and pounded into fine meal. It is then boiled with red pepper and other seasoning and baked in cakes upon hot stones. These cakes will keep a long time as the lye remaining in the corn acts as a preservative.

• • •

In California, New Mexico and some parts of Texas the tortilla is still made after the fashion of Central America. To make this the corn is taken from the cob before it is quite dry, so that it contains a considerable amount of moisture. The women grind this up by rubbing heavy stones over it in a hollowed-out log until it has been reduced to a consistency which permits them to mould it into small cakes to bake before the fire. The tortilla as adapted by Americans is usually baked like griddle cakes.

Let Us Pray

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

Neither faith nor faithlessness is a modern thing. Abel was a man of faith, and Cain a man of faithlessness at a very early day in the history of the world.

In one of the oldest books in the Bible, the patriarch Job tells us the prosperous wicked were saying in his day, "What is the Almighty that we should serve him? and what profit should we have, if we pray unto him?" (Job xxi; 15). That sounds modern enough for the use of those in our times who doubt the existence of a personal God and question the efficacy of prayer.

In another book found in the Old Testament, we read of the singular view of God held by the Syrians, who said of Jehovah, "The Lord is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys," reflecting to the divine ability to deliver the Israelites when they occupies high ground and the inability of the Almighty to do any thing for his people when they fought on low ground. This seems to be the theology of the present Governor of the state of Kansas.

The press dispatches report that many people asked this Governor to proclaim a day of prayer for rain in view of the blasting heat and blighting drought which has been prevailing in "the Sun-Flower State"; but he refused to accede to their request, saying, "I believe in the efficacy of prayer, but not in the case of floods or drouth."

Now, one can understand a man who doubts altogether the efficacy of prayer, however one may differ with such a doubter; but what sort of belief in a prayer-hearing God is that which denies that prayer to him is of any value in a time of flood or drought? A God of that kind is certainly not to be desired in Kansas, where floods prevail in winter and droughts follow in summer.

But the Governor of Kansas has plainly expressed a theory of prayer which many others hold without telling it. They believe in a sort of enforced God, who is equal to doing little things, but who can not be depended upon in great emergencies. There are theologians, claiming to be men of "advanced thought," who are ever trying to minimize the supernatural in the Scriptures; they wish to retain the miracles, provided they may refer them to somewhat natural causes. For example, they can not believe that God divided the Red Sea and the Jordan by miraculous intervention for the deliverance of Israel, but they would explain that ordinary winds dried the Red Sea tolerably dry about the time the fleeing Hebrews reached the place, and that a land-slide arrested the flow of the Jordan until the host under Joshua's direction made their way across the waterless bed of the stream into Canaan. Carried to their logical consequences the theories of these men mean that God has so entangled in the meshes of natural forces he has lost his freedom, and that, therefore, he can do little miracles, but not big ones; that he might dry up a spring-branch, but would find a sea or a swollen river too much for him.

Those who talk much of what they are pleased to call "the subjective benefits of prayer", by which they seem to mean that one has no reason to think he gets nothing out of his prayer except a submissive spirit in his own bosom by which he is prepared to go along without murmuring the inevitable. For any objective benefit, outside a man's own breast, they have little or no regard.

Whatever may be true of all this theorizing, it is utterly at variance with everything we are taught in the Scriptures concerning prayer; and it is such that no human soul can rest in it at all in moments of trial. When men pray at all, they pray, expecting that their supplications will be heard and that blessings will be obtained beyond the mere composing of their own troubled hearts. They cry with the Psalmist, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." They do not believe that they are fleshless victims of fate, but the children of a loving Father whose ears are open unto their cries.

The wide-spread fatalism of our day accounts for the prayerlessness of many people, and it explains most of the common objections to prayer. It is supposed by some that fatalism has been overthrown and expelled from philosophy; but this is a great mistake. Modern materialism is fatalistic to the core; and some preachers who denounce in the pulpit predestination, embrace more than even the hyper-Calvanists believe when fatalism comes to them clothed in scientific terms. They talk glibly of heredity and environment, and view even the history of mankind as a fated movement running down "the ringing grooves of time". They realize little room in thought for the fact of human freedom, let alone faith in a free God.

There is not an abode soon to prayer, as the subject is taught in the Scriptures, which can stand for a moment if we believe in a personal God who is free, merciful, and powerful. But many men have lost faith in a personal God, and have really deified natural processes. For example, it is said that Mr. Andrew Carnegie was in Scotland a few years ago with a certain distinguished American minister of the Presbyterian Church, and the conversation between the two turned to these and kindred subjects. Finally the iron-monger, whose success in business has led him to indulge the conceit that he has all knowledge and can solve all mysteries, said abruptly, "Doctor, I believe in a personal God, Doctor." If so, has he legs and hands and eyes?" The minister, passing over flippant blasphemy of the egotistic money-king, replied, "Yes, Mr. Carnegie, I do believe in a personal God, and if you doubt it, it is impressed on your face in a mere thing, which is the faith of an idolater".

The scientific or theological theorizing which excludes a personal God from the world is no better than the hoary superstitions of Brahimism and Buddhism. In fact theosophy and kindred follies, which rest on the same basis as Buddhism, are finding acceptance in our country and Europe among those minds which have accepted most fully the system of modern materialism. We have the rankest idolaters among us, worshiping the forces of nature and denying the existence of a free God, while posing as philosophers and scientists.

But a free God still lives, and reigns, and hears the prayers of them who seek him aright. We may properly pray to him for air and sunshine, health and happiness, or whatsoever is proper for good people to desire. Our God is not over-powered by floods or droughts, as the befuddled Governor of Kansas vainly imagines. He is not handicapped by the natural world which he created.

Moreover, the privilege of prayer does not belong to men of extraordinary ability only; it is the privilege of our common humanity. This is the thought of St. James when he says, "Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly, that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit". (James v:17 and 18). Wherefore, St. James concludes that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much"; and outside of the history of Elias there are abundant instances of effectual prayer to vindicate the correctness of the conclusion of the Apostle.

Let men talk as they will, they are going to pray. There is not a man in all our land so sceptical and so wicked that he would be willing to sell his privilege of prayer or to pledge himself never to pray again. Therefore saith the Psalmist, "O thou that hearest prayer unto thee shall all flesh come". (Psiams lxv:12). Walking and working in a world in which we are beset with trials and sorrows on every side, we cannot cease to pray, nor turn away from the mercy of our heavenly Father.

As long as men believe in God at all, they will continue to pray to the God in whom they believe. Says Gulzot, "The universal and invincible instinct which leads man to prayer is in harmony with this great fact: he who believes in God can not but have recourse to him and pray to him". A prayerless world would be a godless world, in which no man of sense would wish to live. The modern world, with all its progres. whether real or imaginary progress, can no more dispense with prayer than the ancient world it which saints were plentiful and money more scarce than in our day.

Thomas Carlyle was a man the furthest possible removed from cant, and he said, "Prayer is and remains always a native and deepest impulse of the soul of man. . . . No prayer, no religion,—or at least only a dumb and lamed religion. Prayer is the turning of one's soul, in heroic reverence, in infinite desire and endeavour towards the Highest, the All-Excellent, Omnipotent, Supreme. The modern hero, therefore, ought not to give up praying, as he has latterly all but done".

Blessed is the man who amid all the burdens and cares and responsibilities of his mature life, retains the faith which he learned at his mother's knee and continues to pray to the God of her who first taught him to say at night-fall, "Now I lay me down to sleep". As the shadows of life's eventide gather about him, the long-day of toil drawing to its close, let him pass to her in the brighter world above with the words of the little prayer trembling upon his dying lips, "Now I lay me down to sleep".

Let us pray! Let us pray always, and not faint!

GARBAGE COLLECTING METHODS BAD, HE SAYS

Ernest G. Bentley Writes Card on Subject of Sanitary Department Methods

The following communication relative to the removal and carting of trash has been received by The Journal from Ernest G. Bentley:

Editor of The Atlanta Journal:

For the last two years there have been in the papers of Atlanta numerous articles on the necessity of keeping our houses screened, our garbage in cans and the alleys in the rear cleaned. It now appears that the ordinances for the preservation of the good health of the people are being complied with along these particular lines, but there is a very noticeable evil yet untouched. It is altogether fitting that we should be charged to keep our residences well cleaned, but it is also fitting that the city council should not be less careful in furnishing a more sanitary method of collecting this refuse.

In the busy congested parts of the city where there is less fresh air the careless practice of tossing garbage from cans on the top of big trucks rushing on with it uncovered is very detrimental to the health of the many who are forced to endure it. There are hundreds of germ bearing flies like those so often condemned in our backyards that hover around these collecting trucks and store up disease germs for the unwary people. Not only are pedestrians covered with these flying particles from the trucks but on street cars, when they are forced to stop at the collecting wagon, the passengers are subjected to the most obnoxious odors. The ordinary trash can deals out its quantity of germs when it bumps and jolts along the streets uncovered.

The sanitary cans are being used as ordered and the method of collecting the deposited matter is still in vogue and until the wagons are covered or changed there can be only a little improvement from the old state of affairs. The sanitary department would do well to investigate the methods employed in some of the other large cities and adopt a more modern plan. It is not enough to have a place to destroy Atlanta's garbage, we should have a safe and sanitary means of conveying it to the destruction plant.

Respectfully,
ERNEST G. BENTLEY,
Atlanta, Ga.

KILLED HER HUSBAND AND CHILDREN, THEN HERSELF

Wife Thought to Have Fired the House Before Her Suicide

(By Associated Press.)

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Aug. 23.—It was positively determined today that the body found in the ruins burned at the Sternweis home was that of Mrs. Sternweis. This was determined when gold and other false teeth were discovered in the ruins. The authorities take this as proof that Mrs. Sternweis murdered her husband and three children, burned the farm buildings and then committed suicide. The funeral for the five victims was held today.

The question of which died first, husband, wife or children, is expected to occupy the attention of the courts, as the estate is believed to be worth fully $100,000.

GIFT TO WILSON FROM LIBERIAN MISSIONARY

Bishop G. C. Penwick Presents Hand-Carved "Gospel Stick"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—President Wilson's latest gift from an admirer is a "gospel stick," elaborately carved with his monogram and several scriptural texts. The stick was left at the White House by the donor, the Rev. G. C. Penwick, a former bishop in Liberia, with a note explaining he had carved it himself.

The simply inscription, "Rev. G. C. Penwick," upon a card, coupled with the fact that the donor had been a bishop in Liberia, the negro republic, led to the misapprehension that the stick was the gift of a negro preacher. Bishop Penwick, however, came from a prominent Virginia family and has spent the mature time of his 72 years in the ministry. He has done much work among the negroes.

LOOKING BACKWARD OVER "THREE SCORE YEARS AND TEN"

Editor The Journal:

"Childhood's days now pass before me,
Forms and scenes of long ago."

We, my wife and I, with a few friends, are today celebrating our fifty-eighth wedding anniversary, and my seventy-ninth birthday.

In passing this point, or period in my mortal existence, my earthly career, I look back over the many years that are gone, to the days of my childhood and youth in Terminus and Marthasville, and my young manhood and more mature years in Atlanta, and I remember many incidents and people connected with the history of the birth of Atlanta; and I call to mind many of my old friends of the long ago, many of whom have long since passed over to the eternal shore; still it seems that I can almost see their forms and faces, and hear their once familiar voices, calling back from the echoless shore; but alas, their voices are hushed, and their tongues forever still.

I have not been a citizen of Atlanta in over thirty years—have been a citizen of Florida twenty-eight years, and while I have made many new friends in my adopted state, I must say they don't seem so loyal and true as my old Georgia friends, my old Atlanta friends of the long ago.

"There are no friends like old friends,
To calm our frequent fears,
When shadows fall and deepen
Through life's declining years;
And when our faltering footsteps
Approach the Great Divide,
We'll long to meet the old friends
Who wait the other side."

You, or perhaps some of your readers, may remember a reminiscent letter by this writer, dated August 21, 1909, four years ago, followed by several more from time to time, on the same line, which you published in your paper. In these letters I told of quite a number of the people, places and happenings in Atlanta, and her predecessors, the Terminus, and Marthasville, in the pioneer days now gone by.

In this letter I want to pick up a few things that I failed to weave into my letters of four years ago.

Before the Terminus was incorporated as the town of Marthasville, there were quite a bunch of pretty tough citizens in the little settlement, and they had things pretty much their own way till the town was incorporated and a board of commissioners elected and took charge of the town government, when there was a marked change, an improvement in the moral tone of the little burg.

Now, as the commission form of government is being discussed by the newspapers of the country, pro and con, and many towns and cities have and are adopting the plan, I want to say that Marthasville was the first town I ever heard of being governed by a commission form. And when the town was incorporated as the city of Atlanta and the charter was amended providing for the election of a mayor and council, instead of the board of commissioners, for the government of the town, and in 1848 the first election was held, and a mayor and council elected. At this first election the tough element form "murder row" concentrated all their forces against Jonathan Norcross, the candidate of the better, the moral class of citizens, and succeeded in electing Moses W. Formwalt the candidate of the tough, lawless bunch, to the position of mayor, the first mayor of Atlanta.

The main objection to Mr. Norcross by these people was that he was known to be a strong temperance man, and was the avowed enemy and opponent of the liquor business, and at that time the combination of the numbers and the money was pretty strong.

However, there was elected with Mr. Formwalt a good, law-abiding and law-enforcing council, which made the city government move on quite smoothly. Nevertheless, that portion of Decatur street opposite the Kimball house, or where the Kimball now stands, was at that time known as "Murrels Row," and with the new government things began to improve, gradually. Still Murrels Row was not changed into a Sunday school district, nor the gamblers and liquor men into Sabbath school teachers.

I remember that night, after the election and Formwalt was elected, a bunch of his followers, supposed to be from Murrels Row, assembled in the open space in front of Norcross' store, and with an old cannon proceeded to bombard the front of Norcross' place of business; and, while they didn't use any shot or shell, grape or canister, they certainly used up a lot of old paper as wads for their old gun, from the looks of the ground in front of Norcross' store the next morning. These fellows kept up their noisy rejoicing until a late hour. Nevertheless, they did Mr. Norcross no harm, but somehow, quietly built him up in the estimation of the better class of citizens.

Since I wrote my reminiscent letters of four years ago there have been quite a number of the old pioneer citizens passed away, several of whom I spoke of in those letters. Yes, a number of my old friends of the long ago have passed on to that bourne whence no traveler returns.

There was my much-esteemed, almost life-long friend, Anthony Murphy, who, the last time I saw him and his estimable wife, I met here in Tampa some five or six years ago. In the course of conversation on the old days in Atlanta, Anthony said to me: "George, how long have we been friends?" I replied that I didn't remember, but we had been friends ever since we first met, and had been acquainted, many of us, I thought had been at least fifty years. "Yes," he said, "we have been friends fifty-two years." Associated together in public affairs of Atlanta for a number of years, there was never anything to mar our friendship. Yes, I found Anthony Murphy a true and loyal friend, and as true as steel in every phase of life.

Having such an old and true friend as Anthony Murphy, and several more of my old-time friends, do you blame me for saying "There are no friends like old friends."

In my letters of four years ago, I told of my first trip to the Terminus, with my old boy friend Clem Green, and our experiences and what we saw on that occasion, and I told of the first things generally that I remembered about the Terminus, Marthasville, the early days of Atlanta. Among other things I told of my school days, of the first school and of the boys that I remembered, who went to that school with me, and many other incidents and occurrences, connected with the history of the early days of the infant Atlanta.

There is one other first occurrence that I failed to speak of in any of my former letters, though it is a somewhat grewsome subject, was the first hanging, the first execution of a man for murder, which was the hanging of a young man by the name of Radford J. Crocket.

Yes, Radford J. Crocket was the first self-confessed murderer hanged in Fulton county and the writer was one of the sheriff's guard, or escort, on that occasion. This affair, I think, took place some time during the summer of 1857. At that time there was no military company in Atlanta or Fulton county, therefore, Mechanics' Fire company, which had not been long organized, was temporarily turned into a military company, and commanded by Colonel C. R. Hanleiter, and thus equipped escorted the sheriff's guard for the execution. A copy of an Atlanta newspaper was handed me here and in which I found "The Birth of Atlanta, as Told by the Pioneer Women." The articles contributed by the members of this woman's pioneer society I read with much interest indeed, as I was familiar with many of the places and events narrated, and I call to mind, yes, I remember quite a number of the ladies composing the pioneer society, when they were in their school days.

In conclusion I want to say, God bless each and every one of these grand and noble old ladies, composing the Pioneer Woman's society of Atlanta, and may they be spared for many years yet, to perpetuate and keep green the memory of the pioneer days of Atlanta, is the sincere wish and prayer of one of the old Atlanta boys.

Yours truly,
GEORGE W. TERRY.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The cotton market more than recovered yesterday's loss during today's trading with October contracts making new high ground for the movement on less favorable weather over new crop areas from the southwest and bullish crop accounts.

Business was very active for a half session at this time of the year and in addition to renewed covering there was a bull support as well as indications of rather a better trade demand. Closing prices were very steady and within a point or two of the best at a net gain of from 20 to 23 points for the day.

Early weather advices included private reports indicating good rains at a few points in Texas and Oklahoma, but there was nothing to augment the effect of the good general rains in the drouthy sections, while the forecast was for clear weather in the western belt today and tomorrow. Liverpool reported a quiet week-end market, but was probably influenced to some extent by the disappointing weather advices, and in spots there were a shade better than due, and the local progress was 16 to 18 points higher. Realizing by odd lots and weak buyers caused some little irregularity right after the call, but the general tendency of prices was higher and active months sold 21 to 24 points above the close and figures of last night in the late trading.

A report from a traveling expert claiming that Texas no longer had a chance of a big crop, and that the possibility of a fair crop was diminishing with each day of continued dry weather doubtless helped the advance while there was also a bullish weekly review from Memphis reporting detioration in all states excepting the Carolinas. Weekly reports from the dry goods trade continued to indicate a good demand with comparatively small available supplies.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—Wacc wired scattered showers and rains over the belt east, north and west Texas, will do good.

Dallas says no rain reported in Oklahoma and west Texas.

The above gives generally fair weather in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Only rains shown 34 at Abilene and .54 at Corpus Christi. Cloudy in central and eastern Texas with good general rainfall over the entire district. Much rain in the northeast portion. Indications are for fair and continued cool weather in Oklahoma and Arkansas. Cloudy with possibilities of further precipitation in Texas. Cloudy and showery weather prevails in the Carolinas and Virginia.

Liverpool barely recovered its former parity and quote spots unchanged.

Our opinion of spots is higher and after some easiness caused by realizing, advanced further on the last hour to 11.95 for October. New York reports active support by the interests which led the advance early in the week. The Cordill report and official forecast of fair weather west with the expectation of bullish private condition reports next week were the principal reasons for the buying.

A short crop scare seems well under way, but much depends on whether the intention of getting foreign consumers alarmed and making them to enter more freely in the market for spots will be successful.

GILBERT AND CLAY COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.During the past week the market has had a material advance owing to large buying and steady support emanating from legitimate interests.

This buying was encouraged by the reports of deterioration in the crop in the Atlantic States, while domestic mill interests kept out of the market their purchases have been limited and the opinion prevails that they have bought cotton to cover against sales of goods already made. On the other hand, foreign advices speak of a poor demand for cotton owing to slackening trade. At the week-end showers to good rains have fallen in Oklahoma and Texas but the feeling is that irreparable damage to a large part of the crop in those states has been done and consequently the market maintains a strong tone despite liquidation and fresh selling for the decline.

BANK STATEMENT SHOWS BIG DEPOSITS AND LOANS

As Week's Gain in Cash Was Purely Nominal, Result Was to Reduce Excess Reserve

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The Financier says:

The feature of the statement made by the New York clearing house institutions today was an expansion of $8,956,000 in loans, which, accompanied by an increase in deposits amounting to $10,000,000, substantially increased reserve requirements.

As this week's gain in cash by the New York banks is purely nominal, reaching only $485,000, the result of these operations was to reduce the excess reserve by $2,525,050. This brings the cash reserve held by the New York banks at the present time to $22,175,150. The showing gives evidence of continued strength in the banking situation at this center.

THE WEATHER

Forecast till 7 p. m. Sunday.

Atlanta and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday.

Georgia—Local showers tonight or Sunday.

Alabama—Fair in north, showers in south portion tonight or Sunday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Generous rains fell during the past twenty-four hours over the drouth stricken area of Texas, ten feet east of Texas, with large amounts at Memphis, 1.10 inches, and at Atlanta, 1.04. The rain area now embraces only the lower middle states and New England under the influence of which disturbance will soon be removed down the St. Lawrence valley.

Cooler weather has prevailed over the greater part of the interior of the country, including the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, the Lake region, and the Rocky Mountain region and the Pacific slope.

More moderate temperatures prevail over the region affected by the hot wave, Oklahoma reporting on Thursday maximums of only 84 degrees, Kansas City 82, and Dodge City 80. It is still warm over Texas. Temperatures have increased somewhat in the Carolinas, but there is no station reporting below 50 this morning.

The weather at Atlanta will probably be fair tonight and Sunday, with northerly winds and moderate temperature.

WEEKLY STOCK REVIEW

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Speculation was held in restraint this week and the volume of business on the stock exchange fell away to small proportions. Price movements were hesitating and traders on either side of the market were disposed to embark upon extensive venture. The undertone was heavy in the latter part of the week but losses were not severe.

Uneasiness in the situation in the Mexican fangle was the uppermost consideration and various other depleting reports which came to the street played a part in unsettling stocks. Crop news was moved to second place as a market factor, and reports of rain in some sections affected by the long drouth were of little importance.

Reduction in the price of steel billets indicated a less satisfactory situation in the steel trade although new business for August was said to be somewhat larger than in July. In the money market there was a slightly easier tendency.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NAVAL STORES MARKET

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 22.—Under strong support, apparently of a strictly legitimate character, but in reality due to manipulative activity of certain exporting interests the local spirits of turpentine during the week ending yesterday developed a very material gain in prices which will likely be of great satisfaction to the producers.

The article topped 39¾c at the close of Friday's session, a net gain for the week ranging on generally from tone from 39 to 39¾c with supplies selling from 39½@39¾c. The total transactions at these prices reaching 1,120 barrels. The rise in values, however, became pronounced yesterday as it not altogether based upon a healthy demand hence the future trend is shrouded in uncertainty.

Europe is taking a bit more liberally of the genuine article and local brokers for domestic requirements are also a trifle busier than in several weeks, but the story of previous advances of the character under way at this time has shown that a decided recession of interest usually develops just as soon as the manipulative activity and support has been withdrawn.

Real conditions though warrant much better prices than have been secured for the part of the season which has been passed. The producers, even at the higher price limits cannot make money, for only a legitimate profit may be realized on their goods because of the comparatively poor quality of the respective grades of rosins, and in this regard it may be said with truth that there is a good possibility quality of rosins taking a radical upward sweep within the immediate future at least, the factors poor, etc., notwithstanding.

As regards the movement of supplies to this the premier port in the country the crop outlook to date does not bear out the opinion that the total movement for the season will be small. The rate in receipts thus far during the dates of the...season preceding and stocks in sight are materially larger than in the early part of the industry.

RECEIPTS & RAIT COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Cotton—The present week's activity has been a welcome relief in a great many ways, and in addition to the encouragement given to those in favor of higher prices there has been enough of the bear side to...cal note of, and that is that heretofore all bullish news and arguments could be lumped together, and all bears... items were accepted and greatly magnified. The reasons for the decided change in bullish sentiment this week are possibly no different than what existed heretofore, especially the likelihood of lower prices to such an extent that, as we stated in our telegrams last week, the Southwestern situation could any day become actually serious, and the crop movement have suffered their previous estimates considerably, especially the all important southwestern producing sections, damage to which would undoubtedly make this a shorter crop than we have actual requirements for.

Financial and industrial conditions generally money has eased, the government will provide a large amount of currency during fall, commercial paper is now in demand and the...ide of immigration continues toward our shore, all of which is favorable. While we are now facing a serious shortage in corn and a reduction...ut in cotton, we may safely say that...ere bountiful and we are rapidly facing a serious shortage in the world's wheat crop, unfortunate. There is steady improvement in European financial and political conditions, although...ourse there is some slowing up of trade after the costly wars of the past two years. Taking all these things into view they look as in favor of higher prices for the...ton crop, especially as there is no indication of legislation against future markets, and with the...ket considered as it certainly is at present and with spinners unprovided for their future requirements we believe a further rise in order until the new crop situation becomes...decidedly more favorable.

Cotton has had very severe liquidation has preceded in this market with the lowering of cotton...lents during the past two weeks and the technical condition tonight appears more favorable to us than for several weeks past. Spot...ket closed unchanged, 6.30; Corpus Christi, 6.54; Brownsville, 6.30; Henrietta, 6.30; Longview, 6.04; Sherman, 6.50; Snyder, 6.02. Missing: Llano, Marble Falls, Mexia.

Liquidation in Final Trading Carried Corn Down Very Fast

Improvement in the Fields Since Recent Rains and Estimates of Large Increase in Receipts Next Week Bear Factors

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Liquidation that in the final trading carried September corn down nearly 2 cents was the feature of the grain market today. At the close corn prices were 1-2 to 1c lower in the corn pit and this was increased in the other pits of 1-8@1-4 to 1-4; oats were down 1-8 to 1-2 and provisions unchanged to if 1-2 lower.

The improvement in the fields since recent rains was the chief bear influence in the corn pit and this was increased in effectiveness by estimates of a large increase in receipts of cash corn here next week. Loading longs began to unload early and as the day progressed the volume of the September option dumped on the market became larger. There was more than the usual free week-end selling of the other options and they declined also, but not to the extent of the near option. Cash corn in the sample market was off 1 1-2 to 2 cents. Easier cables also helped in shears.

Wheat dropped with corn in spite of reported sales for export of about 150,000 bushels. Improved milling call failed to help prices nor could the bulls check the downward trend even under alarge falling off in primary receipts. The bears were helped by clear weather in the spring and winter belts, favorable for harvesting, threshing and marketing the crop and for fall plowing and seeding in the latter.

Trading in wheat today was comparatively small. Primary receipts today were 975,000 bushels against 1,217,000 last year. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 956,000 bushels.

Free selling of oats on expected larger runs from the country next week carried prices down.

Provisions were narrow. The best business was in ribs, a local packer putting a larg eline on the market.

It's all romantic nonsense to call it that. The thing was nothing more nor less than a military campaign, based on the theory established by military men of tactics and a just get hold of something if the march to the sea. Or, to say that the object of art is to make this world more lovable and more loved.

Active Preparations to Meet the Demand for Equipment to Carry the Crops

The officials of railroads of this country are busily making arrangements for the transportation activities of the fall months. The necessities of the fall traffic always brings into use all the available rolling equipment of the country and as cars of all lines are scattered over large areas the work of bringing them back on their own lines is begun at as early a date as possible, as it is a most difficult task. Every car is needed for the crops and some time in the last three months of the year and a shortage of cars for moving the crops can be predicted with a certainty that it will be verified.

The time so far car equipment of the country has not been fully in use. The number of idle cars has ranged from 72,436 on February 15 to 60,605 on July 15. On August 1 this figure had increased to 76,049 and indications are that the uses for car equipment was practically the same, as far as the number of cars is concerned, on August 15. Each year the supply of idle cars had been exhausted and there was a shortage of 8,000 cars. The shortage increased to November 7 as follows: September 26, 17,750; October 10, 17,750; October 24, 49,000; November 7, 51,169.

The shortage of cars decreased to 51,112 on November 21, to 39,439 on November 30 and to 34,392 on December 14. On the last day of the year 1912 there were 17,065 idle cars. The shortage in this regard according to the kinds of cars was as follows:

	Box.	Flat.	Coal.
August 1	x27,837	x31,485	x9,185
August 15	x27,137	x33,853	x14,805
August 29	x8727	1,326	1,715
September 12	14,881	1,897	3,021
September 26	18,177	2,353	3,220
October 10	28,048	2,997	8,406
October 24	38,117	3,837	15,555
November 7	43,465	3,613	7,599
November 21	33,463	2,518	3,131
November 30	25,241	1,463	5,179
December 14	30,518	810	8,801
December 31	11,130	1,336	4,599

The freight car equipment in 1912 was more largely augmented than in any other year, so that there is a fuller supply of cars this year. The orders given for the building of cars in the country, and America aggregated 226,195, as compared with 167,117 in 1911. The actual number of cars built in 1912 was 148,357, or number of cars built in 1912 was 148,357, or more than double the number built in the preceding year. Of the freight cars built in 1912, 66,320 were of steel or steel underframe.

The total number of cars to be ordered in each year since 1901 in the United States, Canada and Mexico, was as follows:

Year.	Cars	Year.	Cars
1901	193,439	1907	341,751
1902	195,248	1908	310,315
1903	108,093	1909	137,744
1904	111,744	1910	226,195

AUSTIN & RAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Wheat: Wheat is now cheaper than it has been the cheapest thing we eat, and although we are sure of one of the most bountiful crops ever produced in this country, the growers are favored by a shortage in corn, oats, hay, etc., which will prove a decided help to the value existing in other years. Some of the largest European consuming nations are going to have a short wheat harvest and our own northwestern harvest is not entirely safe from frost, while there is the danger of early frost in the Canadian fields which makes for quick profits when it comes and for large crops when it is yet too early to expect extended advances in this market. We believe that the crop of 1913 will provide a liberal amount to be absorbed, but it is going to take a big crop to satisfy at these levels and we believe purchases made on the little declines will prove very profitable for the trade, and we expect to advise a permanent investment position.

Corn: The crop movement has grown rapidly and steadily worse for several months past, but the trade has not yet realized that the lower his estimate seems to be, the "Price Current" now estimating the crop at 2,700,000,000 bushels, is not so very far from 100,000,000 bushels under last year's growth. There is fine weather now in the corn belt and the only hope is of saving the crops more injured in the more northern parts of the corn belt, which are still badly in need of soaking rains. We look for some more general and heavy showers. One of the largest actual consumers is heavily long of September contracts and will not let go of them, and, as this concern was reputed a heavy buyer of corn in Argentina two years ago when the May option was at 82 cents, we believe legitimate demand will ensure very much higher corn prices for December and May deliveries. Of course there is a large amount of September corn in the market at handsome profits and beneficial rains might bring these out any time, but if so, we would consider it a chance to buy May for higher levels.

Oats: Outside of the old crop still militant against the September option and large deliveries will be made on September contracts, the oat crop is not progressing any too favorably and will not prove any drag to the market. When it is considered that the demand at these levels, oats will quickly advance to their proper level with corn, we believe purchases are in order at the moment, with handsome opportunities for the July which can be bought at going prices. Would rather buy oats than corn today.

Provisions: Heavy shipments have apparently let up for the time being and so many young pigs were marketed last month with contractions, lack of water, and high price of feed, with prospects still higher, that we are not likely to have the heavy run of hogs to market this winter we would have had otherwise. Our corn growing friends have the responsibility of securing cattle from Argentina, and we expect prices to advance for product and continue our buying advices.—M. F. Austin.

COLUMBIA DRY NOW; LOCKER CLUBS RAIDED

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 23.—For the first time in many years the city of Columbia is "dry." The lid is clamped down tight, and from now on South Carolina's capital will be a place where liquor or beer can be bought. The dispensaries closed their doors last night, and only places where the thirsty can get relief.

The city police, under orders from Mayor Gibbes, raided the so-called "locker" clubs so frequently and seized so much of their stuff that they had to go out of business. Formerly it was the custom to allow these clubs to open at certain intervals and take whatever was visible and make the proprietor put up a fine of $100 to $200 for his benefited by his nonappearance. This ran along for about two years until suddenly a few days ago Mayor Gibbes got to enforcing the laws so vigorously that the owners of the places where illegal traffic in liquor and beer has been going on had to close up.

State constables, acting under orders from the governor, raided the Columbia. The Metropolitan was the first club visited, and the locker system prevails. seized what refreshments were on hand and instructed the management that unless the keys were turned over the entire furniture of the clubs would be seized and an injunction taken out. Accordingly the bars are now closed and nothing heavier than soda water is allowed.

Let's Pretend

In the Land of Let's Pretend
O how good it is to wend!
Summer evening finds us there
In an old-time rocking chair
Going back in dreams to days
Of the oldey sweetheart ways.
Wishing wishes over, over,
All the world a world of clover!

Many a shadow dances there,
Flimsy in its balmy air,
Many a fancy that we know,
And that never quite came true,
Waves a hand to us in greeting
In this land of lovely seeming.
With the hopes, the joys of men
Sweet shadows of child again.

All things happier on earth
In this happy land had birth.
Ah, what splendid castles rose
High in air, what magic glows
Or rainbow light led on to dreams
Of sublime, fairy realms,
And what harmless joy to wend
Through the land of Let's Pretend!

Often still I love to go
In the way we used to know!
Often still I feel the spell
Of the things we loved to tell
We would have and do some day!
Down the road many a merry way,
Where we made believe that love
Tipped and towered all the above.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times Democrat says: Again the government failed to confirm the previous day's private rain reports from Texas and Oklahoma. This sort of thing has begun to get on the nerves of the talent, and even those bulls, who in the past have been most outspoken in support of the accuracy of the government data are ready to believe that beneficial rains have come to many sections of the west without being indicated by the government. This creates a wide open question in the minds of both talent and trade. The mere fact that there is reason to doubt the complete dependability of any information which by the rings only injects the element of uncertainty where assurance alone should exist. More particularly is this true at this time because tomorrow the data on which the government will predict the crop condition percentages will be made up. Naturally then the question arises: Will the government crop condition data be in a measure based on government weather information in so far as it applies to the crop, or will it be based on the status of the crop, government weather to the contrary notwithstanding. The theorist who depends on the government weather reports exclusively must have bullish condition percentage figures for Texas and Oklahoma, while the man who accepts private rain reports from the belt will anticipate a much lower value.

Map shows generally fair Texas and Oklahoma. Light rain reported from Cameron, 54 at Corpus Christi, although private reports say rain over 2 inches in many sections of south Texas, with general rainfall light to moderate. Much cooler north Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Helena (Ark.) World says: Conditions generally cloudy with further showers in Texas; cloudy, unsettled, showers in other states east Atlantics.—Keller.

Dallas News: Rains reported from scattered points in Oklahoma and Texas. Four inches at Sherman, Tex.

Cordill's report very bad central Texas, was expected so and predicted yesterday.

Weco says: Showers and thunderstorms up to inch in east Texas, parts of north and west Texas still do good.

Forecast:

Louisiana—Tonight and Sunday unsettled, showers; Mississippi, showers in portion tonight and Sunday; light northerly winds on the coast.

Arkansas—Unsettled tonight and Sunday; fair tonight and Sunday.

Oklahoma—Fair tonight and Sunday.

West Texas—Tonight and Sunday generaly fair.

Kentucky—Fair tonight and Sunday.

Georgia—Fair tonight and Sunday except showers in north portion tonight and Sunday.

North Carolina—Fair in west, showers in east, and probably showers in north portion, fair in south portion tonight and Sunday.

Mississippi—Generally fair tonight and Sunday.

Cordill's report very bullish.

Weather conditions have been buying for the past few days were the principal buyers this morning. Commission houses seemed to be buyers also. Wiggin and Dulin were reasonably lending buyers. Cordill's report was bullish. It said there was considerable rain and considerable deterioration and feeling is growing stronger every day. It is believed 1,000,000 crop estimates will be lowered from now on, probably.

Reports coming in and weather news all over the belt very bullish.—Tate.

Bullish weather reports and good showers, few sections local showers, generally unimportant, Oklahoma and Texas showers much improved, except weather much cooler.

STOCK GOSSIP

Dow Jones' Summary: Hearts needing war funds seek Wall street today. Mr. Harry Hustis elected vice president of New Haven in place of Mr. Bishop, resigned. Mr. Hustis is president about November 1. International Mercantile Marine will contract for construction of $3,000,000 dry dock in Boston. Pennsylvania reported in market for 150,000 tons of 25c rail. Steel corporation subsidiary 100,000 tons foundry iron valley basis at $14.25. Holiday in Mexico during the industrials declined 2.20. Of active rails advanced .31.

Bonds: Irregular considering the uncertainty of the Mexican situation and what activity there is, seems to be running into speculative channels. Rails generally firm for an advance as the pools working in these issues are not disposed to sell stocks unless there is an advance at this level. Hear Third Avenue is ready for a good movement. Interborough preferred should sell considerably higher.—Potter.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter Ocean—Some of the wheat bulls say that last night's rains will be the signals for an upturn and that the movement of winter wheat will be light. We do not think there will be sufficient advance to induce liberal sales by holders. We do not think the present slump in corn in past few days and local short interest increased. Many of those in a bearish control. Corn: Weather map and reports tend to talk the price lower than by actual short sales.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: Wheat—Look for a narrow market today, generally clear over entire belt. Local professional sentiment very bearish. Corn: Weather generally clear over entire belt.

Kansas City says wheat and corn bulletin shows rain in Kansas or Oklahoma and only .4 at Springfield, Mo. Temperatures generally below 92 Kansas, Missouri, 84.

VICTIM POINTS TO NEGRO AS GUILTY ASSAILANT

Woman Identifies Him Among Four Other Blacks Brought Before Her

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 23.—The negro, William Farr, held in the penitentiary here, was picked out from four with criminal assault on a white woman of Spartanburg county, was positivey identified by the victim here today. She picked him out of a bunch of five negroes who were dressed exactly alike in citizens' clothes at the penitentiary here by the chief clerk of Farr she said, "This is the negro."

The Spartanburg woman, accompanied by her husband and father-in-law, had come to Columbia early this morning with Solicitor Hill and Sheriff White, of Spartanburg, for the purpose of identifying the negro.

Solicitor Hill and Sheriff White arranged with the penitentiary officials that four other negroes and Will Farr should be assembled in the prison and exactly alike, even to their hats. They were placed in chairs down one side of a room in the penitentiary and told to stand up when the victim, Mrs. Mary Ripley, of the penitentiary guard,' standing by to see that this injunction was carried out. The victim, accompanied by her husband, father-in-law, Sheriff White and Solicitor Hill, walked into the room and Sheriff White asked her to point out Farr. She told the negroes all to stand up. She then commanded them to turn their backs which was promptly done by the negroes. Then she said the lady then raised her finger, pointed directly at William Farr, and said, "there is the negro who assaulted me." Sheriff White asked her to step closer and be certain. Never once did she waver in her identification.

The negro then brought here for safekeeping by Chief Hayes, of Spartanburg, after Sheriff White had beaten off a mob which stormed the jail in an effort to lynch the negro, denied his guilt.

While the stage was being set for the identification the negroes were closely watched and during the whole time there were several of the penitentiary guards in the room.

Solicitor Albert E. Hill announced this afternoon before returning to Spartanburg that the special term of the Spartanburg criminal court called to try this negro had been postponed until the third Monday in September, the 16th, this being necessary to get in the twenty days required by law. Mr. Hill said the negro, William Farr, would certainly be tried at that term of court. He said the court would last for one week.

Swineburne No Tobacco User

(London Chronicle.)

Tennyson was the smoking poet of the Victorian era. His two great contemporaries—Browning and Swineburne—hated tobacco. Especially Swi burne. He expressed himself with characteristic vehemence. He had written to the Arts club, where he sought, and sought in vain, a room that was free from the fumes of tobacco smoke.

At length his fury overcame him. "James the First," he exclaimed, "was a knave, a tyrant, a fool, a liar, a coward; but I love him, I worship him, because he slit the throat of that filthy blackguard Raleigh, who invented this filthy smoking!"

BUYING LAST WEEK WAS AS ACTIVE AS DURING CONVENTION

SOME REMAINED OVER; OTHERS CAME BACK

Influence of Convention Was Far-Reaching; Was by No Means Confined to Actual Period of Two Weeks

According to the program of the Southern Merchants' convention the days for Atlanta's wholesale houses to be thronged with visiting merchants ended a week ago yesterday, but the experience of several houses during last week has shown that the "Au revoir" next that date on the program did not prove true.

Not entirely so, at any rate. Many hundred visitors said their goodbyes that day, but for many more the leave taking did not come until several days later. In fact, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday were days when the word was "Greetings" nearly as frequently as "Au revoir."

These merchants who came during the first days of the week for their fall buying visit to the jobbers made things as active during most of last week at some of the wholesalers as the two convention weeks had been.

To avoid the crowded conditions of the salesrooms during the convention period was the reason some of the late buyers did not come earlier. There were some who were here on their second trip, having been here during the big two weeks to have a good time, coming later to attend to their buying.

The accumulation of orders taken during the last several weeks has kept the house force at some of the big dry goods houses working at night during most of last week to catch up.

Practically all of the road salesmen left for their territories last Sunday and the unexpectedly heavy house sales with which the week started gave the house forces all they could handle, making the night work for the filling of orders necessary.

"Our billing and shipping departments had to work from 7 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. the first half of the week to catch up," said H. K. Rambo, of John Silvey & Co. "Monday and Tuesday there were so many buyers that we hardly knew the convention was over."

"We had an unusually good number of customers Monday and Tuesday," said C. J. Williamson, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company. "As we were still working on the billing and shipping of goods sold during the week before, the start of this week for us was as busy as any of the days during the convention."

At the Ragan-Malone company the bins on the stock floors were well filled during the first days of the week with goods selected by late comers to market.

"It has kept us hustling to handle promptly the house sales of this week and the left-over business of the closing convention week, too," said C. F. Barnwell, of this company.

There are other companies that had more or less of the hang-over house trade and all the jobbers found their sales for the last days of the two weeks' period as good, if not better, than the first days.

B. H. PELOT JOINS ROSENFELD FORCE

Returns to His Old Firm and Will Cover Mississippi, Starting This Week

B. H. Pelot, who has been traveling out of Atlanta for the last fourteen years and well known to many of the sample case fraternity, is now with the Rosenfeld company.

Mr. Pelot has been with the Gate City Coffin company for several yeas, but going out with a line of house furnishing goods in his sample trunks will be no new experience for him, as he was one of the salesmen for the Rosenfeld company when that concern started ten years ago and for several years was one of the leaders in getting their line established with the trade. He also worked the same class of merchants later as a road man for the Atlanta Woodenware company.

He will cover Mississippi for the Rosenfeld company now, starting on his first trip this week. He has traveled that state before too.

CONVENTION AFTERMATH

ATLANTA BAKING CO. ENJOYED BIG TRADE

The sales record of the Atlanta Baking company furnishes an illustration of how interests not directly connected with the merchants' conventions are helped by the presence of the two to three thousand visitors here on such occasions.

The addition of this number to the floating population and the increased patronage of the restaurants and hotels that it brought caused the city sales of this baking company to jump to a figure of several hundred loaves a day more than before the convention.

The Atlanta Baking company supplies many of the restaurants and hotels and the heavy demand from these customers continued through the two weeks, immediately dropping back to normal at the end of the convention period.

I. R. BANKS WILL SOON GROW OUT HAIR AGAIN

I. R. Banks, of the shipping department of the H. L. Singer company, has had his hair clipped so close during the hot weather that he has the appearance of being bald. They say at the Singer company that he will soon ,however, begin to let it grow so that his appearance will be at least somewhat improved by October 1 when Mrs. Banks will return from Franklin, N. C., where she has been spending the summer.

SAW MILL INQUIRIES SHOW LARGE INCREASE

It will be an active season with the saw mills if the rate at which inquiries in regard to saw mill machinery are coming in to the Malsby company, the Atlanta machinery concern, is any indication.

This company reports the number of inquiries from prospective buyers of such machinery as 25 per cent ahead of this period last year, and are expecting the next several months to show a good trade in saw mill machinery.

J. C. Malsby, of this company, is on the road for a three weeks' trip, and also J. H. Shipp. J. D. Malsby will also be on the firing line in a few days.

Says Expression, "From Tinkers to Evers to Chance," Represents Highest Form of Baseball Efficiency

CLOSE TEAM WORK SHOULD PREVAIL AT EVERY PLANT

Of the Atlanta Agricultural Works.

From Tinkers to Evers to Chance.

Not a salesman on the road today but accepts that expression as the only method of putting into six words the greatest and most effective inside team work the world has ever known. Although this combination has been broken, the memory of it will always linger as a slogan for the harmonious pulling together of any set of men in any line of business.

From salesman to manager to superintendent.

Ah! That is something else again, and yet it gives the traveling salesman for any manufacturing institution the opportunity of his life to start a double play on every trip which will bring into errorless action both the manager and superintendent of his plant and complete the play in such a manner as will make his competitors sit up and take notice.

The manager of any manufacturing concern has his own troubles in making contracts for raw materials, financing, directing operations of the sales force, plant superintendents, etc., while the superintendent has his troubles in properly producing the plant's product in a perfect manner at the least possible expense for waste of material, cost of labor, unnecessary handling and a thousand and one minor details which hourly present themselves to him.

ENTER THE SALESMAN.

Right here is where the fine Italian hand of the salesman gets in his part of the team work which perfects an ideal organization. If he would prove a successful salesman, he must first know the detail construction and the every use to which his articles are to be subjected and the history of the results accomplished by the different uses. He must know the nature of the trade in the different sections and the customers to whom he is to sell, and, above all, he must study the manufacture of the article produced by his competitors, know to what uses they are supposed to be put and what results are accomplished when put to such uses, observe the man-

CAMP LAUNCHES PLAN TO BOOST ATLANTA GOODS WEDNESDAYS

President of Retail Grocers Wants to Acquaint Atlantians With Home Products

Allied with the movement to secure a permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, but distinct from it and promising to become a wonderful achievement in itself, is the plan suggested by O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association of Atlanta, of uniting all the retail grocers in an agreement to push Atlanta-made goods every Wednesday.

Mr. Camp advanced the idea some time ago and recently brought it into additional prominence in a speech made by him at a meting at the manufacturers called at the Ansley hotel to urge the permanent exhibit project.

Mr. Camp declared that he believed in Atlanta and in Atlanta enterprises and that the plan of pushing Atlanta-made goods once a week had been informally discussed by the retailers and

FORTY-THREE FIRMS HAVE SIGNED FOR EXHIBITION SPACE

Remaining Space Will All Be Taken Before the Middle of This Week, Is Prediction of Secretary Leahy

COTTON INTERESTS TO OCCUPY ENTIRE FLOOR

Will Show Cotton From the Growing Plant Stage to the Finished Products of Fabrics, Meal and Oils

"I am confident that all the space will be signed up and the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods will be assured by the middle of next week," said W. H. Leahy, secretary of the industrial bureau and acting secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. "In fact, the exhibit is assured now. It only remains for the manufacturers who have promised to take space to actually sign up for it.

"Forty-three firms have already signed, and the Southern Coton Seed Crushers' association, the cotton mills and the textile and other interests have under consideration subscription to an entire floor, where they intend to exhibit cotton from its growing plant stage clear on through to the finished products of fabrics and oils.

"As the project gathers momentum it is becoming more evident to the manufacturers here what a year-round advertisement the exhibit would be and what a convenience it would prove to visiting buuyers, and how it would serve to spread the fame of Atlanta-made products, not only here among the people of Atlanta, where they are by no means known as they should be, but also throughout the entire south, and year by year throughout the nation."

Mr. Leahy's bureau is preparing to issue, by September 1, the first of its bulletins on the industrial progress of Atlanta. The first issue will be replete with interesting things about the city and its manufacturing possibilities. It will contain a full account of the permanent exhibit campaign and of the good results that are expected to be obtained from the exhibit when once it is in operation. The new "blue sky" law will also be treated in full to show outsiders the safeguards of investments which the laws of Georgia have provided.

The following is the list of manufacturers so far who have subscribed to space in the permanent exhibit:

Southern Engraving company, Frederick Disinfectant company, J. K. Orr Shoe company, E. Van Winkle company, Atlanta Gas Light company, Southern Upholstering company, Atlanta Stove Works, Southern Spring Bed company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper, Gholstin-Cunningham company, All Star Manufacturing company, Byrd Printing company, Norris (Inc.), Willingham-Tift Lumber company, Triangle Paint company, J. DIXIE PICKLE COMPANY DOUBLES WORKING SPACE

Installs New Vacuum Sealing and Assorting Machinery and New Evaporator

Work has been started on the renovation of the plant of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company on Marietta street.

When the improvements are finished the company will have double the working space they have now and also large and better storage quarters. The capacity of the plant has been increased materially since the concern was incorporated several months ago, and after the present changes in the factory are made they will have four to six times the capacity of six months ago.

Vacuum sealing machinery has recently been installed and a new evaporator and new assorting machine have been ordered.

The company was formerly the Dixie Vinegar works, but have now added many varieties of preserves, etc., to their line of products.

ter of packing and shipping by his competitors and the finish they put on their goods. In short, the great advantages the traveling salesman has of daily coming in contact with these matters must be grasped by him and studied in such a way that he is a veritable traveling encyclopedia in his line of business.

Thus far many of us traveling salesmen today have reached the point where we can easily measure up to these requirements, but like a bone-headed shortstop of a bush league team, we stand fumbling the ball while our latest competitor reaches first and one who had already advanced to second on account of our indifference romps in home with the winning contract. While we fumble and hold the means of putting a crimp into them before they had ever crossed the initial bag.

THE MANAGER'S PARK.

The manager plays his position perfect, the superintendent is always on the job and alert for speedy and heavy action, but if we traveling salesmen fail to put into quick and definite play every move made by our competitors to win the coveted contracts, sooner or later an erstwhile highly touted salesman will be given his unconditional release to return to the tall and uncut timbers in the bush league territory.

What I mean is just this. Competitors in all lines are spending large sums of money yearly invading each others' territory. With each invasion comes new ideas of manufacture, new ideas of selling, new ideas of advertising, new ideas of packing and shipping and new ideas in everything. It does not require much search on the part of the salesman to observe these new ideas as they are daily impressed forcibly on him by the buyers in their arguments in an effort to get a lower price from him on his particular line. Having obtained these new ideas, my opinion of the play to be made is to immediately fire them in full and explicit detail to the manager who, even if he does not catch the man of the keystone and relay to first in time to catch the batter, you will be the means of holding your competitors on the bags while the next man strikes out when it will then be the opportunity of your plant to advance a few new ideas through the infield of your competitors and regain some of the lost ground even if your factory can not forge ahead and win the game.

PLAY BALL.

Turn the ball loose, boys. As soon as the dope hits your mit first it to the manager who will in turn make a quick relay to the superintendent and put a stop to your competitors' batting rally. You may not make the play perfect every time, you may be hooted by the bleachers for monoheadedness once in a while, but by a continual pumping of all such information into the home in written form and in an explicit manner, you will sooner or later find an opportunity to make an unassisted triple play and see your name written in the hall of fame while you will have the pleasure of writing it yourself on the back of a good sized monthly salary check.

Study team play and remember that you have more of a duty to perform to your company and to yourself than to merely hit 'em to the outfield and be left stranded at third when your competitors come to bat.

had met with unqualified indorsement and that he intended to see that the idea was worked out into general practice by Atlanta grocers.

"It is our intention," said Mr. Camp, in commenting further on the plan last week, "to get the retailers to bring to the notice of the people of Atlanta the food products that are made by Atlanta factories. This we will do every Wednesday as soon as the Wednesday summer half holidays are over. By our order boys, by telephone, and by advertising signs posted in our places of business we will help place in Atlanta households Atlanta-made goods. When once they are placed there, they will speak for themselves.

"I, as a dealer, never knew of the extent and superior quality of the goods manufactured here until I made an investigation. And I am sure the housewives of the city know less about such goods than I did. Our Wednesday boosting days will help educate the people of Atlanta about the fine products that they can obtain right here at home.

"I think the proposed Wednesday boosting movement will prove a great feature in the progress of Atlanta and will be of lasting benefit not only to the manufacturers themselves but to the grocery trade all along the line."

B. F. DODSON WILL TRAVEL TEXAS FOR ORR SHOE CO.

A new firing liner with the J. K. Orr Shoe company, who will leave Atlanta Tuesday for the "front," is Ben F. Dodson.

He will work on the far frontier of the Atlanta jobbers' territory as the field he will cover is northern Texas. He has traveled that territory for the last several years for a Milwaukee shoe company.

Mr. Dodson says that Atlanta as a shoe market is growing stronger all the time in Texas and that he feels much pleased over going out with an Atlanta line.

"DOWN TO FLOOR" SHOW CASES NOW PREFERRED BY TRADE TO COUNTER CASES LONG POPULAR

P. J. M'GUIRE.

Of the Atlanta Show Case company, explaining the new and old styles of show cases. He declares that general storekeepers are taking more pains than ever to have their goods attractively displayed

Newer Style Permits of Better Display of Goods and Is Coming Into General Use, Plain Pattern Cases Instead of Elaborate Designs Are Also Much in Vogue

"Seventy-five per cent of the show cases we sell now are of the variety that reach to the floor, while five years ago the reverse was true, 75 per cent of the demand then being for the counter cases," says P. J. McGuire, of the Atlanta Show Case company.

The show case business is a good barometer and index of the conditions and tendencies in retail mercantile affairs and methods. The point mentioned above by Mr. McGuire is especially interesting as showing to what extent the tendency toward a better display of goods in the retail stores is developing.

"Ten years ago," says Mr. McGuire, "the average small town merchant would not even consider going to the expense of fitting out his store in 'floor' cases and they were not in many of the stores of the larger towns.

"Gradually their popularity has grown, however, and they are the kind that go into most of the new stores now as well as having replaced the counter cases in many stores already established."

Another change in show case styles has been caused by the vogue of mission style furniture, most of the show cases now being built along simple, plain lines with none of the fancy bases and finishings they formerly had.

The most popular show case with the Southern merchants now, as reflected by the sales of the Atlanta Show Case company, is the plain patterned "floor" case, all glass on front, sides and top.

BELIEVES IN THE RIGHT OF MAINTAINED PRICES

H. L. Singer Thinks They Would Work Justice and Stability in Grocery Trade

"I am heartily in accord with the effort of food manufacturers to establish their right to fix the retail price at which their goods should be sold," said H. L. Singer, president of the H. L. Singer company.

"In my opinion a right it is and one that means much to the entire grocery business.

"I think that instead of trying to contend that the fixing of such a price is in violation of the law, it should be made a law that manufacturers should sell to all alike so that no person could get goods at a lower price than another.

"There should be a liveable, reasonable price for all commodities sold and there should be a starting point for fixing this price. The manufacturer should do it because he is familiar with all the factors that go to make up the cost of production.

"The cutting of prices of a nationally advertised products which are invariably handled or a close margin is ruinous to the trade. The price cutter uses them as "leaders" to attract trade to his store and is thus "ridding" the advertising which the manufacturer has secured at great expense. In this way they try to put at naught the efforts of brains and money that have gone to build upon a great business after years of work.

"Price cutters do not succeed in the long run. They start in a price cutting war and the weakest among them are driven to bankruptcy, and more mercantile failures are thus brought about. Had they maintained a reasonable price, both for themselves and for the consumer, they would have gone on in business and become successful citizens, and their business would have been another factor in the growth of their town and state.

"In other lines of manufacture, the retail price seems to fixed without object, but not so with food manufacturers. They seem to have to stand the brunt of the contest for their right."

FRAZIER CO. GETS BIGGEST ORDERS YET

Among the biggest sales of feed stuffs ever made in Atlanta are the two orders recently landed by the J. D. Frazier company from the Atlanta Baggage and Cab company, and the Morrow Transfer company.

Each of these concerns took six thousand bags of the Frazier concern's mixed feed, which is an Atlanta product, being mixed in their own plant at their place on Marietta street.

In addition to the mixed feed they secured from the Atlanta Baggage and Cab company the contract to supply them twenty cars of hay.

The big orders were secured by Clark Frazier.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

J. C. Mathews, manager of the mail order department of Montag Brothers, is at St. Simons island and will be there another week.

R. C. Hipp, office manager of the John Deere Plow company, is spending his vacation at his home at Manchester, Ohio. He will return to Atlanta about next Sunday.

The sales force of the Hirschberg company are keeping the house force busy these days with orders for school supplies. It is the height of the season for shipping this class of goods to the retailers, preparing for the opening of schools next month.

The fall selling season for the All-Star Manufacturing company will start about September 1, when all of the road force, most of whom are now in Atlanta taking a rest, will get busy.

William Shoemaker, south Georgia representative of the John Deere Plow company, who has been sick for several weeks, is back on the firing line again. He left Atlanta for his territory Thursday feeling quite well again.

S. G. Woodall is doing some road work again for the Ward-Truitt company. He was with this company about a year ago. He spent last, week in north Georgia scouting for business for them, and is reported to be sending in some good orders.

Lewis Parker has returned to his first love, to which he was faithful for six years — the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company. For the last year he has been on the road for the Ward-Truitt company, and kept up the good record as a salesmen there that he started at Dougherty-Little's. He will begin in his new connection this week.

D. P. McDaniel, the Ward-Truitt company firing liner, lost no time in getting back in his territory after the convention, and his record for the week shows that he lost no time in getting down to business.

J. E. Almand, of the A. E. Adams company, who has been off the road two weeks on account of the illness of his wife, was back on the firing line last week and was going it pretty strong to make up for lost time.

W. O. Stamps, of Fain & Stamps, will hold down the position of shipping clerk this week, during the vacation of Allen Edwards. This position will be nothing new to Mr. Stamps, as it was the one he filled for a long time during his early days. Mr. Stamps spent two days last week visiting the trade with Cliff Edwards along the Southern railroad. "I found the crop prospects to be splendid everywhere," said Mr. Stamps.

C. E. Cross, of the E. L. Adams company, spent last week on vacation.

J. W. Clinton and E. M. McCalman, merchants of Bremen, Ga., were callers at the E. L. Adams company last week.

Sport Ramsaur, of Fain & Stamps, celebrated his birthday Saturday. Curiosity to know how old he is is very marked among the office force. But Sport will gratify it no further than to set for them a problem on the order of "How old is Ann?" "I've been in the wholesale grocery business," says Sport, "for eighteen years. Therefore, how old am I?" It's a nice problem. See if you can work it. Any answer varying from 30 to 60 will do.

H. P. Loveless, of the shipping department of the Consolidated Paper company, made a successful sales trip last week to Lawrenceville, Winder and other points on the Seaboard. E. E. Shyer, of this company, returned to headquarters Saturday from Rome, Georgia.

The "ins" at Fain & Stamps', Saturday, were W. Y. Bailey and J. C. Owens.

J. M. Burch is the new addition to the traveling force of the E. L. Adams company. Mr. Burch will cover northeast Georgia, and will begin his first trip for his new connection Monday.

Bill Gaston, of Fain & Stamps, declares that the Firing Line certainly is read by the home folks. He cites one item about his going fishing with an auto full of liquid refreshments. He says that item was undoubtedly read, and read very closely at that.

J. S. Cheek, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, has just closed the best week's business he has had this season.

C. D. Dickinson, of Brown, Perryman & Greene company, contended yesterday it was about time his name was in the Firing Line columns. He could point to stunts he has pulled that we might mention, but here's your name anyway, Mr. Dickinson. You're a good fellow.

Al N. Greene, of the Brown, Perryman & Greene company, who returned from a trip yesterday, says he grows more enthusiastic every day over the outlook for fall business.

ATLANTA PATRONS WILL HAVE BIG ADVANTAGE

Season Will Require Many Fill-In Orders, Best Obtained From Home Market

"The southern retail merchant, who has bought for his fall stock in the Atlanta market, is going to find it a greater advantage this season perhaps than ever before," says C. J. Williamson, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company.

"He is going to have to make more fill-in orders," continued Mr. Williamson, whom asked his reasons for this statement. "Most of the retailers of the small towns have alowed their stocks to run very low this year and even though they have been buying freely recently they are still not going to be very heavily stocked when their fall selling season begins.

"On the other hand, the excellent crop conditions give such promising prospects of a big fall trade that it is my prediction the average retailer in the district we Atlanta jobbers cover is going to do such a business that he will find it necessary to make almost daily mail orders to replenish his stock.

"And when this condition comes every merchant that has secured his line in the Atlanta market is going to have special reason to be thankful for having bought near home. There is where he is going to have an advantage over any competitor who has gone east for his stock, the home buyer can fill in quicker. Knowing just what the Atlanta market has what patterns, weaves, etc., he can order his fill-ins from here.

"I believe, too, the 'fill-in season" is going to start earlier this year than usual and will be very active until January."

WE are going good, just like the convention was still in progress.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company, returned last Sunday from a pleasant vacation spent at Franklin, N. C. "Franklin is a splendid town," said Mr. Singer, "and the country round about is a garden spot indeed. I don't believe I ever saw a better farming country. The merchants in that section know something of Atlanta's wholesale market, but not as much as they should. The jobbers here should go after the trade of that territory, which is now to a great extent going to other markets."

It was the big salesman and big bill combination at the M. C. Kiser company the other day when W. W. Benson fired in an opening bill of $1,200. He got started with the big sales habit at the convention and is keeping it up.

L. C. Wade, the new member of the M. C. Kiser company selling force, will be on the road next week, starting his initial trip in his new connection. He is to travel south Georgia.

I. N. Binder, of the Binder Board Manufacturing company, after enjoying the merchants' convention and the big barbecue to the utmost, was last week interested in showing visitors to his plant some of the newly arrived hand-colored photographs that are among the finest things yet seen in the picture display room of the company's. In addition to the hand-colored work there is also a new series of comics that has 'em all laughing. All the new arrivals, Mr. Binder declares, will enjoy wide popularity.

There are two recent additions to the sales force of the Atlanta branch of B. F. Avery & Sons. They are A. E. Wilson, of Thomasville, Ga., and R. S. Gass, of Atlanta.

W. T. Stapler, in North Carolina, and George C. Sweeney, in north Georgia, are both reported to be having good business with B. F. Avery & Sons.

Bob McWhorter, the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company salesman, is reported to be sending in a heavy lot of business from his nearby territory lately.

W. W. Benson and A. L. Deihl are the opening bill boys at the M. C. Kiser company just now. The former lassoed one for eleven hundred dollars and th chatter for nine hundred dollars last week.

Tom Yon had customers coming in from Florida in such numbers that he was kept at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company store several dys over the convention period.

Colonel W. H. Heuring, traveler for B. F. Avery & Sons, is an expert with rod and reel. Whenever the occasion offers he is always on the spot for a day or so of angling. And one beauty about the way he goes in for the sport is that when he returns he brings back something more than fish stories. Just now he is very busy along the east coast of Florida, but it is not with rod and reel. It is with order book for his firm and he is proceeding to fill it, too, at a rapid rate.

W. F. Spalding, vice president of the Gramling-Spalding company, is spending a week at his old home at Lebanon, Ky.

W. C. Barnwell, manager of notion department of the Ragan-Mione company, left yesterday for New York, where he will be for ten days or two weeks.

T. A. Gramling, president of the Gramling-Spalding company, who has been away on a month's vacation, has just returned, feeling much improved from his rest. He divided the time between Galbreith Springs, Tenn., and Plainfield, Ind.

C. S. Shiflett is reported to be getting a bit of a lead on W. J. Hays in the contest for selling the most opening bills at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company. He added another last week. His rival is said to have one in sight.

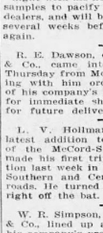
W. D. Beacham, the J. K. Orr Shoe company traveler, has returned from Chicago, where he went for several days to "co confer with SHERLOUN SHRDLUUN to look after some business interests he has there.

They have the neucleus of a regular hospital list at the A. M. Robinson company. M. M. Stranaland, city salesman, was kept away from the firing line for several days last week by illness and L. B. Robinson, house manager, was at the office yesterday for the first time during the week.

J. O. Castleberry, of Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, who came in yesterday from a week on the road, says general conditions look better than ever now. He states the farmers in his territory are all taking good times and feleing fine.

W. H. Eckford is back again in his old territory, northeast Georgia, where he represented the M. C. Kiser company when he was with them before. For several months after returning to this company he has been traveling Mississippi. He will be among the more or less regular deek-enders in Atlanta now. He came in yesterday.

J. T. Cook, of the H. L. Singer company, had the misfortune to break a bone in his hand last week while cranking his automobile. Mr. Cook was game, however, and the accident caused him to loose no time from his regular sales trip.



Two telegrams from Mississippi customers arrived at the M. C. Kiser company at nearly the same hour the other afternoon calling for a salesman and Shield Brand shoe samples to be sent at once, thereby cutting short the stay in Atlanta of S. R. Walker, Kiser's Mississippi traveler. Mr. Walker left that night with his new spring line of samples to pacify the two Shield Brand dealers, and will be on the firing line for several weeks before Atlanta sees him again.

R. E. Dawson, of the Jones Brothers & Co., has made headquarters last Thursday from Montgomery, Ala., bringing with him orders for two carloads of his company's products. One car was for immediate shipment and the other for future delivery.

L. V. Hollman, of Atlanta, is the latest addition to the traveling force of the McCord-Stewart company. He made his first trip for his new connection last week in his territory along the Southern and Central of Georgia railroads. He turned in some fine business right off the bat.

W. R. Simpson, of the Jones Brothers & Co., lined up a carload shipment of his company's products at Augusta, Ga., last week. L. C. Miller, of this company, was working out of Spartanburg, S. C., last week. C. M. McKain, the city man, turned in his usual good run of business from the Atlanta retailers.

Frank Singer, of Lumpkin, Ga., is a newest addition to the office force of the H. L. Singer company.

W. H. Vickery, traveler for the McCord-Stewart company, was at headquarters last week from Rome, Ga., and reported crop conditions in fine shape in his territory.

I. R. Banks, of the shipping department of H. L. Singer company, was busy last week working on the books in place of S. J. Bagwell, the regular bookkeeper, who is away on vacation. Mr. Bagwell, they say at headquarters, must be having a fine time, as nothing has been heard of him since his arrival in St. Louis, where he was to spend his vacation.

MILLINERY MARKET HERE DRAWS BUYER FROM FAR-AWAY KEY WEST

Mrs. P. L. Weatherford, inspecting the offerings at the J. Regenstein company.

Mrs. Weatherford Declares Atlanta Is the Best Millinery Center She Has Yet Visited, Says Wholesalers, More Courteous and Goods Better Adapted to Southern Needs

The drawing power of Atlanta's wholesale market never had a better illustration than in the visit here during the merchants' convention of Mrs. P. L. Weatherford, milliner, of Key West, Fla. Key West is a good long ways from Atlanta, about 840 miles. In fact, New York is not much further. Yet Mrs. Weatherford made the trip to see Atlanta and what Atlanta has to offer in the way of millinery. It was her first visit here and what she saw, she declares, has made her from now henceforth a confirmed patron of Atlanta's market.

Mrs. Weatherford was here during the entire two weeks of the mechants' convention and declares she enjoyed every minute of her stay, not missing any of the entertainment features except the baseball game. So delighted was she with the city that she stayed over several days last week after the convention ended for the purpose of completing her fall purchases.

"I have certainly enjoyed my stay here," said Mrs. Weatherford, who was found by a Firing Line representative busy with the work of selecting new fall shapes at the J. Regenstein company. "And I expect to come back again for the next merchants' meeting. I find the millinery market her everything it could possibly be. It is better than the northern markets for the reason that its goods are better adapted to the needs of the south. I like it, too, much better than Baltimore. I find that the small buyers are given especial consideration here. Their needs are looked after as carefully as the biggest buyer, no matter who he or she may be. I expect to tie to Atlanta."

FORMER TRAVELER EXHIBITS ADVANCE CARD OF LONG AGO

Unique Ideas in Announcement Cards Now Common, Though Rarely Seen 25 Years Ago, E. D. Crane, of Atlanta, Then on the Road, Was One of the First Travelers to Present Unique Design to the Trade

There are many unique ideas worked out nowadays for the advance cards of traveling salesmen. Comic pictures, twists of names and news happenings, are all seized upon and made to do duty in presenting to prospective customers in the most striking way possible the fact that the salesman will soon call upon them.

But twenty-five or thirty years ago these original ideas were not so commonly in use. The announcement was usually made in a matter-of-fact way on a plain postcard.

Among the first in Atlanta to break away from the old stereotyped form was E. D. Crane, who is now head of E. D. Crane and company, harness makers and dealers in vehicles and automobiles, in which business Mr. Crane has been engaged continuously in Atlanta for twenty-two years. But before that time for ten years he was traveling representative for a number of vehicle houses. The last of these for which he traveled ust before he left the road to go into business for himself was the Davis Carriage company, of Cincinnati, and it was while representing this company that he got out the unique advance card shown in the illustration above.

"I long ago found out that 'all advertising to be effective must attract attention and attract it at once,'" said Mr. Crane in commenting on the old advance card which he ran across in looking over some of his old files. "I got up this card so that it would be different from all the other advance cards that were then being used. Running on my name I had made a picture of a crane drawing a light buggy at top speed. I subscribed myself as a "missionary" and began the card with a catchy little verse.

"The card proved a hit from the first. I found it in stores pasted on the walls and on showcases. I had it printed at first on a one-cent postal card, but I got so many requests for copies of it that I found it too expensive to give away the postal cards, so I had a second edition printed on plain cards for general distribution."

"The engraving of it proved somewhat of a task. The facilities for engraving in Atlanta at that time were nothing to be compared to what they are now. I remember well standing over the engraver while he was at work on the design in order to be sure that he got it just as I wanted it."

Mr. Crane was successful as a traveler and has been even more successful as a harness maker and dealer in vehicles and autos. His harness factory has a wide reputation not only in Atlanta but in a large surrounding territory for turning out the highest quality products. In addition to harness, his plant makes saddles, bridles, leather straps, work and storm aprons and wagon covers.

DANCING for BEAUTY'S SAKE

SINCE the Russian ballet first pointed its toes toward the ceilings of American theaters, dancing has begun to change.

The ballet has nothing to do with turkey trotting, and the change has still less in common with the new and vigorous dances.

It is a revival, instead of an innovation.

"Trotting" is new, even though an original investigator has traced its origin back to solemn and devout religious dances of ancient Egypt. But the change wrought by the Russian ballet is a reversion to the classical dances—to dancing for beauty's sake.

Here as elsewhere, dancing which is an expression of beauty and also a realization of beauty, is being revived and is being taught to many pupils.

Miss Idelia Andrews is posed as Little Boy Blue, and tells in graceful figures instead of nursery rhyme the story of that laggard.

Perhaps these simple dances seem remote from the Russian ballet which, as Ellen Terry says: "Has traveled westward from Europe to England, and from England to America, dismaying audiences by its brutal power, bewildering them by its wild energy and excitement, but everywhere breaking down the conventions which have made dancing a barren art."

Yet it is true that the ballet, with its "memories of gestures, colors, bounding movements, and freedom of expression," has given rise to the simple dances which are the first step toward the expression of beauty by gesture and movement.

CLASSICAL DANCING.

Since the ballet first aroused such interest in England, and, afterward, came to America, dancing, in one of its phases, has been reverting to the classical. It has become a means of education, of development, and of sincere poetic expression.

In New York city, dancing, particularly the simple and yet musical folk dances, has been made a part of the common school course. Here, it is surprising to know what a strong influence dancing is having in the education of children. It has no place in the schools, but it plays a large part in individual training.

Among those who are most proficient in the old dances which are being made new, and which are being used as the means to express and to realize beauty, are Miss Summerall and Miss Andrews.

Each has mastered the beginnings of the expressive and the truly artistic forms of dancing, which, as Isadora Duncan said: "Seek to make movement and gesture as harmonious as music."

Each has realized the educative benefits to be gained from dancing that is an art instead of a pastime.

And like all others who are being taught in the classical dances, each is learning harmony of gesture and of movement that can be acquired in no other way except through dancing.

Isadora Duncan, the American woman who did much to revive the Greek art of dancing, had the theory that the basis of her dancing was "a whole conception of life, life flexible, harmonious, natural."

Her belief was that dancing could be made the means of mental, spiritual, anud physical development; and this thought was accepted seriously and had no light effect.

EFFECT OF THE BALLET.

But the attention given to the Russian ballet caused that body of dancers to have an even greater effect in reviving the best in the art of dancing.

Yet, the American woman, by her individual influence did much to center interest upon the Greek art in dancing. Befor she took to dancing she had wished to initiate a reform of human life in all its details of dress, of hygiene, and of morals. But luckily for everyone, she decided finally to turn her genius to dancing.

She really adopted a method entirely her own. First she learned to walk, to run, and then to leap with rhymth, and afterwards she took to dancing.

In dancing, her purpose was to make even the slightest movement a harmonious, expressive gesture. In writing of the task to which she had set herself, she used a rhymthical expression which reads something like the prospectus of a new thought movement, and, yet, it has the "gesture" of sincerity.

"Every movement, she wrote, "that can be danced by the side of the sea without being in harmony with the rhymth of the waves, every movement that can be danced in the midst of a forest without being in harmony with the swaying of the foliage, every movement that can be danced in the broad sunlight of the open field without being in harmony with the vibration ad the solitude of the landscape—all these movements are false movements in that they are discords in the harmony of the great natural lines. That is why the dancer must choose above all things the movements which express the strength, the health, the grace the nobility and languor or the gravity of living things."

WAY IS PREPARED.

But, despite the tone of what she wrote, her belief that dancing could and should express strength, health, grace, nobility, and beauty had its effect, and the way was made for a revival of dances which are sincerely poetic and educative.

Afterward, came the Russian ballet, and the widespread effect which it had upon dancing and upon the public attitude toward dancing. After the first appearance of the ballet in New York city, critics were undecided whether they should or shouldn't be shocked a little as well as delighted a great deal. At last they agreed that there was a shock, but not to the moral sense, only to the western ideas of the function of the ballet.

Later on, the ballet toured the principal cities and, upon coming to the south, visited Atlanta. Pavlova and Mordkin are still remembered here. But of all the Russian dancers, Nijinsky—whose name no one has ever been able to pronounce—has succeeded most in directing attention to a revival of the best in dancing.

It was said of him that he was the supreme master of the technique of dancing, that he could make no gesture that was not graceful or witty.

"Nijinsky," said one critic, "makes us understand that a gesture is, as Blake said of a tear, an intellectual thing. But perhaps his chief merit consists in his versatility. He never repeats himself. His personality appears to inhabit not one but several bodies, or rather his personality itself is multiple. Nijinsky's gestures mimic nothing. They are not the result of a double translation of ideas into words, and words into dumb show. They are mood itself. His limbs possess a faculty of speech. Wit is expressed in his Harlequin dance as lucidly as in an epigram."

This is the dancer who contributed so much to the influence exerted upo dancing by the Russian ballet.

After speaking of him and the success of the Russian ballet in reviving an important phase of dancing, a critic says:

"The dance, I believe, is still in its infancy. Is it rash to imagine that the evolution of dancing will be the special achievement of art in this century, as the evolution of music was in the last? There is a whole world of gesture waiting for the dance to take possession of. The re-discovery of the gesture of the ancient world is perhaps the least important part of the undertaking. There lies a broad field for exploration in the innumerable racial and national gestures, each with its separate beauty, and its separate expressiveness. And beyond this stretches the yet more inexhaustible domain of nature, its multitudinous minor rhymths, each various and distinguishable. Fragments of attitude, phrases of motion, are scattered prodigally up and down the world, waiting the seeing eye and the understanding mind that can pluck these happy accidents, store them in the memory, and at the proper time build up out of them a new pattern of the dance."

ISADORE DUNCAN, the American dancer, says:

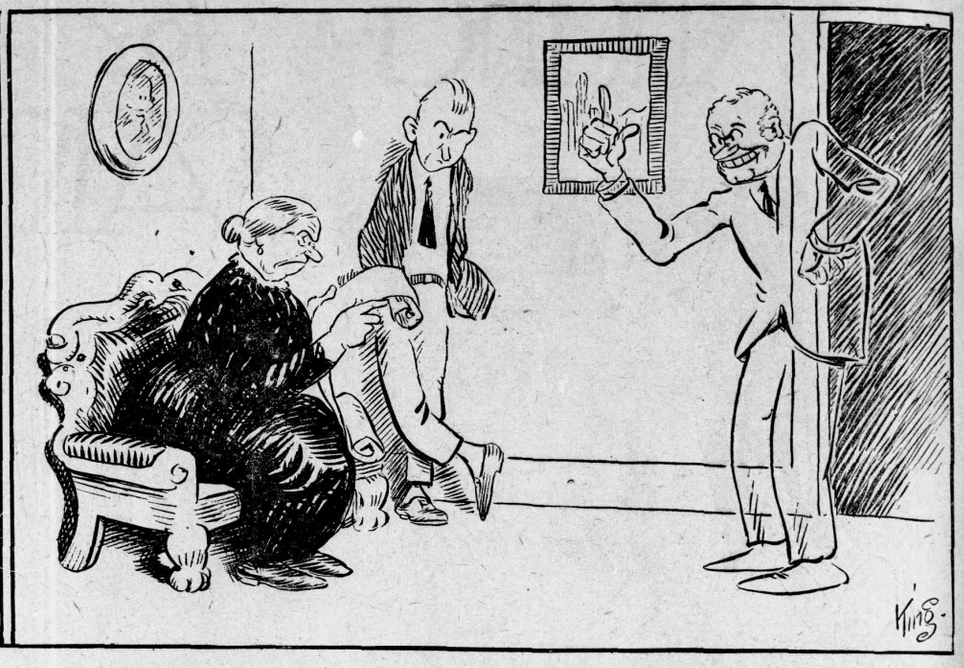
"To seek in nature the fairest forms and to find the movement which expresses the soul of these forms—this is the art of the dancer. It is from nature alone that the dancer must draw his inspirations, in the same manner as the sculptor, with whom he has so many affinities. Rodin has said: 'To produce good sculpture it is not necessary to copy the works of antiquity; it is necessary, first of all, to regard the works of nature, and to see in those of the classics only the method by which they have interpreted nature.' Rodin is right, and in my art I have by no means copied. My inspiration has been drawn from the trees, from the waves, from the clouds from the sympathies that exist between passion and the storm, between gentleness and the soft breeze."

PROBABLY the first thing the first man and woman did when they became conscious of themselves and of the earth that was theirs, was to dance. It is the most primitive and the most exalted of all the arts and graces. It is allied to the greatest art. The human voice, which is music (and than music humanity possesses no thing more beautiful), can only be heard. Dancing, which is music, can be seen. When we dance to sound, produced either by human or by mechanical agency, we hear, see, and feel music. Dancing has ever been an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace, of the health and happiness of a virile people. On fete days in France you will see people dancing and will hear them making music on every street corner. In Germany there is the same love of music and of dancing.

MR. DOOLEY ON MAKING A WILL

BY FINLEY PETER DUNNE

"Me sicond son, Ephraim, I have provided for already by lettin' him git him elf a good job."



"I'll show ye whu's th' boss here."

"NIVER made a will," said Mr. Dooley. "I didn't want to give mesilf a headache thinkin' iv somethin' to put into it. A will iv mine wud be a puny little thing annyhow, an' if anny wan thried to file it he'd be lible to be locked up f'r contimpt iv th' Probate coort. Besides, I wuddint like to cause anny onseemly wrangles an' maybe lawsuits among me heirs about who wud pay f'r th' expriss wagon to carry th' estate to th' city dump. An' annyhow I've always thought that if there's goin' to be ayether cheers or tears at me obsekees they shud spring fr'm th' heart, not fr'm mercinary motives. If anny fellow feels like cillybratin' me departure let him do it out iv his own pocket. Thin I'll know he's sincere. 'Twud grieve me if some wan broke into song at th' news if a sthranger was to ask, 'Is that wan iv his innimies?' an' th' reply wud be, 'No, it's wan iv his heirs.'

"So f'r one reason or another I've niver made a will, but I'll not deny it must be considhrable spoort f'r thim that has th' names an' the' imagination to injye it. I'm putty sure I'd bust into tears whin th' lawyers wrote down th' directions f'r somebody else to set in me rockin' chair, an' I can't think iv annything that wud brighten th' wurruld with me out iv it. But that wud be because I wuddint go at it in th' right way. To be injyeable, a will must be at wan an' the same time a practical joke on th' heirs an' an advertisemint iv th' wan that made it. Manny a man niver has his own way till he has it through his will. Afther he's dead an' gone he shoves his hat on th' back iv his head an' stalks up an' down through th' house saying, 'I'll show ye whu's th' boss here. F'r th' fust time in me life, now that I'm dead, I'm goin' to be obeyed.' No wondher that manny meek millyonaires comfort their declinin' years with this amusemint; it is, as Hogan says, th' last infirm'ry f'r their noble minds; it's a chance f'r thim to tache th' fam'ly their proper place, an' blow their own horns without havin' anny wan intherrupt th' solo.

"I was readin' a fine will th' other day. I niver see th' lad that made it, but I think iv him, walkin' up an' down th' lawyer's office as he dictated it, whackin' himsilf on th' chest an' sayin' 'Bedad!' after iv'ry paragraph. It wint somethin' like this: 'I, Ephraim Snivvy, bein' in a sound mind, no matther what may come out in coort later, but realizin' that th' repytation iv me onparalleled succiss in business has spread so far that I am lible to be called elsewhere, do make this me last will an' testymint. All me money I lave to me faithful frind, th' Confidintyal Chattel Morgedge comp'ny, which I command to disburse as follows:

"'To me devoted wife, Belinda Ann Snivvy, shall be paid th' sum iv four hundhred dollars per annum, undher th' followin' conditions: That she shall niver marry again; that she shall wear a black veil f'r th' rest iv her life in me honor; that she shall go to me grave wanst a week an' dew it with her tears; that she shall be sorry that she often spoke to me th' way she did; that she shall wear suspinded fr'm her neck a photygraft iv me framed in rhinestones; that she shall keep th' ile paintin' iv me in th' parlor in good repair; that she shall not attind anny dance, bankit, theatyre, wake, or other frivolous intertainmint. If she fails to comply with anny iv these conditions, or if anny man undher th' age iv eighty is discovered in her neighborhood, or if she is iver seen to laugh in public, I direct me exicutors to cut her off fr'm me bounty an' turn her out on th' wurruld f'r th' heartless flirt she is.

"'To me son Silas I lave th' use iv me horse an' buggy an' two bags iv oats until he has arrived at th' age of forty-five. If at that time he has showed a proper apprecyation iv th' thrust, th' said property shall pass to his ownership, undher condition that me name shall appear in letters a foot high on th' dashboard.

"'Me sicond son, Ephraim, I have provided f'r already be' lettin' him get himsilf a good job in a blacksmith shop.

"'Me son Elias havin' affinded me b' goin' to a baseball game, I desire that he shall get nawthin' fr'm me estate.

"'To me daughter Eliza I lave th' kitchen range in thrust. In this age iv fortune hunters a father cannot be too careful, hinse I direct that she shall not marry ontil she arrives at th' age iv fifty. At that time if she sees fit to bestow her hand on a worthy young man, who shall be acciptible to th' loan comity iv me bank, I direct that she shall be paid three dollars a week out iv her mother's allowance, th' said fund to be known as "Th' Gin'rous Eph Snivvy Foundation f'r Indygint Daughters."

"'To me faithful frind an' nurse, Bedalia O'Brien, who has sarved me devotedly f'r twinty years, an' who is now too old f'r other implymint, I lave me collection iv old med'cine bottles.

"'To William Waldorf Astor I lave me sthraw hat, on condition that he changes his name to Snivvy.

"'To th' mayor iv Venice, Italy, I lave two dollars to erict a monymint to me an' alther th' name iv th' town to Snivvyville.

"'Th' rest iv th' residoo iv me splindid fortune I lave in thrust to me on'y frind, th' Confidintyal Chattel Morgedge bank, an' direct thim to let it accummylate ontil it amounts to four millyon dollars. This sum they will expind in erictin' a chimbley in white marble an' goold on th' Snivvy glue wurruks, said chimbley to be at laste thirty feet higher thin anny in th' neighborhood, with an electhric sign, which shall be kept constantly burnin', with th' motto: "Snivvy, he done it."'

"Yes, sir; it must be fun makin' a will. Think iv th' throuble ye can cause an' th' insults ye can hurl at ye're innimies. I often thought 'twud be a fine way iv gettin' aven with a man I didn't like. Supposin' Hogan an' me had a quarrul, an' I didn't have time to write a frindly biography about him, or was afraid I might go first. Nawthin' wud be nater thin to put him in me will: 'Hereby cancel all bequests to me frind Terrence Hogan on account of his bad habits.'

"I bet he'd be sorry I was gone. How he'd wish he cud have me back ag'in f'r a while.

"I niver see anny wan that enthred into th' spirit iv makin' a will so thruly as our ol' frind Dochney. Ye didn't like him, but I did. I liked him because he was so simple an' sincere. Prudent fellows like y'rsilf, that spind y'r lives pilin' up grate stores iv good will an' affection an' a comfortable conscience f'r y'r ol' age don't apprecyate a spindthrift like Dochney, who ...rew all these things away in th' pursuit iv his pleasure, which wus makin' money. Ye thought he wus a bad man, but I knew him f'r a single-minded, innocint ol' la-ad who niver harmed anny wan excipt f'r gain an' was incap'ble iv falsehood outside iv business. To those who see him in th' rough battle iv life at home or among his neighbors he may've seemed hard, but we who knew him in th' quiet seclusyon iv th' bank, among his recreations, found another Dochney, a cheerful soul who always had a smile on his face, wrote little verses to th' promissory notes, an' cuddent keep his feet still whin th' goold coin clatthered on th' counter. If Dochney had wan fault it wus he wus too sintimintal about money. Men like ye ar-re th' ra-ally rapacyous wans. Ye have nawthin' but desire f'r money. Ye don't want to give it a home an' take care iv it. But Dochney had a tender feelin' f'r it. Tears came to his eyes as he watched it grow. He become so attached to it that no wan cud pry it away fr'm him. An' money reciprocated. Iv'ry dollar he had wurruked f'r him. It wint out an' decoyed another dollar an' even if it come back ladin' nawthin' more thin a little 'chicken feed' Dochney wasn't cross about it. He wud pat a nickel on th' back an' say, 'Ye're small now, but with a little incouragemint we'll make a big sthrappin' dollar out iv ye yet.'

"Dochney lived to an old age, because, as th' pote says, 'There's nawthin' like avirice to keep a man young.' The Spanyards knew that whin they sarched f'r th' fountain iv perpetchool youth. They'd heerd th' Indyans had money. Annyhow, Dochney's cheeks wore th' bloom iv usury long afther manny philanthropists ar-re lookin' pale. But th' time comes whin somethin' in th' eyes iv his financial frinds told him 'twud be betther not to go down town ag'in unarmed, an' he rethired. He planted his money th' way they do eyesthers an' let it breed, sindin' down wanst a week to haul out enough to sustain life an' puttin' th' rest back in again.

"But this was no life f'r wan that had been an eyesther pirate in his day, an' Dochney begun to pine. I thried to ammuse him. I had th' congressman sind him iv'ry hour th' new currency bill; I cut out th' repoorts wanst a week iv th' bankruptcies in th' United States an' Canady, an' wurruked th' cash registher f'r him be th' hour, because he liked th' ol' refrain. But nawthin' did him anny good ontil Dock O'Leary advised him to althcr his will. Th' Dock says he always thrys this prescription on aged millyonaires afther th' oxigin fails. Wan mornin' Dochney come in lookin' as cheerful as an advertisemint iv a breakfast food an' jinglin' his key ring in his pocket, f'r he niver car-ried annythin' else to jingle, but made a practice iv exthractin' carfare out iv th' gran'childhren's bank with a penknife iv'ry mornin'.

"'Ye're lookin' well, me ol' buccaneer,' said I. 'It's feelin' well I am,' says he, fillin' his pocket fr'm th' cheese bowl. 'I've been with me lawyer all mornin' revisin' me will. I find I've left out a good manny ol' frinds. Ye haven't a middle inityal to ye'er name, have ye? That's what I told him. Give me a glass iv sas-prilly,' he says. Well, sir, though I knew th' crafty ol' pirate, th' thought suddently lept into me head that maybe his heart or his brain had softened an' he'd put me in th' will. In that fatal sicond I bought two autymobills, a yacht, an' a goold watch an' chain, an' shook me ol' frinds; an' whin I come to me sinses he'd gone an' hadn't settled f'r th' sas-prilly.

"Well, th' fun he had afther that! All day long he wint around makin' delicate inquiries about people's circumstances, an' in th' mornin' he was downtown puttin' something new in his will. He hadn't been a popylar man. He had cashed in th' affections iv his neighbors 'arly in life. An' prejudicis ar-re hard to overcome. But grajally—that is to say, within a week or ten days—people begun to see that a gr-reat injustthice had been done to him. He didn't say annythin' about a will. But he had a way iv askin' people did they spell their name with an aitch or a zee an' puttin' it down in a notebook that wus very consolin'. His relitives begun to show a gr-reat inthrest in him, an' some iv thim come fr'm as far as San Francisco to cheer his declinin' years an' form vigilance comities to protict him fr'm fortune hunters. He was niver alone, but always had th' most agreeable s'ciety. 'Twas 'Uncle, that's a fine cough ye have; wudden't ye like to set in this cool draft,' or 'Cousin Andhrew, tell us that joke ye made las' night. I nearly died laughin' at it, but no wan can tell it like y'silf.'

"He niver took a meal at home. He stopped payin' all bills. He insisted on all babies born in th' ward bein' named afther him. He insulted people an' challenged thim to fight. By an' by th' pa-apers got hold iv him an' always spoke iv him as th' eccenthric philanthropial. Rows iv carredges shtud at his dure, an' inside iv his house he debated with th' thrustees iv binivolint institutions an' prisidints iv colledges about their plan f'r new buildin's. Wan iv th' lading univarsities sint th' glee club down to serenade him. He was ilicted vice prisidint iv Andhrew Carnaygie's peace comity, thrustee iv th' art mus'um, director in th' Home f'r Wan Eyed Owls, an' LL. D. in Skowhegan univarsity.

"An' all th' time the wurruld was talkin' about this gr-reat binifacthor all Mrs. Dochney cud find in her coold heart to say was: 'There's no fool like an ol' fool,' an' wint about her housewurruk an' made poultices f'r him whin he come home fr'm th' meeting iv th' S'ciety f'r Pathronizin' th' Poor, where they'd give him a coold in th' chest fr'm th' Chautauqua salute.

"Well, sir, all times, good an' bad, has got to come to an end, an' wan day Dochney come in to see me. 'I think,' says he, 'I'll go home an' go to bed an' stay there. I've finished me will an' me life is no longer safe fr'm th' binificyants. There's a prisidint iv a colledge comin' to town. He's an eager idjacator, an' as I don't want to die with me boots on I think I won't see him. Here's 5 cints I owe ye f'r th' sasprilly,' he says. An' he wint away an' I niver set eyes on him ag'in. He left a will in five lines, givin' all his money to th' good woman, an' sayin' that he thought he'd done enough f'r iv'rybody else by keepin' thim in hopes all these years, which is th' only pleasure in life."

"I niver cud undherstand a man like Dochney makin' money," said Mr. Hennessy.

"He made it," said Mr. Dooley, "because he honestly loved it with an innocint affiction. He was thrue to it. Th' reason ye have no money is because ye don't love it f'r itsilf alone. Money won't iver surrinder to such a flirt."

"If Dochney had wan fault it was he was too sintimintal about money."

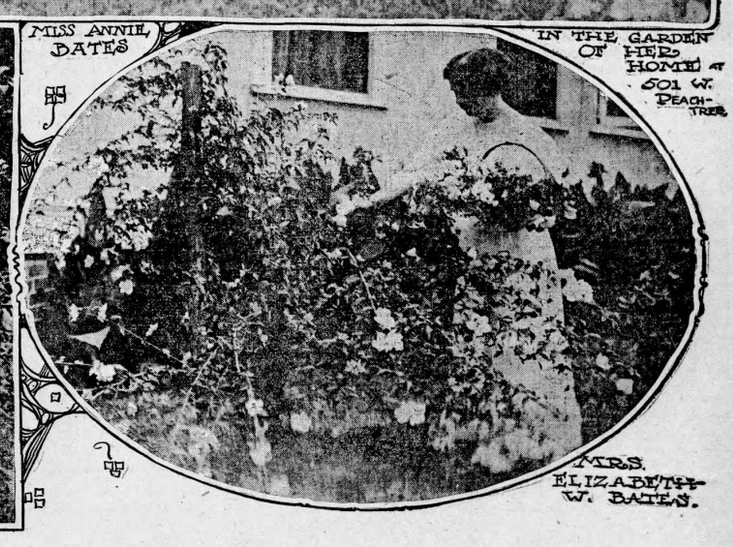
ATLANTA'S BEAUTIFUL GARDEN

MRS. W. P. HILL, 163 W. PEACHTREE

MISS ANNIE BATES



IN THE GARDEN OF HER HOME AT 501 W. PEACHTREE

MRS. ELIZABETH W. BATES.

NO other word in the English language is lovelier in its significance than the soft-syllabled one of "garden." Spoken or written it creates a mental vision of verdure and color and brings to memory the faint elusive perfumes that hang above many-hued blossoms. In m.red words, poets have immortalized the charm and sentiment of secluded gardens, praised the sweet-smelling air of night flowers beneath milady's windows, or mourned the forsaken reaches of a once-lovely and brilliant garden.

Garden lovers have written reams about their "friends," and have sought to show the "souls of flowers" to those who wish to understand and see.

For to the garden enthusiast, his plants seem animate and in the faces of the flowers he seems to see an intelligently animate expression of life.

There is a fascination about a garden. To begin with the brown earth holds forth alluring promises of future florescence. When the first green shoots begin to show in the spring, the garden lover sees at once the plant in its maturity, heavy with blossoms and full of perfume. Fast as the little green blades may grow it seems all too slow for the eager gardener; and only the seasoned planter finds it possible to refrain from investigating what is going on under the earth.

Like children who plant seed, the amateur wants to know whether they have sprouted or not; and if the truth be told, nearly everybody who has started a garden will confess that at some time or another he has upturned the earth to see that the seed is still there.

In Atlanta there are many gardens, but the women who work with the flowers have long since passed the amateur stage; and the brilliance and beauty of their gardens are a wonder ful expression of their skill.

SKILL IN GARDENING.

For certainly it takes skill, and hard work, to make a lovely garden. There are some who think that gardens grow of themselves; but if they test this theory they soon learn that their neighbors blossoms are the loveliest.

But the labor is a labor of love in which the toil is more than counterbalanced by the pleasure of the work; and there are many Atlanta women who do not scorn to don garden gloves and go out and dig.

They will even look for worms and bravely kill them, thereby proving beyond the shadow of a doubt that women are not cowards.

Mrs. Bates Block, Mrs. T. M. Clarke, Mrs. John D. Little, Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Mrs. Lowry Arnold, Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, Mrs. Henry Johnson, Mrs. Eugene Callaway, Mrs. William Hill, Mrs. W. T. Newman, Mrs. Hugh Willet, Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, Mrs. Morris Brandon, Mrs. Clark Howell, and many others have notably lovely gardens, and most of these women devote a part of each day to garden work.

Mrs. William Hill's garden is a joy to all passers-by on West Peachtree street. It lies parallel with the street, and from the earliest spring until late in the fall it is a mass of vivid bloom. Before many people have begun to think of spring costumes even, Mrs. Hill may be seen among the brown bare beds of her garden planning for her summer flowers. The man is put to work on the heavier digging, the beds are softened and put in shape; and just as soon as the little warm thrill of life becomes perceptible in the shrubs and trees, Mrs. Hill is busy planting seeds. As a result of careful planning her garden is always in bloom. She has arranged to have a succession of blooms, by making out a garden calendar which includes flowers for every month of the year.

Hollyhocks and poppies flaunt their gaudy loveliness in the earlier months, while the flaming rambler roses which hide the fence at the rear of the garden carry a magnificent array of bloom in the early spring. Not a person passes by during the blooming period of the roses without making admiring comment on their beauty.

Later phlox, zinnias, dahlias, golden glow, verbena, lillies, and many other flowers contribute their share to the brilliance of the garden, which is so attractive that it gives much pleasure to many besides the owner.

Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates and Miss Annie Winship Bates in a comparatively short time have made their home on West Peachtree, a center of garden loveliness.

A graceful pergola separates the front lawn from the rear, and climbing roses have converted the pergola into a thing of classic beauty. Brilliant, ever-blooming petunias brighten the beds at the foot of the pergola, while nasturtiums, zinnias, and well placed shrubs aid the lovely effect.

Others large and small, sustain the city's reputation for beautiful gardens; for while the casual visitor fails to see these gardens because they are private, friends have found them delightful.

In a number of instances, too, the owners of gardens have gone further than to merely beautify their own yard. A number have planted in the spaces in front of the sidewalk, and have transformed them into miniature gardens. On Peachtree street at the intersection of West Peachtree street, two unsightly telegraph poles carry a heavy growth of Jack-bean vines, which with their purple and white blossoms, are as lovely a vine as one may wish to see.

Gardens serve a triple purpose. They beautify the surroundings, they give pleasure to the owner and the passer-by; and they are fine as a health-giving and beautifying recreation.

The woman who works in her garden needs no rouge for her cheeks, nor peroxide for her hair. Neither need she fear that she will become fat if she is a devotee at the garden's shrine.

The fresh air and exercises are tonic and beautifying. The blood circulates more rapidly and freely after an hour or two of work out-doors, and the sunshine will make blonde hair shiny and gleaming, and put life into dark hair.

Gardening, too, stimulates a mental interest, and brings about a more sensitive spiritual perception. Many thoughts and quaint ideas are suggested by the queer antics of a garden of growing things.

"I believe some flowers are spiteful" said one woman with a laugh. "They push each other aside and shove and scrap just like human being sometimes."

Constant watching of plants brings out many queer little traits of their character. You can't make a morning-glory vine grow downward, no matter how hard you try. You may pin it down to the earth with a hairpin, and in day or two it will be curling upward again, vainly seeking something on which to twine its tendrils. And a plant will almost tie itself in knots trying to grow toward the light when it is hidden away in a dark corner. Indeed, there are many diverting happenings in a garden, and every woman should have a garden of her own.

PARADISE OF BIRDS IN THE PACIFIC SEA

Laysan island, a dot on the chart, situated in the Pacific, 800 miles west of Honolulu, is scarcely three miles long, with a lagoon in the center, and were it not for its birds it would be the loneliest spot on the globe.

Myriads of sea-fowl fill the air and cover the ground. As far as the eye can see, the island is dotted with lordly albtrosses, the snowy whiteness of their heads and lower parts glistening in the semi-tropical sun. Thousands of sea-swallows or terns dart back and forth through the air, and keep up a pandemonium enough to drive men to madness.

Visiting Laysan, we had difficulty, if we wished to cross the island, to avoid crushing the eggs of terns, and as we proceeded we were continually breaking through roofs of petrel burrows, which everywhere honeycomb the soil.

The bird population is so extensive that all do not nest on the surface, but instead live tenement-fashion. Some, like the petrels and shearwaters, must tunnel beneath the sand and rear their young in darkness. Others occupy the ground floor, and foremost among these are albatrosses, terns and tropic birds.

Two striking facts at once impress the visitor: the countless numbers of birds and their surprising tameness. They paid little or no attention as we moved among them.

There are literally a million albatross nesting on this tiny atoll, and they dominate all the other birds as rulers of the domain.

First, two birds approach each other, bowing profoundly and stepping heavily. They swagger about each other, nodding and courtesying solemnly, then suddenly begin to fence a little, crossing bills and whetting them together, sometimes with a whistling sound.

All at once one lifts its closed wing and nibbles at the feathers beneath, or rarely, if in a hurry, quickly turns its head. The partner, during this short performance, assumes a statuesque pose, and either looks mechanically from side to side, or snaps its bill loudly a few times. Then the first bird bows once, and, pointing its head and beak stright upward, rises on its toes, puffs out its breast, and utters a prolonged nasal "Ah-h-h."

Several times, at this stage of affairs, I have walked quietly among a group of the busy creatures, and have begun to bow very low, imitating them as nearly as possible. They would all stop and gaze at me in astonishment, but, recovering their usual equanimity at once, would gravely return my bows and walk around me in a puzzled manner, as if wondering what sort of bird I might be.

Early in the morning they hie themselves off to sea and scour the waves for the elusive squid, which is a staple article of diet for the larger members of the vast bird population. Then, about sunrise, the white company begins to return and the mothers give the babies their breakfasts, regurgitating squid and oil.

At this single meal each young albatross consumes from a pound to a pound and a half of squids, and, as there are fully a million birds, old and young, the daily aggregate would surpass six hundred tons.

The albatrosses live on Laysan fully nine months of the year. Durin the last days of October, before the winter storms set in, the mighty army appears.

Good Farming

(F. D. Coburn, Secretary of Agriculture of Kansas.)

Notable facts revealed and confirmed by the detailed reports each year are that, regardless of locality or season, the best tillage assures the best crops, that extensive farming by shiftless, slipshod methods gives unsatisfactory returns and that experience is bringing this home to the understanding of Kansas farmers more and more. Dependably good crops are the result of good farming.

Profit in raising Pets

THEY tell a good one about Will Zimmer and Kimballville farm.

The proprietor of Kimballville was showing a young lady visitor the sights and sounds of his broad acres with all the gusto of a landed proprietor. She had manifested but little interest in the bald eagle and had said that the little foxes were "cute" but "not nice."

Mr. Zimmer had about reached the end of his resources and the end of his patience as well, when the young lady clapped her hands with joy. She had seen a barrel in the back yard that closely resembled a bee hive.

"Oh!" she cried, "Do you keep a bee?"

Now Will Zimmer did not "keep a bee," so he carefully explained to the young lady that the barrel was used for tar and not honey, and that if bees were ever "kept" they were generally plural in number.

If the young lady had asked Will Zimmer if he kept a rabbit, very probably he would have told her the same thing; yet such a question would not have been ignorant in the least. Rabbits and even a rabbit are "kept," and that with such care and pains as generally marks the preservation of some rare and beautiful orchid.

In other cities than Atlanta, and in other states than Georgia a single rabbit is sometimes worth hundreds of dollars and its proprietor will part with every other bunny he owns rather than lose some prize-winning angora with a short tail and a very long pedigree.

In London and cities of the continent societies have been formed for the improvement and exhibition of fancy rabbits, a united rabbit club was founded in 1888, rabbits, in short, have come to be as hard ridden a hobby as the collection of postage stamps or the saving of tobacco coupons.

WHY NOT A FARM?

A rabbit is primarily a pet. Horses and mules, cows and beeves, chickens turkeys and ducks, pigs, nearly all the live stock one generally sees on a farm, is raised for what it produces or for its consumption. Even pigeons, which are sometimes simply kept as pets, are not exempt so long as squabs are toothsome.

There are breeding farms for dogs and for goats right here in Atlanta, there is a woman who lives on the north side that makes a specialty of the propagation of cats, there is an aviary or so where many beautiful birds take their first flights; even the much-abused guinea pig is the object of much care and thought; why then, does not some one start a rabbit farm?

Despite the fecundity of the rabbit the market is not overcrowded, and indeed the rapid multiplication of the breed would be an extremely fruitful source of income for the rabbit farmer.

Rabbit farming in this locality is an unexplored field. Even those who keep them for pets limit their varieties in general to plain pink-and-white bunnies and Belgian hares. Should an enterprising breeder adopt some new species, lops, angoras, silver-greys, silver-browns, a Polish or two, Flemish giants, silver creams, fawns, Siberians, Patagonians, Dutchers or Himalayans, he would drag down any number of blue ribbons and would have a monopoly of the rabbit market for the state of Georgia. All of these are well known breeds among the rabbit fanciers of England and Europe, although somewhat of a rarity as yet in this region.

BREEDERS SHOULD SPECIALIZE.

With very small capital to start with, an enterprising Atlanta youngster could acquire enough funds through the sale of commoner breeds to interest himself in the other varieties with a view to taking up some special species through whose production he could make wealth and reputation.

Specialization has spread to every walk of life nowadays and should be taken into consideration by the beginner in rabbit raising. It is impossible for a fancier to succeed with every variety of rabbit. He should visit a show, examine each variety exhibited, study the various species and decide which one he wishes to take for his special hobby.

A rabbitry or a rabbit hutch is very easily built at small expense. Nearly every youth of the city has a back yard and enough old boxes to construct the hutches with. An old stable or outhouse is an ideal location for the bunnies, but if none is available, hutches can be built in tiers against a wall, facing south for preference.

Even the coal cellar will do, provided the fancier cleans it out regularly two or three times a week. The floor of the hutch should be a foot above the ground and have a grill ventilator in its center and an ordinary wooden ventilator at the apex of the roof. The door, whether at the sides or the ends, should face south. A tarred and felt roof, bins for food, a cupboard for medicines, completes your hutch.

Let your rabbitry be free from draughts and yet have plenty of fresh air.

Don't take dogs into the rabbitry or make a noise when entering; youngsters and does often suffer as the result of fright.

Clean out the hutches at least twice a week, and don't stint the sawdust or hay.

Don't allow children or strangers to pull the rabbits about, and never lift them out of the hutch by the ears only. One hand should always support the hind quarters.

Look through your stock once a week, and immediately isolate any particular one showing signs of cold or other ailments.

Keep a dredger tin of disinfectant handy, sprinkle a little in the corners of the hutches and also on the floor of the rabbitry.

Lime wash your hutches out once every year, and always have one or two empty, for isolation or other emergencies.

Always attend to the wants of the stock yourself. If obliged to leave home, be careful that some competent persons fills your place, and lastly let the motto over your rabbitry door be "Forget-me-not!"

These are good rules and no mistake can be made in following them. Food is another problem that sometimes bother the rabbit fancier. He should always remember that bunnies do not take kindly to pie and batter cakes.

The general tendency among beginners is to overdo the feeding, both in quality and variation. With a few exceptions, once a day is often enough to feed the bunnies. The corect time for feeding is in the evening from 6 o'clock until 10 o'clock. By all means, however, make it the same time every day.

THE QUESTION OF FOOD.

Natural food and the best of natural food is the best that a rabbit can have. Stick to the natural food, in general, and use the tidbits only on occasions.

The foundation feed should be natural oats, two handfuls for the little fellows every day and three more for the big 'uns. Wheat may be mixed with the oats to give variety to the menu. Rolled oats or special cereals may be given as a treat, but if good oats are given every meal the rabbit will have his "staff of life."

Hay is the next article of food in value to oats, while a crust of bread may be thrown in with the other food occasionally. Milk is a necessity for young and growing rabbits or for jaded stock as a pick-me-up.

The question of green food for rabbits is a much-discussed one. But as a general rule it may be said that almost any green food can be eaten with impunity. Dandelion, chickory, clover, most lawn grass, cauliflower and carrot tops are acceptable. Cabbage and lettuce leaves are said to be too watery for the rabbits.

In the winter time the roots of carrots or of beets are good, as well as potatoes, provided the latter are cooked.

In Atlanta green food is obtainable practically all the year round and the local breeders can always get some in one form or another.

It will be seen that the above menu is neither expensive nor hard to get, so that the high cost of living plays but a small part with his rabbitship.

Once the hutch is built, practically the only expense is food. The result is net profit.

John D. at 72 Years

Uncle John D., chipper as a boy on his Forest Hill links at 75, has a eulogist announces, made, for research hospitals, education and "the general good of mankind," donations which now approximate $145,000,000.

It's nice of him, spite of all the folks say—don't you honestly think so? For he might you know have stuck it in some secret hole in the ground, where it wouldn't have done him, us or anybody a bit of good. Or, were he the bold, scheming, wilfully bad man that some folks think he is, he might have spent it sending poisoned candy through the mails or abducting little children.

If one man is to have $145,000,000, with something over for his rainy day, we guess he couldn't do much better with it than Uncle John has done.

If you think he could, we wish you'd write and tell us how. For a lot of fellows have superfluous fortunes which are beginning to be uncomfortable and it might do them good to let them know improved ways of getting rid of the burden.

Besides, feeling sore at John D. is neither fair nor effective. John is as he is because he is built that way. It's our fault quite as much as his—we think rather more than his—that he has been permitted to assess so many of us so much as he has until the wad got too big for him to carry and he had to scatter some of it back among the poor devils whose industry, patience and docility made its collection by him possible.

With it all he's not any happier than you or us. Bet you he's not half as happy as we are; and at that we don't wish him any ill luck.

Jack London In the "Movies"

Jack London, who says we should all do our work with a motive, and that whether that work be laying bricks or swabbing a deck or writing short stories we will succeed only by following that principle, is in Los Angeles—with a motive. His motive is to arrange for the reproduction of some of his stories on the moving picture screen.

London pleaded guilty to having escaped from the hospital six days after entering, but laughingly intimated that his press agent's story that he had been operated on for appendicitis without anesthetic during his stay in bed was slightly exaggerated.

"My 'escape' was connived at by the doctor, who took me home," he said frankly.

London looks 30 and talks at the rate of nine hundred words a minute. But his talk is worth listening to—full of color, out-of-doors, snap and vigor, made up of short sentences, punctuated with occasional forceful gestures and consistently Socialistic in tone.

"I started writing when I was too poor to buy magazines to find out what a story was," he said. "In those days I went to the library and crammed myself full of the stories that were selling. Then I sailed in.

"Successful writing depends on clear thinking. Know what you want to say. The words with which you think out your story are the words you should use. If you are thinking clearly—you see?

"There are tricks and devices that I use—tools in the art. I build on a motive—a thesis, and my story has a dual nature. On the surface is the simple story any child can read—full of action, movement, color. Under that is the real story, philosophical, complex, full of meaning. One reader gets the interesting story, the other sees my philosophy of life.

"If you are filled with enthusiasm for one thing, if you have one preachment; if you see a wide vision and hold fast to that one thing, you will succeed."

FEATURES OF THE SERGE REMNANT DRESS

SERGE is the material of the moment. It is now in its remnant glory, and in combination it is used on dresses for street, office and home wear that are shown in stylish beauty before you. The important features of the serge "remnant dress" are here emphasized.

In the jacket dress on the second model, dark green serge is combined with twine-colored serge for the odd little coat-bodice. This is cut short in front to suggest a bolero line, swinging back over the hips to a square tail at the back.

The black hat has a turned-up edge with a flesh-colored crepe top and wired bow.

A stunning dress that shows the newest bolero blouse is shown on the central figure. The bolero line is given by shaped revers that are stitched and drop over the girdle. Buttons trim them. The color combination is putty color and a-lizard green, with ecru buttons to match. Sleeves have deep cuffiike extensions with puffs of ecru lace. A chamois cloth girdle finishes the top of the plain skirt.

On the black velvet hat are two velvet wings.

Plaid cloth in shades of green and blue forms the coat and novel sash back of the dress that comes next into view. The bodice is crossed at one side, a narrow belt of plaid defining the waist line. An apron front drapery of plaid trims the front. One loop and an end, ten inches wide, drop down from the belt line. Dark blue cloth forms the skirt and sleeves, while a small collar of dotted net trims the V-cut line. This model is very attractive in plaid and glain taffeta.

These features lead to a successful whole if the main lines of silhouette and drapery are followed. The little notes in an artistic assembling give beauty and style. Choose the most becoming from this varied array, and may your own creation be as good looking as these approved Paris models.

FRENCH FASHION NOTES

PARIS, Aug. 14.

EVERY one here is discussing the autumn modes and everywhere the influence of modern art is most apparent. Couturieres, realizing the necessity of originality and exclusiveness, solicited the co-operation of the artists, and with the result that the designs recently launched far surpass those of previous seasons.

The great scenic artist, Bakst, has allied himself with Madame Paquin, and the producer of the Russian ballet has designed models so unusually lovely in line and coloring that their influence is widely felt.

Designers have striven to originate rather than revive the modes of other days, and the costumes of the new season will open a new epoch in the history of fashion.

The most distinctly oriental note sounded in the new frocks is the broad sash which is swathed about the figure. Some models show girdlelike vests of brilliantly colored silk or velvet, and these are frequently buttoned with jeweled or enameled buttons.

Bechoff-David has created a stunning street costume of black velvet emphasizing the use of the girdle. The three-quarter-length coat is a simulation of the Russian coat, falling in soft lines about the waist, where it is girdled with a broad band of black satin knotted in front. Silk fringe is used to finish the ends and black satin forms the rolling collar.

Finishing the long sleeves are turned-back cuffs, and the skirt of the coat is cutaway. A lining of beige-and-black striped silk completes the coat.

From beneath a girdle of black satin falls a draped skirt of the velvet, slashed over the left foot. Black crocheted buttons and buttonholes bound with black satin contribute a modish finish to the slash.

The long sleeves are slightly gathered and are set in at the normal armhole.

The skirt, like most of Callot's models, is extremely narrow at the hem, but has fullness pleated into a girdle.

Printed silks are a favorite material for afternoon costumes, and Jeanne Lanvin has created an artistic model from this fabric. Against a background of navy blue appears a futurist design in tones of blue, green and rose, making a charming combination of colors.

The bodice is of the fashionable surplice style, and has a deep, V-shaped chemisette of finest white net bordered with a double pleated frill of the same material. The sleeves are long and rather full above the elbow and are drawn tightly to the arm below. A double frill of net forms the cuff. The large armholes open in jumper effect over the underblouse and the fullness is slightly draped under the arms.

The classic styles of the directoire period have inspired Paul Poiret to create an evening gown of exquisite beauty. Three materials, satin crepe, striped grosgrain and sherry silk, are utilized effectively by this artist. The foundation is of white satin, and over this is arranged the semitransparent satin crepe.

The bodice has an extremely high waist line and a single strand of brilliants outlines the square decolletage. A sleeveless bolero of black-and-white striped grosgrain silk, lined with emeral green, is drawn over the bodice, and this is bordered with brilliants.

The skirt is softly gathered at the waist and is slashed nearly to the knee over the right foot, where a bow-knot of brilliants catches the drapery in place. A novel feature about this gown is the long scarflike train which is allowed to flow or is draped about the figure, the end passing through a loop on the front of the dress.

Fabric hats will undeniably be the leaders in the realm of millinery, and the loveliest models are of velvet, moire, taffeta, crepe or velour.

A large hat of black velvet, with a full crown, has a large bow of black tulle edged with black lace poised at the back.

A smart street dress of navy-blue serge has the lower section of the two-tiered skirt pleated. About the waist is drawn a bayadere sash of striped taffeta in tones of green and blue. Designed to wear with this frock is a small hat of green taffeta covered with plumes of the same tone.

Among the colors which will be utilized in the fall costumes are putty, absinthe green, eggplant purple, Sevres green, Florentine red, scarab green, mandarin yellow and oakleaf brown.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

KEEPING THE HANDS ATTRACTIVE

Wear Gloves at Night.

IF YOU have any doubts as to the story that one's hands tell the casual observer, you have but to recall the case of Mary Queen of Scots, who, when trying to flee from her own people in the disguise of a washerwoman, was captured because one of the guards caught sight of her well-kept hands.

It is not meant that some of us should refrain from hard work, which does make the hands coarse, but we should make a great effort to protect our hands as much as possible and to care for them daily. It is quite unnecessary for our hands to reveal the nature of our work. A little attention given to them every day will keep the skin smooth and white and the nails in an attractive condition.

For hands that are bony, cold cream is prescribed. This should be rubbed into the skin with a gentle rotary motion of the finger tips. It is quite important that a good cream be used for the purpose, so I am publishing the recipe for an excellent one:

Skin Food for the Hands

Cocoa butter	1 ounce
Oil of sweet almonds	1 ounce
Oxide of zinc	1 gram
Borax	1 dram
Oil of bergamot	6 drops

Heat the cocoa butter and oil of almonds in a double boiler and when thoroughly blended and the zinc and borax, which has all it cools, and add the oil of bergamot last.

When the hands are of an unsightly redness, they should be covered with almond meal or oatmeal after they have been washed and dried. A little of the meal may be kept in a small bag, which in turn should be rubbed on the hands after the soap has been rinsed off.

Buttermilk is another excellent bleach. It is a safe one to use on the hands, face and neck.

Lemon juice can be used to bleach the skin if there are no abrasions. There are some women who keep a supply of lemons in the house for the purpose of bleaching the skin. When the lemon juice alone smarts the skin, it should be diluted with an equal part of water.

When cucumbers are plentiful, they are often used on the skin. They may be cut lengthwise and rubbed on the hands or the juice may be squeezed from them and bottled. Following are the directions for making a cucumber wash which is splendid for softening and whitening the skin:

Cucumber Wash

Cut 1 or 2 cucumbers into rather small chunks without peeling. Put these into a mortar and pound with a pestle (or use a heavy potato masher and a heavy earthenware bowl) until the mass is pulpline in consistency. Now filter this through a piece of cheesecloth or very coarse muslin, squeezing out as much of the juice as you can. Now put the refuse and filtered juice into a clean enameled saucepan and simmer about half an hour. Strain and bottle.

Then re-strain and when cold add alcohol to the proportion of 1 tablespoon to half a pint of the strained liquid. Bottle and use to sponge your face instead of washing it during the day.

The alcohol should preserve the juice.

Whenever you are embarrassed by having red hands, be sure that the redness is not due to the wearing of tight gloves, sleeves, collars, corsets, etc. No amount of lotions or creams will do any good if this is the cause. The circulation of the blood must not be impeded.

It is a good plan to wear gloves at night after applying cold cream to the hands. To give ventilation, the tips of the gloves fingers should be ripped and a diamond-shaped piece should be cut from the palms of the gloves. These will protect the bed covers and will give the cream a better chance to get in its good work.

Do you know one reason why so many people have chapped hands? It is because they do not dry them thoroughly. The back of the hands near the wrist seems to be most neglected. A very good cream for chapped hands is made of the following ingredients:

White petrolatum	3½ ounces
Paraffin wax	¼ ounce
Lanolin	1 ounce
Water	1½ ounces
Oil of rose	3 drops
Alcohol	½ dram

Melt the paraffin wax, add the petrolatum and lanolin, stir constantly, beating the water in during the process. Add the oil and alcohol when nearly cold.

This may be applied before the gloves are put on at night.

When doing your housework, wear gloves whenever you can. While sweeping, dusting or hanging up the clothes they may conveniently be worn.

There are many vegetables and fruits which stain the hands, so that I think it will not come amiss for me to tell of some methods for removing the ugly marks.

A fresh tomato will remove ink stains.

Orange or lemon skins will remove tar stains. The hands should be wiped immediately after using either.

Do not start to peel Irish potatoes while the hands are wet and do not wash them immediately after peeling the vegetable. If this precaution is taken there will be no stains.

Now that we have learned how to care for the skin of the hands, let us devote a little attention to the nails. I often feel glad that it is the custom to wear gloves, for I fear we should have some sickening sights otherwise. There are girls who are either too lazy or too indifferent to the appearance of their nails

Olive Oil Softens Cuticle

Massage With Cold Cream

Almond Meal Bleaches

Tomato Removes Stains

to give them special attention. It is every one's duty to keep nature's gifts in perfect condition.

If the cuticle around the nail is rough or creeps up so far as to hide the half moon, a little cold cream should be applied, or the finger tips should be held in olive oil for a few minutes. Remove the cream or wipe the oil from the fingers and then push the cuticle back with an orangewood stick.

Never use a steel instrument on the nails if you wish to keep them attractive. To cleanse the skin beneath the edge of the nail, you should twist a bit of absorbent cotton around the pointed end of the orangewood stick, dip it in peroxide and then insert it gently beneath the nail. There is a natural tendency for dirt to collect beneath the nail. This is not only unsightly, but the dirt offers a splendid lodging place for germs.

If your nails are inclined to be brittle, it is evident that they need nourishment. For this condition I advise the use of either the cream or paste for which the recipes are here given:

Nail Cream

Petroleum	1 ounce
White castile soap (powdered)	60 grains
Oil of bergamot	3 drops

Paste for Brittle Finger Nails

Take equal parts of refined pitch and myrrh or of turpentine and myrrh melted. Mix together and spread upon the nails at night. Remove in the morning with a little olive oil. This paste will nourish the nails and make them stronger.

If you have been blessed with well-shaped, soft, smooth hands, cherish and protect your heritage. If your hands are in a frightful condition, bring them up to a point where they will bear the closest examination without causing a feeling of shame. This you can do by following the above directions.

A Shiny Nose

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My nose gets very shiny and embarrasses me a great deal. Please tell me what to do for it.

HELEN.

Be most careful to rinse the face thoroughly and after drying the skin apply the lotion made of:

Lotion for a Shiny Nose

Boracic acid	1 dram
Rosewater	4 ounces

Mix.

Apply the lotion as often as necessary.

A Shampoo

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly tell me how to make a shampoo of a simple kind?

DOROTHY.

Following is the recipe for a very good shampoo: Dissolve half a cake of white floating soap in a quart of boiling water. Let it simmer half an hour over a slow fire. Dissolve a tablespoon of washing soda in a quart of boiling water. Add to it the soap mixture. Stir together and let cool. Use as a shampoo. Rinse the hair always in four or five clear waters after using a shampoo mixture.

To Develop the Legs

Dear Mrs. Symes,

What can I do to develop the legs?

DOROTHY.

Exercise is the best possible method of enlarging the legs. Long walks will often produce results. A gymnastic feat which is said to be a certain enlarger for the lower limbs is to stand on one foot and, with the other leg held out as nearly at a right angle to the body as possible, try to touch the knee to the floor.

A Cold Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please give me the recipe for a harmless cold cream? My skin is inclined to be very dry.

A. B.

Witch Hazel Cold Cream

White wax	1 ounce
Spermaceti	1 ounce
Oil of almonds	½ pint

Melt; pour into a mortar which has been heated by being immersed some time in boiling water. Very gradually add 2 ounces of rosewater and 1 ounce of witch hazel, and assiduously stir the mixture until an emulsion is formed, and afterward until the mixture is nearly cold.

Enlarged Pores

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please tell me what to do for enlarged pores?

THELMA.

I advise you to apply to your face a lotion made of:

Boric acid	1 dram
Distilled witch hazel	4 ounces

It is important that the face be rinsed in cold water after hot water has been used on it so that the pores may be reduced to normal size.

Cream for Pimples

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Kindly give me the recipe for a pimple cure.

ELLA.

To get entirely rid of pimples it is necessary to locate the cause of them and to remove it. Indigestion, a poor condition of the blood or a failure to keep the skin clean may be at the bottom of the trouble. You should consult a physician and have him prescribe for the internal trouble. For external treatment I propose bathing the blemishes with hot water and applying the cream for pimples the recipe is here given:

Fosatti Cream for Pimples

Extract of violet	30 drops
Sweet almond oil	1¼ drams
Sulphur precipitated	75 grains
Lanolin	75 grains
Oxide of zinc	2 scruples

Cucumber Lotion

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please give me the recipe for a cucumber lotion? It whitens my skin?

RUTH.

Following is the recipe for a cucumber lotion, which will whiten, cleanse and soften the skin:

Cucumber Lotion

Expressed juice of cucumbers	½ pint
Deodorized alcohol	2½ ounces
Sweet almond oil	2½ ounces
Shaving cream (or melted castile soap)	½ dram
Blanched almonds	1¼ drams

Bust In Large

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly tell me how I can reduce my bust without reducing my general weight?

How can I make my arms and legs smaller?

Is there any way to change the shape of the nose?

A CONSTANT READER.

Dieting and exercising are the only methods that you can use safely to reduce the size of your bust, but these will reduce the general weight. Can you not make the bust less noticeable by wearing a well-made, tight-fitting brassiere?

Daily massage with cocoa butter will develop the arms and legs. Baseball, tennis, rowing and all other sports which require much movement with the arms should be indulged in.

Walking and climbing will develop and make firm the muscles of the legs.

No way that I can suggest.

A Liquid Rouge

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I should like very much to have the recipe for a liquid rouge.

HELEN.

I am giving you the recipe for a rouge. If your cheeks are pale, why not try to let nature put color into them? Exercise daily in the open air, retire early every evening and eat only the nourishing foods. Massage the cheeks gently every day to stimulate the circulation of the blood.

Liquid Bloom of Roses

Carmine	20 grains
Rosewater	4 fluid ounces
Ammonia water	1 fluid ounce
Spirit of rose	1 fluid dram

A Sachet

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please give me the recipe for a pleasant sachet?

E. C. V.

Following are two recipes from which you can make a choice:

Rose Sachet Powder

Powdered Florentine orris	4 ounces
Rose leaves (air dried)	10 ounces
Musk in powder	10 grains
Lavender flowers	1 ounce

Mix well and keep closely corked until you wish to use for the sachet.

Violet Sachet Powder

Powdered orris	1 ounce
Powdered tonka bean	1 ounce
Powdered acacia	¾ ounce
Musk	6 grains

Mix thoroughly. Bottle for ten days, when it is ready for use.

Liquid Face Powder

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please publish the recipe for a white liquid face powder?

A CONSTANT READER.

Liquid Powder

Pure oxide of zinc	1 ounce
Glycerin	1 dram
Rosewater	4 ounces
Essence of rose	15 drops

Sift the zinc, dissolving it in just enough of the rosewater to cover it; then add the glycerin; next, the remainder of the rosewater, and the essence of rose last.

Shake well and apply with a soft sponge or antiseptic gauze. The face must be well wiped off before the liquid dries, or it will be streaked.

Dreams

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly tell me how I can stop dreaming?

G. A. R.

Disagreeable dreams are generally associated with indigestion and biliousness. In such cases medicine for the liver must be taken. Worry will also cause one to dream. Keep the mind in a calm state an hour or so before retiring, and sip slowly a glass of warm water before getting into bed. This should prove helpful.

A Depilatory

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will the depilatory which you recommend cause the hairs to come back stiff and black, as they do when shaved with a razor?

M. J. J.

The depilatory does not give permanent results, and the hairs will return thicker each time the mixture is applied. The only permanent cure is the electric needle. If you have this applied be sure to go to a reliable operator.

Candy Is Fattening

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Please answer the following questions in your papers:

1. Is candy fattening? About how much or how often should it be eaten in order not to produce fat? Is buttermilk fattening?

2. Water?

I do not eat much fattening foods except candy, and do lots of walking, still I am fat. What is the reason for this?

3. About how much should a girl 5 feet 2 inches weigh?

4. What causes large pores?

Tell me some inexpensive tonic for falling hair and dandruff. I do not want anything oily or anything that will change the color of the hair. Mine is light brown. Is crude oil good? Will it darken the hair? Is it too often to wash the hair every two weeks?

6. Do you think it necessary to use powders and creams to preserve the complexion? I use nothing at all but soap and water.

7. Don't you think it injurious to a young girl's health to diet and fast in order to reduce flesh?

8. My sister's height is 5 feet 1 inch, weight 97 pounds, waist measure 23 inches, bust 34, hips 38. How are her proportions? Would she be considered slim? Does she weigh enough?

E. V. D.

1. Candy and all other excessively sweet foods are fattening. They should be avoided entirely if one wishes to keep down one's weight. Buttermilk is not fattening, but it is very nourishing, and is a fine substitute for foods when one is dieting. Water is considered fattening by some, but we see many of thin persons who are great water drinkers. At least three pints of water should be drunk each day.

2. Possibly you eat too much. Cut down the amount and do not eat between meals. Cut candy from the list.

3. A great deal depends upon the age. A girl from 15 to 19 years of age, measuring five feet two inches, should weigh about 117 pounds.

4. Failure to rinse the face in cold water after hot water has been used on it, indigestion, liver trouble, etc., may be responsible for enlarged pores. A splendid astringent for them is made of diluted alcohol. Ice compresses, too, are very good. For the other causes a physician should be consulted.

5. Crude oil is just the thing to improve the condition of your hair. It may darken the hair a little, but not noticeably so. If the head requires washing frequently, once every two weeks is not too often to shampoo it, provided you are careful to dry it thoroughly.

6. Not if it is in good condition.

7. Yes, when it is done to an absurd degree; but when done systematically no harm can come from it.

8. Tell me her age and I shall be better able to judge.

Twitching Eyelids

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please tell me what I can do for my eyelids, which twitch very much at times?

ELEANOR.

You should go at once to a reliable physician and receive proper treatment for your nerves, which are evidently in a poor condition.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

TABLE FORMALITIES

A CERTAIN innate refinement must always be evident whether you are eating alone, at picnics or at a formal dinner party. But many little conventionalities have come down to us and are easily mastered. I am going to speak today of the use of different things on the table. I have countless letters on my file which have asked me about these things. Here are some main facts.

When you sit at the table, sit erect. Don't slouch in your chair, nor bend far over your plate to eat. It is not considered good form to place elbows on the table during the progress of a meal, and any handling of napkin rings, forks, spoons, etc., to keep the hands occupied is decidedly ill bred.

Do not spread the napkin out over the chest or lap. You are not supposed to be so careless in eating that a complete covering is necessary. It should not be tucked in the dress as if it were a bib, for, as I said before, you are credited with an ability to eat without dropping your food. The correct place is over your knees, and when you need to wipe your mouth or hands it should be used unobtrusively and quietly. If you are eating in a restaurant or a hotel dining room it is not necessary to fold your napkin, for it is supposed that a clean one will be given for the next meal. Place it folded carelessly on the table when you leave. When visiting a day or two at a friend's you will be safe to fold it in its creases, for linen is rarely changed at each meal. The best guide is to watch the hostess, who by her action will intimate what is the general rule of the home.

If there is a small plate placed at the side of your dinner plate, generally at the left, it is probably for the rolls or bread and butter. A small knife with a wide blade, or a knife shaped like a dinner knife, only shorter, is the bread and butter knife, and after spreading a piece of bread it should be placed on the bread plate. The bread or roll should never be buttered in its entire form. A very small piece should be broken off and buttered as it is required. The small saucer, or "butter chip," is also used, especially in public dining rooms. In this case, the end of the knife can be placed on the plate, the handle on the table. This has to be done to keep the buttered blade from touching the tablecloth.

The dinner or meat knife is invariably held in the right hand, the end of the handle touching the palm of the hand. It is for cutting only. It must never be used for piling or smoothing food on the fork or for scraping a plate for a last morsel. Above all, it must never convey food to the mouth. It is for cutting food and should be used at frequent intervals, for as I have said before, all food should not be cut at one time.

The fork is taken in the right hand when food is conveyed to the mouth. It is not held spoonwise, with the curved surface down, except for small vegetables like peas, beans, etc., that could not possibly stay on the fork in the other position.

Do not crush food between the prongs of the fork and collect several kinds as if it were a shovel before carrying it to the mouth.

Do not hold the knife and fork in the hand when passing the plate for a helping. Place them on one side close together, their points together and their handles on the rim of the plate. When finished, place the points in the center of the plate, their handles on the edge of the plate.

The fork is used for oysters, clams, lobster and terrapin. Small, three-pronged forks are used for the first two of these foods.

Fish is eaten with a fork, and made dishes or entrees, ices and frozen desserts, melons and all salads are fork foods. The ice cream fork is a fork with one wide prong and is much wider than the usual tea fork. Just now a new salad fork is being used. It is silver, of course, and longer than the ice cream fork, but its prongs resemble it.

I shall talk next week about the other utensils of a dinner service.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Walking Together

DEAR Mrs. Adams,

Is it customary for the bride and bridegroom to walk up the church aisle together?

THELMA.

Using Place Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it customary to tell me why place cards are used at dinners?

AN INQUIRER.

A Letter of Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Kindly inform me what a young girl of twenty should say and do when she is called upon at her home and handed a letter of introduction by a young man? The letter is written by a girl friend. Is it proper to read it before the man? We have no maid to open the door.

CARRIE W.

Having been posted beforehand by the girl friend that she is sending this man to meet her, the girl should invite the young man into the house and read the letter in his presence. She should then shake hands with him and say that it gives her pleasure to meet a friend of her friend's, after that he may be introduced to members of her family, and the rest will be easy.

At a Home Wedding

Dear Mrs. Adams,

1. At a home wedding, is it correct for the bride to wear a train and a veil, just as at a church wedding?

2. Is it customary to have bridesmaids at a home wedding?

3. If the ceremony takes place at 6 in the evening, what should the bridegroom wear?

4. When the bride is entering the room in which she is to be married, what music should be played? Would not a wedding march be too formal for the occasion?

LOUISE M.

1. Yes.

2. Yes, but it is seldom convenient to have more than one or two.

3. Complete evening dress.

4. The wedding march will be not at all too formal.

When Introduced

Dear Mrs. Adams,

1. What is one to say when is introduced to a woman should the woman rise?

2. If a man asks to escort a woman home, what should she say?

3. Are perfumes in good form?

PERPLEXED.

1. Not unless she is acting as hostess when the introduction is made.

2. If she wishes his company she may say, "Yes, thank you, I shall be glad to have your company." Otherwise she may say, "No, I thank you; mother is going home with me," or give a similar excuse.

3. A delicately scented perfume is not in bad form, but it is very bad taste to use a perfume that can be detected yards away.

A Delayed Gift

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Will you please tell me if it is all right to send a gift to a bride who was married a month ago? Where shall I send it? WINIFRED.

You may send the gift now, but with it send an explanatory note. It should be forwarded to the bride at her new home.

A Path for the Bride

Dear Mrs. Adams,

How may a path be made for a bride who is married at her home? When a number of yards are required, how much more than the aisle should be. PERPLEXED.

The bride should arrange to have four little boys or girls to draw white satin ribbons through the crowd of guests, so as to form a path reaching from the door she is to enter by to the place where the bridegroom and the minister stand awaiting her.

Addressing Daughter-in-Law

Dear Mrs. Adams,

My son has recently been married to a girl I have never met. When writing to her, should I call her by her married name?

M. L. G.

Yes.

Order of Precedence

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When giving a dinner in honor of a newly-married couple, how should the guests enter the dining room? READER.

The host, offering his right arm to the wife of the newly-married couple, leads the way into the dining room. The other guests follow in the order they wish, but the hostess on the arm of the "new" husband brings up the rear.

Making Calls

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Between what hours should calls be made?

MAIDE.

Formal calls are paid between the hours of 3 and 6 in the afternoon. Persons who have prevented by business associations from making calls during the day have the privilege of making calls during the evening between the hours of 7:30 and 9 o'clock. The locality must be taken into consideration before the caller decides whether an early or a later call will be most convenient.

Bouillon

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is bouillon served at a formal dinner?

FANNY.

Bouillon or thickened soup may be served at a formal dinner.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME

WHAT TO TAKE TO THE PICNIC.

FIRST, catch your picnickers!

Not everyone you know will fit in at a picnic. Some persons don't care to eat in the open; others shrink from the sort of food provided on such occasions; still others are of the fussy variety who are afraid of taking cold or have terrors of snakes and toads, or whose enjoyment is imperiled by the presence of mosquitoes or gnats or flies. Be sure that none of your proposed guests is of any one of these classes before you urge their presence at your picnic. Choose the genuine lovers of outdoors, the "sports" who do not mind little vexations and make light of annoyances, who are prepared to do their share towards rendering the party a pleasure excursion instead of a "pleasure exertion."

After your bill of company is settled, turn your attention to your bill of fare. Much of the comfort of the expedition depends upon the commissariat, not only what you bring, but the way in which it is put up. Provide sanitary cups, paper plates and nakins,, and plenty of the oiled or waxed paper in which to wrap sandwiches and other things. Make your equipment as light as you can if you are likely to have to carry your baskets any distance. At the best it will be heavy enough.

Too Many Apt to Bring Cake.

One of the faults I have noticed at a good many picnics I have attended is a preponderance of sweets. Especially at a basket picnic there is a tendency to bring cake sooner than anything else. When you give the picnic yourself and select all the food you can balance it more wisely, but if a number of people join, and each brings something it should be positively decided beforehand what every one is to contribute. There is as much field for choice in the line of substantials as there is in the direction of sweet stuff, and the former cost no more in money or labor than the latter. The real need is for forethought and ingenuity.

Consider for a moment the things you can take to the picnic. Sandwiches, of course, and these are the most convenient form in which to carry bread and any savory accompaniment. When one thinks of the infinite variety of sandwiches, it seems as though there were no need for anything beyond these. Yet one may make other dainties no less acceptable.

If the picnic party is to go in a conveyance to the place where the lunch is to be eaten the choice of foods is widened at once. When weight is no objection, when you can carry plates, knives, forks, and spoons without feeling them a burden, there is no reason why you should not take with you veal or chicken or beef loaf, gelatin, cold chicken, salads, as well as sandwiches and stuffed eggs.

I have friends who delight in motor picnics. They have a little car that takes them on pleasant runs into the country, and they love to carry along a lunch and make a day of it. A cheap straw suitcase is fitted up as a lunch basket with white agate plates and cups, a couple of brick ice cream molds of block tin answer for sandwich boxes and to hold cake, and two thermos bottles completes the outfit. Such a basket would go in a carriage or a boat as well as in a motor and is worth purchasing and plenishing for the sake of the comfort it gives.

Make Salads Ready at Home.

When you carry salads make them ready at home, with the exception of the dressing, and take this in a wide mouthed bottle or preserve jar. Leave your meat loaf in the mold in which it was set to form and cut it as it is needed. Cup custards or jellies formed in small glasses or cups are conveniently handled. As I have said, all these, and other provisions which will readily suggest themselves, are easily managed if you have no walking to do in order to reach the place where the meal is to be spread.

Even when it is desirable to go in light marching order an attractive meal is possible. Stuffed or plain hard boiled eggs, an assortment of sandwiches, both savory and sweet, cakes, fruit, candies, hot or iced coffee or tea, chilled lemonade, by the help of the blessed thermos bottle—with supplies such as this you are safe in trusting that the material part of your picnic will be a success.

Carry a tablecloth either of paper or damask and a rug on which to lay it. If you can supply yourself with a few cushions you will win the gratitude of the members of the party who prefer something softer than the ground for a seat. If the picnic is a family party, made up largely of children, you need not exert yourself to compound delicate dainties. Plenty is more in their line, and if you give them substantial sandwiches, boiled eggs at discretion, and cake in abundance they will be entirely satisfied. It is for the benefit of more critical appetites that you make your more delicate sandwiches, but fresh air creates hunger for nearly every one, and you may be pretty sure that your trouble in mixing and cutting will receive hearty appreciation.

Beef Loaf.

Have chopped fine a pound and a half of raw beef, as you would for Hamburg steak, with a couple of slices of salt pork; mix with these a half cup of finely crushed cracker crumbs, a small tablespoon of butter, a teaspoon of salt, an egg, and a good seasoning of pepper, onion juice (this in moderation), parsley, and summer savory or sweet marjoram. Mix all well together and pack down in a buttered mold. A brick bread tin makes a shape which cuts into neat slices. Put this in a dripping pan of hot water, cover the meat closely, and bake in a steady oven for an hour and a half. Fill up the water from the kettle as it cooks away. When done, leave the meat in the pan with a weight on it until it is entirely cold, then take to the picnic in the tin, or cut in thin slices with a sharp knife and use as a filling for sandwiches. It is nice to eat with crisp lettuce leaves, with or without a French dressing.

* *

Veal Jelly Loaf.

Put a knuckle of veal with a good deal of meat on it over the fire with sliced onion, a small bunch of chopped parsley, a tablespoonful of minced celery, a half teaspoon kitchen bouquet, and half a dozen whole cloves, adding enough cold water to cover all. Simmer slowly until the meat is tender, put in a teaspoon of salt, and leave the meat in the liquor until cold. Take it out then, cut the meat from the bones, cut it up small, or chop it; heat the liquor enough to enable you to strain it, put in the bones, and boil until the stock is cooked down to two cupfuls. You can then take out the bones and stir in the chopped meat, turning all into a mold to form, or put some of the stock jelly into a mold, garnish with hard boiled eggs, sliced and stoned olives, and put the chopped meat on this, moistening it with the stock. In either case let it become cold and firm on the ice before slicing it. If you are not going to use it in sandwiches, take to the picnic in the mold.

* *

Chicken Jelly Loaf.

Make an aspic jelly of two cups of any well seasoned clear stock, veal, chicken, or consomme. Either the veal or the chicken is preferable, and if you have neither you can use the clear chicken soup, which comes in cans. Heat a pint of this, add a tablespoon of gelatin which has been soaked in cold water, and when this is dissolved put in two tablespoons of vinegar, bring to a boil, strain without squeezing the cloth, add two tablespoons of sherry, and set the jelly aside to cool, making sure first that it is sufficiently seasoned. Cut cold chicken into dice or chop coarsely. When the jelly begins to form slightly put part of it in the bottom of a mold, mix the rest of it with the chicken, and turn this into the mold. Use your own taste about garnishing with sliced hard boiled eggs, olives, pickles, etc. If you wish you can put this chicken loaf to form in patty pans or small nappies and have them served individually at the picnic. They can be eaten directly from the mold and save the trouble of plates.

* *

Stuffed Eggs.

Boil eggs hard, cut in two crosswise, take out the yolks, mix with butter, salt, and pepper, or with butter and minced ham or tongue or crab flakes or anchovy paste or anything else savory and well seasoned. Return the yolks to the halved whites, put the halves together, keep them in form by twisting fringed white tissue paper about them and lay them in a basket or box where they will not be crushed.

* *

Steak Sandwiches.

Broil a steak medium and let it get cold. Chop fine, season with salt and pepper and put with it half as much chopped pickles or olives and pimentos as you have meat. Soften with mayonnaise, adding a little onion juice or minced chives if you like the flavor. Cut rolls or biscuit in half and scoop out a portion of the crumb, butter the hollowed halves and fill with the meat mixture. Rare roast beef may be used in the same way and makes a substantial sandwich

* *

Picnic Chicken Sandwiches.

To one cup of chopped chicken add a half cup of chopped celery and soften with mayonnaise. If celery is not attainable use green peppers or pimentos instead. Mingle with mayonnaise and put into rolls or biscuits as directed in the preceding recipe, or spread between slices of white or brown or whole wheat bread.

* *

Chicken and Bacon Sandwiches.

Chop your chicken fine and put with it a quarter as much cooked bacon as you have chicken, add a green pepper minced fine. Scoop out your rolls as already directed, butter them, line each half with a crisp lettuce leaf, put in the meat filling and join the halves.

* *

Chicken and Smoked Beef Sandwich.

Cook dried beef crisp in a little butter, put with it twice as much chopped chicken as you have beef and add a ripe peeled tomato, chopped fine. Season with pepper (the beef will salt it sufficiently) and put into halved rolls or biscuit as above directed, lining these with crisp lettuce leaves.

* *

Crab Meat Sandwiches.

Mince a cup of crab meat fine, put with a couple of hard boiled eggs, chopped very small, pepper and salt to taste, and a little celery salt. If you like cucumbers, you will find three or four slices of these minced an excellent addition to the salad. Spread on white or whole wheat bread, after softening the mixture with mayonnaise.

* *

Almond and Egg Sandwiches.

Boil eggs hard and chop them fine. To each egg allow three or four salted almonds minced or crushed, pepper to taste, and more salt if this is needed. Mix with butter until soft enough to spread, or with mayonnaise, or a good boiled dressing, and put on slices of white or brown bread.

* *

Jam Sandwiches.

Have your bread and butter cut thin and the crust trimmed off and spread with any good jam or marmalade, not putting it on too thickly at the edges. These are also as popular as cake, and more wholesome than a rich cake.

* *

Jam and Cheese Sandwiches.

Work up pot cheese or a cream cheese with cream and butter until it is very soft. Put with this half as much good jam—raspberry is one of the best for the purpose—and spread on slices of buttered white or graham or whole wheat bread.

Butter Scotch Pie.

"I send you a recipe for butter scotch pie which I hope you will print in the Sunday issue for the benefit of Mrs. A. R. B.:

"BUTTER SCOTCH PIE—One cup of soft A sugar, two eggs, two tablespoons flour, one cup of cold water, two heaping tablespoons of butter, one teaspoon of vanilla, one baked piecrust. Mix the sugar, flour, and yolk of eggs to a smooth paste, add gradually the cold water and the butter, and stir over the fire until thick; then add the vanilla. Pour into the baked piecrust. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and spread this on the top of the pie and brown slightly in the oven. E. E. D."

Although several recipes for this dainty appeared some months ago, I am glad to comply with your request and print it again in the Sunday paper. It will undoubtedly prove of value to a number of readers besides Mrs. A. R. B.

* *

"Can you or one of the Cornerites give me a recipe for making elderblossom wine? I have one for elderberry wine and have made it many, many times. This is the first favor I have asked you. Mrs. G. V."

ELDERBLOSSOM WINE—Three gallons of water, nine pounds sugar, white of one egg beaten to a froth. Stir and boil together, then skim and pour over one quart of elderblossoms, pressed down hard. When cool add two tablespoons of lemon juice, half a yeast cake dissolved in a little water, and let all stand in an earthen jar for nine days and ferment, stirring every day. Put into a keg three pounds of raisins, chopped or cut, then pour in the liquid. Cork tight and let stand six months or longer before using. A year is better than six months.

* *

Strawberry Ice Cream.

"I send a recipe for strawberry ice cream which I know to be good and may be of service to some one at this season of the year, when fruit ice creams are so much in demand

"STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM.—Mash two quarts of berries and run them through a sieve. Put a cup and a half of sugar with the berries after they are strained and add a quart of cream, or make it half milk and half cream. No whipping is needed. Put the mixture into a freezer and freeze. This is an excellent ice cream. The quantity makes about a quart and a half when frozen. S. S."

This recipe comes too late to be of use so far as strawberries are concerned, but it can be employed with other fruits. I have no doubt it is delicious, but it is rather expensive. My own preference would be to mash the berries and put them in without straining. Raspberries may be employed in the same way, and peaches are also very fine when frozen. It will not detract from the merits of the cream to add to it the whites of a couple of eggs, beaten light, but will rather make the cream less rich, as well as increase its bulk. For myself I enjoy an ice cream made with a foundation of custard of milk and eggs to which uncooked cream is added just before it goes into the freezer.

Home Already Supplied.

"I have noticed that someone wished to give a good home to some motherly good woman over 60 years old, three in the family, one a girl of 10 years. I feel as if I would like to accept such a home with a good family and would like very much to exchange references with them. The home is in Kansas City, some distance from South Carolina, where I live. I am alone, 63 years old and a widow. Mrs. S. A. D."

I am sorry to tell you that the home of which you speak has already been supplied with the "good, motherly woman" for whom the Kansas City correspondent was seeking. I put your application here because I am sure there must be other homes where you would be welcome, and I believe that if your wish is known it will not be long before application will be made to me for your address. There are many families needing what you can supply and it is evident that you yourself long to be set in a family.

Girl Desires Piano.

"I have a daughter 15 years old who, owing to ill health, is unable to attend school and is also unable to do any kind of work. She is a very bright and ambitious child and grieves over her inability to accomplish anything in life. She has always longed for a piano, but as a result of my own ill health I have been unable to get her one, and now I am wondering if there is some one who has a piano in storage or perhaps has a piano she would like to have cared for and would be willing to entrust it to me. I assure you we would take the best of care of it and O, how grateful we would be for the use of it. It would make a bright spot in my dear daughter's life. She is all I have and I am so anxious to satisfy this great longing ANXIOUS MOTHER.

Before this we have been able to supply one or two of our correspondents with pianos, although it can well be understood that so valuable and expensive an instrument is not always easy to secure. But the picture of the "bright ambitious child" is touching and I hope the story of her wish may meet the eyes of some one in the great, generous city of Chicago, which is her home, who may be able to help her. At the same time I would feel I was neglecting an opportunity to be of service if I did not point out that the energy and zeal and hard work required to obtain even a partial mastery of the piano would be of use in obtaining education along other lines which might be of more practical benefit than even the power to produce music and an instrument on which to play. In other words, if she is able to learn the piano she is able to acquire branches of knowledge which might help her to earn her living or at least assist her in making part of it. History and biography abound with tales of those who have conquered ill health and won educations by hard work and I would hesitate to declare that a girl who is able to play the piano cannot do other things, too. Can some one not make suggestions for her as well as try to get the desired piano? I will give the child's address on application.

Candied Grapefruit.

"I note that in a recent issue you print formula for making orange and grapefruit marmalade, which deeply interests me. There is a firm in Massachusetts somewhere which makes a specialty of candied grapefruit. I would like to know how this is done. It would seem that if this particular firm can buy the grapefruit from the south, ship it there, and make the candy and ship it back to the south, there is quite a nice profit in this business. I have a grapefruit orchard and would appreciate your letter giving me the formula or recipe how to make this candy or candied grapefruit.

E. U. F."

I can give you a recipe for home made candied oranges but I am not sure how this would do for commercial purposes. You know that something is put in the candy of commerce which prevents its drying and hardening as home made candy often does. It is one of the secrets of the trade and is not in my possession. Can some one help out this correspondent and give her the information which would enable her to make use of the grapefruit where it grows? Pending this, I am glad to offer my own recipe for such candy for family use.

CANDIED ORANGES—Make a sirup of two cups of sugar and a gill of water, boiling them in a porcelain or porcelain lined saucepan without stirring until a little dropped into iced water becomes brittle. Take the saucepan from the fire, set it at once in a pan of boiling water, add the juice of a quarter of a lemon to the sirup. Dip sections of orange into this sirup, holding each piece in a pair of candy tongs; take out immediately, lay on waxed or oiled paper to dry. The work must be done quickly, as the sugar hardens very soon, and in this case the boiling water in the outer vessel must be renewed in order to soften the sirup in the saucepan.

* *

Berwick Sponge Cake.

"A few months ago I saw in your department a recipe for the famous Berwick sponge cake. I tried it and it beat all the sponge cakes I ever had. I cut it out, but have misplaced it. Can you give it again?

Mrs. H."

BERWICK SPONGE CAKE—Three eggs, one and a half cups sugar, half cup water, two cups flour, one teaspoon cream of tartar, half teaspoon soda, lemon extract. Beat eggs separately, add sugar, water, lemon extract, to yolks of eggs, then flour sifted with soda and cream of tartar and whipped whites. Make in a loaf.

Another Plea for Musical Instrument.

"I wonder is some one has a guitar or violin to give away? I know something of music and still have my instruction books, but through hard circumstances was forced to give up both instruments. I have a little girl who has talent for music and would like to teach her either one or the other instrument, but cannot afford to buy one. I would gladly call for it or pay charges on it if one is offered. Mrs. O'H."

Another plea for a musical instrument, and this, too, from Chicago. Either a guitar or a violin is more likely to be seeking an owner than a piano, and I hope this applicant may have her wish gratified for her child, too. Her address awaits any one who desires to write to her with a view to bestowing either the violin or the guitar.

Keeping Milk in Hot Weather.

"Allow me to pass along to the Corner a little point I have learned in regard to keeping milk during hot weather, which will be particularly helpful to those who cannot afford to buy ice, and especially when milk is needed for children. Buy a dairy thermometer for 25 cents or less. As the milk is delivered place it at once over the fire and by the use of the thermometer ascertain when the mercury rises to 120 Fahrenheit. As soon as that point is reached remove the milk from the fire and beat thoroughly with an egg-beater. Milk treated in this manner will keep several days in the hottest weather and does not form a skin over the top if well beaten. The cream rises and tastes just as it would on the fresh milk. This hint has proved so helpful to me that I am happy to give it to others. Milk from the wagon is not always properly cooled and even when on ice sours quickly.

"Mrs. A. L. G."

Sterilized milk is heated to a temperature of 212°, pasteurized milk is brought to from 160 to 170 degrees and kept at this for from ten to twenty minutes. Even so it is likely to sour in the course of forty-eight hours. The directions you give call for the shortest and simplest treatment of the three. Will you not tell us if you have to keep the milk on ice in order to preserve it for several days or if it is enough to let it stand in a cellar or other comparatively cool place? Your plan is undoubtedly of special value if it does away with the need of ice for preserving milk.

Wants to Learn Pharmacy.

"I would be very much pleased if you could give me the address of two or more schools where pharmacy is taught. I know that instruction in pharmacy is given at all the large universities, but I have an idea that there are schools where pharmacy alone is taught and this is the kind of a school I wish to attend. I do not care to go many miles from Kansas City in order to find a school of pharmacy if there is one nearer home. A. W. R."

I shall have to appeal to our constituency for a reply to this. I know of a college of pharmacy in New York city, but I am not familiar with those in the west. Will some of the Cornerites better informed than I am tell me of this for the benefit of this correspondent?

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"IN a recent issue I noticed a request from one who wished to know how to clean a lace yoke in a silk dress without touching the rest. If she will follow the plan outlined I believe she will find it as successful as I do. I always do it in this way, and have never had to remove a yoke for cleaning. First buy a soft bristled tooth brush, which should be kept for this purpose, as its shape and size are most suitable. Then fill two cups with gasoline, one for rinsing. Place a folded bath towel over the corner of a table or board, and on this the yoke or a section of it which seems to fit. Dipping the brush into the gasoline, carefully scrub the yoke; the treatment will not injure any buttons or colored trimmings. Go over the whole yoke, moving it on as each section is cleaned. After you have been all over it repeat the operation with the gasoline in the second cup, laying the yoke over a clean section of the towel. Repeat the process with the cuffs. When you have finished hang the gown in the sun and air and do the same with the towel before sending it to the laundry. You will find the yoke as clean as new. Going over the yoke in this way before it is really soiled is better than waiting until it is very dirty. Both gasoline and dirt get into the yoke down into the bath towel and do not spread to spot the silk. The small brush seems admirable for such delicate work. I hope this process will be found satisfactory."

Mrs. J. S. C."

Certainly this direction will prove of service to many of the wearers of delicate yokes or cuffs, which are hard to clean without detaching them from the frocks they adorn. Let me add the caution relative to using gasoline in the room with a light or a fire. Constant accidents with this fluid teach us the danger of running any risks in handling it. Use it out of doors if you can, but in any event away from artificial light or fire.

PARIS FASHIONS

By Mary Buel

Gown of charmeuse in a dark shade of blue. The skirt has a good deal of fullness introduced into the front, where at the top it is held in place by many rows of shirring, which is put in to resemble a sash. At the sides the skirt is somewhat draped, but in the back it hangs straight. The bodice is made partly of charmeuse and partly of ivory colored satin. The latter forms the sides, the sleeves, and the coat with tall backs. There is also a little chemisette of satin and a collar of the same. The chemisette is fastened with jeweled buttons and there are rows of the same on the outside of the sleeves. The belt is of folded charmeuse with a flat bow finishing it in the back. Model from Brandt. Mat of black moire of a new shape. It is trimmed in front with a double paradise feather, also in black. Model from Leontine.

Gown for afternoon, showing the new crinoline effect. The underskirt is of white Maline lace, a very little draped, over a foundation of white satin. It is made as narrow as is possible to give the slim silhouette. Over this lace skirt fall two overskirts, each longer in the back than in front. They are made of chiffon, accordion plaited, and finished about the edges with a very full, short fringe in white silk. Beneath this is placed feather bones, the chiffon being pulled out to its fullest width. This makes both overskirts stand away from the underskirt, the lower one being especially wide and spreading. The bodice is entirely of chiffon except for the close undersleeves of Maline lace. It is surplice shape with kimono sleeves, which are very loose and full. There is a tiny guimpe of tulle which fills in the V shaped front. The narrow belt is of pale rose taffeta, tied in a flat bow in the back, the ends being short. Directly beneath the lower part of the upper underskirt there is a sash of taffeta to match the belt, this passing rather closely about the figure and tied in the back. Model from the Royal.

Mat having a crown of black velvet, with a very broad brim of Chantilly lace, which stands up in front and spreads out at the sides and back. A huge aigrette is placed at one side. Model from Lewis.

Street costume having a skirt of very fine checked red and white serge. It is made with a folded over seam in front and a very little draping at the sides. The back has a few gathers inserted into the belt, which takes away from the severely plain effect. The coat is of red cloth and is very new in cut. The skirt portion of it is double, the lower part fastening with small white pearl buttons, the upper part falling loose over it, opening a trifle in front. The upper part of the garment falls like a bolero at the sides and in the back, the sides being marked with pearl buttons put on in a single row. The sleeves are put in at the arms' eyes, flare out slightly at the bottom, and are finished with buttons. The sash is of figured silk, red and white. It is laid in folds, is passed loosely about the waist, slipping under a strap of the cloth in front, and fastens flatly at the side. The collar is of embroidered batiste. Model from Beer.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—If coming events cast their shadows before them, then we are to have changes, and decided ones, in the next installment of fashions. Crinolines have appeared, and so has white hair, both being the height of the latest mode, and both certainly indicative of a new order of things.

Crinolines are perhaps more important than snow white tresses; at any rate, they are less difficult to obtain, and these I prophesy will be worn next season. Not the crinolines of our grandmothers, although these undoubtedly were most taking in their time, but modified ones that will still preserve the slim silhouette and yet give variety to the outline. For the present at least the crinoline will not take on the form of the hoopskirt, of this I feel sure, but the ones that are being introduced may be only preliminary to the others if time is given for the change to be gradually made.

The ones that are being shown now, and shown they are at the largest and most important dressmakers, are arranged to be a part of a costume and not a separate article of attire to be donned with any gown. They are feather boned overskirts or tunics, sometimes one, frequently two, which are so cut or plaited that their lower edges stand away from the skirts beneath them, often at a distance of a quarter of a yard all about. The most supple feather bones are used—so supple indeed that instead of standing away in an unbroken line, these undulate in graceful curves, quiver with every motion of the body, and are fascinating to look upon.

So far these hooped effects have been made up only in soft, filmy fabrics, such as chiffon, lace, tulle, and other transparent materials, so that, no matter how much these are boned out, there is still to be seen the skirt that is as close fitting, if not more restricted, than ever. To cover the feather bones there is always some sort of trimming, ruchings, puffings, fringe, and flowers, but these also are delicate and scarcely take away from the look of transparency that is so pretty and chic.

From some of the dressmakers I learn that with the coming of cool weather heavier materials will be used, such as silks, satins, and brocades, so that it is on the cards that stunning brocaded velvets hooped out part way down the skirts will be among the novelties of the autumn. This style is the most pronounced departure that has been made in some seasons, and if it catches on will bring about radical changes.

New Figured Mull Frock.

The models that have already been shown include, besides the sketch in today's letter, a lovely figured mull frock that is new at Pacquin's. It has a plaited underskirt held in about its lower edge by two ruches of ribbon in a pale green shade. The overskirt, only one being used, is of lace, and it has no trimming about the bottom. There are, however, a series of ribbon loops, which begin at the waist line and extend down in slightly spreading rows, each row being caught at the bottom with a small bow. The feather boning was cleverly arranged under the edges of the lace and over this extended the overskirt in a more than usually hooped fashion. The bodices of these crinoline frocks are made more simple than the gown would seem to warrant, the idea being to give prominence to the skirt and render the waist subservient to it. Therefore the Pacquin model had a bodice that was only a soft gathered in one, upon which appeared a little of the ribbon to match that on the skirt. There was a ribbon belt and a little touch on the sleeves, and this was all, the whole frock being girlish in its simplicity.

Another and equally pretty model was seen at Beer's, this following out the general scheme of the gowns from this establishment, inasmuch as it was black and white. The skirt, of white lace, was plain and narrow, and it was also short, as are all the crinoline models. Over this fell quite a long overskirt of white chiffon, well stiffened out at the bottom and having some fine tucks introduced into the belt to give the necessary fullness at the bottom. Over this fell a second underskirt, or rather tunic, for the bodice was partly made of the same material. This was of a sort of thin grenadine upon which were diagonal stripes of black velvet. The tunic was gathered into the waist by a belt of rose colored satin and at its lower edge it was finished with a velvet fringe, the feather boning being under this. The sleeves were a combination of lace and chiffon and were all white, while into the upper part of the black tunic was brought a charming little chemisette and round collar of white lace.

Boning in Flounces and Sleeves.

Although all these different models would seem to be outre and pronounced, in reality they are not, but some that that clever and independent couturier Zimmerman is making are both of these. The two that I have seen have been intended, the one for afternoon, the other for evening wear. The former was of a soft gray shade in chiffon, the color showing a faint tinge of pink through its weave. The underskirt was made in three tiers, the lowest flounce being narrow, the second somewhat wider, and the top one quite full. The two upper flounces were boned out, the top one excessively. Each flounce was painted in a design of flowers, ribbons, and a trailing foliage, each being wider as they extended toward the top, so that the upper one was almost covered with the bright colorings. There was a great deal of painting on the bodice, some of it being put on the wide sleeves, which fell away from the elbows. An unusual touch was given these by their also being boned, but only just enough to keep them well away from the arms, while beneath fell several ruffles of lace.

The evening frock was of the same general style as the other, but in this there were only two skirts. The material was of dotted lace, the finest and most transparent that could be imagined. The underskirt fell over a satin foundation of a pale blue shade, and it was draped a little at both sides. The overskirt, also of lace, reached to just above the knees in front and was quite long in the back. Its lower edge was fully three yards in circumference, wide, when one considered the present day skirts. Of course, this stood out to an unusual extent and made still more noticeable the trimming of an enormous wreath of wild flowers in all the most vivid colors, mingled with wheat, corn, and grasses. Some of the flowers trailed over the edge of the skirt, others were caught up onto it, there being no effect of properly balancing the colors nor the flowers, but all were arranged with a premeditated confusion. There was no color on the surplice bodice, except a single scarlet poppy which fastened the waist band of satin ribbon, in pale blue to match the foundation skirt, this being provided with rather long ends. Strange as it seems, this gown was being made for a German princess, and it was ideally original and young. Also, as foretelling the coming fashions, it was something to observe.

White Hair Seen Everywhere.

Before saying more on the subject of dress, hats, etc., I must return to the first mentioned fashion of white hair. A year ago Grand Prix day I wrote that a number of mannequins had appeared at the races with snow white hair, beautifully coiffed, the lack of color being produced by a plentiful supply of powder. In their bright frocks, for almost the first of the bright shades were seen then, they looked charming, like beautiful miniatures made animate. But it was then supposed that these pretty girls had so arranged their heads to better set off their costumes and that white hair would become the rage was probably not thought of. But so it is.

The white tressed woman—or, better still, the girl with her curling locks powdered or covered with other locks that are not hers, but of the desired snowy shade —are to be seen everywhere. To make this powdered hair becoming it must be much curled or puffed, therefore curls and puffs have taken the place of hair smoothly drawn over the ears or arranged in other classic styles. Now everything is fluffy, little curls falling over the forehead, cunning curls that are tucked away behind the ears, and beneath the hats may be seen soft knots or large puffs of dark or blonde hair covered with powder. There are also a lot of odd combinations of dark with white hair being indulged in by those who like these contrasts.

Sometimes it is a single white curl that will fall from under a wave of dusky hair, or there will be a wide white lock brought in at one side or just over the brow. At a restaurant dinner the other night there was a marvelous effect of a head showing one side dark as night, the other equally white, both sides being dressed alike, and where the division came on the forehead was a beautiful ornament, from which rose a superb paradise feather in black. To say that this was startling only partly conveys the idea, but one must also say that the lady concerned seemed perfectly satisfied that she was evidently an object of envy to some of her fellow diners.

ATLANTA BUSINESS MEN AS ATHLETES

ED. CARTER, TENNIS CHAMPION SOUTH ATLANTIC STATES

CARLETON V. SMITH—TENNIS CHAMPION OF GEORGIA AND TENNESSEE—AND EX-CHAMPION OF THE SOUTH

A STATISTICIAN in Chicago set out recently to discover how many business men play golf, and found that the number on Sundays and holidays is greater than the attendance at baseball games.

His conclusion was not that the religious observance of the Sabbath is being disregarded, but that on all leisure days business men are giving even more of their time to the active sports of out-door exercise than to the inactive pleasure of watching a baseball game.

Tennis, boating, swimming, and even track athletics are becoming a part of the busy man's routine. He takes to golf readily to golf, because it has such an aggravating fascination, but he takes to the others also, and nowhere more so than here.

No golf course in the south is used by a greater number of players than the links of the Atlanta Athletic club at East Lake; and few courses are so popular in the beginning as the links at Brookhaven.

As for tennis, it is played here on more courts than one can name; and swimming and boating are exercises in which about half the city joins.

NEW BUSINESS PARTNER.

Samuel Hopkins Adams, who is a sensible authority on questions of health, recently wrote of the experiences of a business man who had begun to run down in health and efficiency; and who finally "came back" by taking a new business partner—nothing less than an hour's gymnasium daily.

This man doubled his earnings within a few months time, got a new appetite, and began to feel that the world wasn't a very bad place after all. His moral was that if business goes wrong and your appetite becomes picayunish, it is best to take on a new business partner by the name of "Gym."

Just how much of the industry and enterprise of Atlanta is due to this new, or comparatively new, element of business would be reason for a great big surprise if the influence of the new business partner could be gauged accurately.

To swing a golf club for an hour in the afternoon and to get so mad at the little white ball that you forget business entirely; to wear a pair of duck trousers that you have laundered only as a part of your New Year's good resolutions, and a shirt with the sleeves cut off at the shoulders; to let the sun bake you and the wind tan you; to fall into the habit of taking a real deep breath now and then—

MORNINGS AFTER

Well, try this once and see what an amazing amount of work you can hustle through with on the "mornings after," and how good you feel when going about tasks that once loomed large and forbidding when you started the day with a headache and a feeling that you were unequal to any vigorous effort.

It is the same with tennis, with swimming, with boating; and, except for the lack of fresh air, it is just as true of the "gym" and that right strenuous exercise of handball.

To be an athlete or to have athletic hankerings is to take a partner into your business who stirs you up to an enthusiasm and an industry of which you had not before believed yourself capable.

You take an hour off in the afternoon to store up energy enough to save two hours the next morning in the amount of work done.

This is the view that business is beginning to take of athletics, and is the reason why business men of Atlanta are taking a new partner into their affairs—the out-door exercise, the in-door "gym."

THE GOLF PROCESSION.

It is about five miles round the golf course at East Lake, and, yet, there are times when the procession of golfers winds round from the first tee to the last with no more than comfortable driving distance between the two-somes, the three-somes, and the four-somes.

But it isn't golf by any means that is the whole invigorating out-door influence from which business is drawing new energy and greater efficiency. There is tennis, as well, and boating and swimming, and don't forget the "gym" and the handball.

And these games not only give the business man the exercise he needs, but also the chance to excel at athletics. Take tennis, for instance, Carleton Smith and Ed Carter, both of the Atlanta Athletic club, hold many titles and will win many more. Carleton Smith is champion of Georgia and of Tennessee and is ex-southern champion. Ed Carter is South Atlantic champion. Nat Thornton is now southern champion. In fact, when you speak of them you use "champion" as often as you do "delighted" when you refer to the gentleman from Oyster Bay.

As for golf, it is more healthful than titular. Yet, there have been titled champions from the golfers of Atlanta, and who can say there are not many more prospective ones. When the clubs feel good and the ball goes straight, where is the golfer who doesn't believe that cups and medals await him?

As for swimming, so many are apt at the sport that the best are hard to choose. Among this best is Walter Dubard, of the Athletic club, he who seems to be diving from the edge of the skyline at the top of this page.

And, then, speaking of track athletics, there is Ben Adams, who was one of the Jumpers on the American team which contested at the last Olympic games. No one but his brother Platt, beat him; and at that, the difference between their jumping was but a matter of half inches. And earlier Ben had established his title to American champion in the triple broad jump.

Just now he is making his home here, next year he is going to Athens, Greece, to contest in the international games which are to be held there.

But something a little more interesting than his jumping is what he says of the value of training and of track athletics.

As he puts it: "No man is at his best till he is in training. He never feels fit and fine until he gets his muscles in shape. He hasn't realized what his full efficiency is until he is physically right. If every business man could qualify for the Olympic games, he could do twice as good work as he does now."

Anyway, the number who are making exercise their good business partner is increasing, you might almost say, by the day.

Belasco Chooses Own Plays

LIKE all the other big theatrical managers and producers of Broadway, David Belasco went to Europe this summer and came back with a bag full of new plays, but that was as far as Belasco imitated his rival. The plays he brought back were his own. Belasco bought nothing in Europe. During the time he spent going and returning and while he was on the continent he put the finishing touches to several plays on which he had been at work for months and when he stepped off on the pier when he got back to New York the other day Belasco, like the other managers, was ready to give the ship news reporters some of his plans for the 1913-1914 season, but he brought back nothing he did not take to Europe with him except a few ideas.

Likewise, Belasco came back with a pocket full of contracts with new players as did some of the other managers, but he did not get the actors and actresses in Europe, any more than he got his plays there. He merely took them under advisement during his vacation trip and made his mind up about them while he was abroad.

David Belasco is the one New York producer who stands out for American drama, dramatists and players. He believes in the American playwrights, he says, and does not look to London for his performers. He has brought out more native stars than perhaps any other American producer.

"I went to Europe to think undisturbed," he said on his return. "I went for recreation and I enjoyed every minute of my stay, but I think I got nothing there that will help my coming season unless I have to come to the impressionistic school of plays that just now holds the boards across the pond. They seem to like the advanced art over there. As for myself, I do not care either for the advanced or the impressionistic drama. I have always tried to draw my plays from real life and have sought to make my characters natural and lifelike. I think I could never come to care for the new school. But if the craze hits this country and there should be an unmistakable demand for an advanced drama I might put on one to satisfy the public, but in that event I would write it myself or have some other American write it for me. I have no definite plans along that line and I have brought back not one single imported play nor the rights to any. So far as I know now my coming season will be American in every detail."

Belasco denied emphatically the report that he was negotiating for a London theater. He said he had on his hands in New York about all the theaters that one man of his years could attend to, and was content to let well enough alone.

(From H. Noel Williams' "A Rose of Savoy.")

The three princesses delighted in practical jokes and were forever in some scrape or other. One night, at Trianon, they procured a petard and exploded it beneath the window of monsieur's bed chamber. Once, when court was at Marly, the odor of an exceedingly pungent tobacco was wafted to the king's nostrils as he was on the point of retiring to rest, which, upon inquiry being made, was found to proceed from the apartments of Mme. de Chartres, where she and her sister were smoking pipes borrowed from the Swiss guard.

Truck Growing In South Georgia

TIFTON, Ga., July 26.—With the development of the truck growing industry, south Georgia has nothing to fear from the boll weevil.

Tift county made this year its first organized effort at truck growing. The results despite the late start and unfavorable season have been so successful and so profitable that the acreage will be more than doubled next season and a common packing house will be established to which all growers will bring their products to be packed and shipped. It is intended to make the acreage large enough to bring buyers here to take the crop f. o. b. delivery.

South Georgia soil and climate offer the truck grower every advantage. Vegetables mature here just at the time Florida shipments are falling off and before shipments from the Carolinas and Gulf states begin to come in. Reaching the market between the other crops, the south Georgia truck finds a ready sale and a good price.

Better than that the combination of sandy loam and the strong red pebble soil produce vegetables of the finest flavor and the best shipping qualities. This is illustrated by a local grower who took a specimen tomato from a Florida shipment and a tomato almost identical in appearance from a lot he was packing. Sliced with a sharp knife and this slice raised on the blade the meat of the Florida tomato would break and fall out while that of the Georgia product was firm and intact. There is no comparison between the two when they reach the table, the Georgia tomato having a superior flavor and wholesome qualities of its own.

HIGH PRICES.

These qualities are appreciated when they reach the market. The first tomatoes from Tifton to reach New York found ready sale at an advance of 15 cents a crate over competitive shipments from Florida and Mississippi and the produce dealers wired for more. At no time during the season did the Tifton tomatoes fail to find a ready sale at a good price on any market where they were offered.

The Tift County Truckers association was organized in February with a membership embracing nearly every section of the county. Its object was co-operation in the buying of seed, fertilizer, crates, etc., and in packing, shipping and selling.

There were approximately 700 acres of melons, cantaloupes and truck in the county. Of these about 500 acres were in watermelons and cantaloupes and 200 acres in vegetables. The vegetables planted were cucumbers, tomatoes, cabbage, Irish potatoes, beans, squash and okra. The largest acreage was in cucumbers, about eighty acres; tomatoes about twenty acres, with the other crops in the order named.

The season was one of the worst ever known here for truck growing but despite this one grower reports over 500 crates of cucumbers to the acre and notwithstanding they were late reaching the market, owing to dry weather, this acre netted him about $300. The cucumbers which reached the market first brought a good price and despite the fact that the balance of the crop was late and a majority of the shipments were by express owing to the small acreage the average price was a profitable one. A total of about 7,000 crates of cucumbers; about 2,500 crates of tomatoes; about 1,000 crates of cabbage; about 800 crates of squash; about 1,000 bushels of Irish potatoes, and about 200 crates of beans moved from this point. The cucumbers and cabbage yielded from $100 to $125 net per acre.

PROFITABLE CROP.

The most profitable crop to the truckers was the tomatoes. One grower says that his tomatoes netted him $200 to the acre and that with rain he would have made $400 an acre just as easy. He says that if he had put fifty acres in tomatoes instead of cotton, they would have required no more work and the crop would have brought him $10,000. He intends to put in fifty acres next year.

Artificial irrigation is being considered by many of the growers. This can be put in for comparatively little cost and once established solves the rain problem for all time. It is very probable that several Tift county truck farms will be artificially irrigated before another season.

The growers intend by increased acreage and co-operation to be able to make carload shipments of each variety and thus save the expense incident to express shipments and put their truck on the market in better condition.

Funds are already being subscribed and the location has been selected for a packing house. Truck selected and packed by an expert brings a better price and is more readily sought by buyers. Tift county growers intend that all their truck shall be a standard grade and packed by experts another season.

The advantages offered by the trucking business are many. Besides the emancipation from the slavery of the all cotton crop, it brings in money at the dullest season of the year to the Georgia farmer. With truck growing under good headway south Georgia banks will have home money to lend at a season of the year when they now have to borrow from their eastern correspondents.

The labor problem is another advantage as the growers have no difficulty in securing all the help they want at what would otherwise be an off season.

EFFECT ON THE SOIL.

One of the greatest advantages in truck growing is that it doubles and trebles the yield of the soil. Two, three and even four crops can be grown on the same land every year and rotation only increases its fertility and adds to its productiveness.

One of the most important industries of Tift county which is closely allied with trucking is the supplying of sweet potato plants to nearly all the states of the south and many in the middle west.

That sweet potato plants would bear shipping 2,000 miles was the accidental discovery of a Tifton truck grower about five years ago. This discovery made him rich. This year he sold 3,000,000 plants and was able for the first time to fill all of his orders, except one order for 1,000,000 plants. Several other growers have followed his example and nearly 5,000,000 plants were shipped from this point last spring. The price ranged from $1.50 to $2.50 per thousand, which gives some idea of the commercial importance of this one industry.

Tifton has the distinction of having shipped the first solid carload of tomatoes ever sent from Georgia. With the growth of the trucking industry and the big profits which are promised this county bids fair to be the center of one of the greatest truck growing sections of the south.

A Peril Brought Home

The recent death of two rich leaders of society in New York in an automobile collision with a fast train on an unguarded grade crossing on Long Island promises to have more effect toward abolishing such death traps than scores of humbler killings, of which the world has heard little.

For a tragedy in their own circle brings home to the directors of our railroads the peril in the operation of swift trains at grades across busily traveled intersecting highways.

Yet life was not more sweet to Russell Sage, Osgood Pell and William Laimbeer, multimillionaire brokers, than to Mike O'Toole, hodcarrier, and Felix Lewinsky, pack peddler, run down by the iron horse quite as ruthlessly some months before.

And while Pell and Laimbeer will be mourned in their fine homes no doubt as keenly as O'Toole and Lewinsky in humbler abodes there will be this difference: In the fine homes the visitation of the angel of death will not take from any inmate a crust of bread, but in the humbler abodes, no sorrow will be added the frightful problem of non-support for the wives and orphaned children.

Yes, life is sweet; all life. Therefore let's be more careful how we protect it.

THE BOY WHO MADE GOOD

By DR. ANDREW M. SOULE

JOHNNY was a little twelve-year-old boy. He did not differ especially from other boys of his age. He lived on a farm of considerable area where the main crops cultivated were corn and cotton. Like other boys reared in the open country, he enjoyed the freedom of its fields, ranged through the woodland hunting with his gun whenever opportunity afforded, fished and seined in the streams, and enjoyed the old swimming hole like hundreds of other boys had done before him. The beauty of the country and the opportunities of the farm had not appealed with particular force to Johnny because they were just things of every-day life and nobody had told him about the latent possibilities of his surroundings. Like other boys on neighboring farms he went to school, and on one occasion was greatly impressed by the visit of a stranger who said he had come to co-operate with the teacher and the county school officials in the organization of a boys' corn club. He asked how many of the boys in that particular school would care to undertake to cultivate an acre of ground that spring in corn according to certain methods and suggestions which he would tell them about.

Quite a number thought this would be an interesting experiment, provided their fathers would consent to it, and among them was our young friend. As soon as school was over the boys went home, and though Johnny's father was not much impressed with the idea through the assistance of his mother, he finally won parental consent to entering the corn club contests of that year and cultivate an acre of corn after the "new fangled" methods which the itinerant corn club agent had told the boys about that morning. It was a new experience to Johnny, and a pleasant responsibility in spite of all the labor and effort involved to feel that he was to be master of a piece of ground, institute and follow thereon methods which were considered out of the ordinary in that section and therefore of questionable value.

Just as soon as the weather would permit, and that was very early in the spring, Johnny plowed his ground very thoroughly, using two mules and breaking it to a depth of ten inches. He selected an acre of land of average fertility for that was all they would give him, and he had to spend much labor and effort in clearing it up and getting it in shape to plow. After plowing the land he harrowed it several times so as to put it in a perfectly level condition and break the clods and lumps. He even hauled off some loose stones. Early in March he planted his corn from seed which he had tested and selected with care and according to the instructions sent to him from the state college of agriculture. As a result he got a perfect stand. He used a prolific variety of corn and planted in rows four feet apart leaving his hills about 18 inches apart in the drills.

Before he planted the corn he opened furrows with a turning plow to a good depth and put in the bottom several one-horse loads of leaf mold which he had gathered up from depressions in the woodland. The fertilizer was then scattered on the leaf mold and he used 500 pounds of a 4-3-4 formula. The nitrogen was derived from cotton seed meal, the phosphoric acid from acid phosphate, and the potash from muriate of potash. He used this formula advisedly because the cotton seed meal furnished nitrogen in an organic form, yet he was told this would become quickly enough available to supply the needs of his crop. The acid phosphate and muriate of potash furnished these elements in about as cheap and desirable a form as he could secure them. He had learned from the instructor that it would require a good deal of plant food to make a yield of 100 bushels of corn per acre, which was about seven times as much as his father had been raising on an acre. He therefore fertilized his land liberally, and he used a formula which he was advised would most likely meet the conditions of his soil and the crop he was cultivating. The fertilizer and leaf mold and rich lower earth of the soil were thoroughly mixed together by means of a bull tongue. The furrows were then drawn together and the corn planted and this rich seed bed which had been liberally supplied with vegetable matter and the essential fertilizing constituents in a relatively speaking readily available form.

Johnny now proceeded to cultivate his corn frequently and with shallow implements that only stirred the surface of the soil for the teacher had said that it would not do to destroy the little feeding roots of the plant. After the corn was about knee high he put on 200 pounds of a formula containing 9 per cent of phosphoric acid, 4 per cent of nitrogen and 3 per cent of potash. The nitrogen in this instance consisted of equal parts of cotton seed meal and nitrate of soda. This fertilizer he scattered down the middle of the drill rows and worked well into the soil while cultivating his crop. He did not use a plow in his corn field after breaking the land save to prepare the seed bed. He did keep up cultivation as late into the season as possible, putting a mulch on his mule so he could not injure the corn. He also cultivated frequently, thus preserving a dust mulch. By so doing it was not necessary for him to hand hoe his crop.

His corn grew beautifully throughout the season and possessed a fine color. It did not suffer from drought because he had stored water in the soil early in the spring and had kept it there by his method of cultivation. The crop promised well throughout the growing season, though a hail storm and several violent winds damaged some of his plants and twisted and broke down others. Still his crop was a landmark as far as it could be seen inany direction, and friends and neighbors who had laughed and joked came to see what Johnny was doing and how he had obtained such a wonderful result.

After a while harvest time came and two disinterested and responsible parties appointed by the county school commissioner came out and helped Johnny harvest and weigh his crop. To the surprise of every one he had made a yield of 100 bushels of corn, and thus established for all time in his mind the great possibilities which a better understanding and appreciation of nature meant to the boys of Georgia. He learned that through the use of scientific principles he could master and dominate nature; he could grow much more corn than his father had been growing by his indifferent and careless methods. He learned that he could balance up the food supply of the soil in an acceptabel manner, and by seed selection, careful preparation and planting, he could help his crop to get by those drought periods which have so often proved destructive in the history of our agriculture.

After harvesting his crop Johnny selected the best ten ears he had, according to the standard furnished him by the college of agriculture, and took them to the county fair, where premiums of various kinds were offered to those boys excelling in the production of corn. He also submitted a written report showing just what it had cost him to grow his crop and how he had prepared the soil, and fertilized and cultivated his corn. The splendid report he made and the clearness with which he presented the facts, together with the excellence and uniformity of the ten ears exhibited won him immediate recognition from the judges, and Johnny became the proud possessor of a scholarship which enabled him to spend a part of the winter studying and fitting himself the better to be a modern and progressive farmer in his native state.

Johnny's achievement brought new hope to the community, and now instead of being an unknown and unappreciated little boy, he is looked upon as one who has given a new vision to his county and is proudly introduced to every one as the boy who grew 100 bushels of corn on an acre of land. Johnny's demonstration is being emulated by thousands of other boys in Georgia and every liberal minded citizen will certainly rejoice that there is so much in agricultural education that he expects to prepare himself to enter the college of agriculture so that he may become a leader in the agricultural regeneration of his state.

SUMMER RATIONS FOR DAIRY COWS.

S. S. R., Summerville, Ga., writes: Please give me some information in regard to the amount of cotton seed products which can be used to mulch cows before producing toxic effects.

The amount of cotton seed meal which may be fed to a cow with safety and satisfaction depends on the size and age of the animal and the amount of milk she is producing. In our experience with several hundred cows covering a period of more than fifteen years, we have found from four to five pounds per day about the right amount of cotton seed meal to feed. We have fed as much as six or eight pounds, but this has only been in exceptional cases and for limited periods of time. Five pounds of meal may be fed per day to a 1,000-pound cow for almost indefinite periods of time without the least injury, and this is especially true where you have pasture for them to run on in the summer and green feed of any description to use in the winter. There is nothing better than silage. Lacking silage, pastures consisting of burr or crimson clover or any of the winter cereals will be found satisfactory. Of course you should feed during the winter time some dry feed such as hulls or cornstover. Hulls may be fed in amounts varying from ten to fifteen pounds per day. The meal may often be mixed with the hulls to advantage. The above ration should be divided into two equal parts and fed morning and night. Cotton seed meal is a very concentrated food, containing more than four times as much digestible protein as corn. Therefore when you feed five pounds of meal per head per day, you are giving the protein equivalent of twenty pounds of corn. People do not realize how rich this concentrate is and are disposed to overfeed it with the result that they sometimes produce indigestion which may become chronic.

TONIC MIXTURE FOR HOGS.

J. D. S., Brookfield, Ga., writes: I want to make a good condition powder for my hogs to be kept where they may eat it at will, and would like to know a good formula for this purpose. Also is there anything better than pine tar for keeping lice off hogs? I want to secure some kind of liquid for spraying on horses and cows to keep the flies and ticks away. Please advise me what is the best thing to use.

The best tonic condition powder to use with hogs may be prepared as follows:

Wood charcoal	1 pound.
Sulphur	1 pound.
Sodium chloride	2 pounds.
Sodium bicarbonate	2 pounds.
Sodium hyposulphite	2 pounds.
Sodium sulphate	1 pound.
Antimony sulphide	1 pound.

These ingredients should be kept in a box in the pens or pastures where the hogs can have access to it at all times. This is considered to be one of the best combinations yet devised for the purpose you have in mind. Any of the coal tar dips will prove satisfactory for use as sprays on animals to protect them from lice. Mix in the proportion of one quart of creolin, for instance, to 100 parts of water. If this does not prove effective you may increase the strength to 1 to 50. These materials are sometimes used in the proportion of 1 to 20, but this is rather unsound and liable to prove irritating to the skin of the animal. You understand, of course, that there are a variety of coal tar dips on the market most of which if properly made are effective and may be used in the same proportions as creolin. You may apply any of these dips with a hand spray pump, as suggested in your letter.

There is nothing better than fish oil for protecting animals from flies. You can purchase this through any drug store. Of course, all debris and manure accumulating in the stable should be removed. The manure should be sprinkled lightly with gypsum or lime to prevent the hatching out of additional broods of flies. Various proprietary preparations are on the market for protecting animals from these insects. You will also find a solution of carbolic acid in the proportion of one part to twenty parts of water, or creolin and other coal tar dips in the proportion of 1 to 50, sprinkled about stables and walls a great help in lessening the irritation due to flies.

IMPROVING CLAY SOILS.

J. P. K., Columbus, Ga., writes: I have about four acres of red clay land that gets very hard after a rain and goes together like putty. It will get so hard that it is almost impossible to plow it. How should this land be treated in order to cultivate it satisfactorily? What do you think of the idea of spreading sand over the land?

There are pieces of land of similar character to that described in your letter occurring on many farms and plantations in Georgia. We have some soil of this type on the college farm. It is one of the most difficult to handle we have ever had experience with. It is apparently quite devoid of vegetable matter, and contains so much clay that it is very adhesive and sticky, and it is difficult for plants to establish themselves, and, of course, the cultivation of a soil of this type is expensive because of the difficulty with which it works down. It is a good soil, however, when properly handled, and in our judgment you will find it beneficial to plow this land to a depth of twelve inches and then subsoil it four to six inches deeper. It may take two or three seasons to accomplish this, but we regard this the first and most important step. Soil of this type will also be benefited by underdraining, and we would advise you to lay unglazed tile every fifteen feet to a depth of at least three feet. Then plow under green crops systematically for two or three years until you have accumulated a body of vegetable matter in the land. Before plowing under the cowpeas, we would suggest the application of not less than two tons of caustic lime per acre. This should be put on as a top application, and it may be necessary to repeat the application of lime later as this will have a tendency to cause the clay to flocculate and will improve the physical condition of the soil. This may look like an expensive undertaking, but it will be economy in the long run, and will enable you to put this land in condition where it will grow large and profitable crops for it is naturally a strong type of soil.

It might be beneficial to spread sand over the soil to a certain extent. Of course, the expense would be very great, and the results obtained would probably not justify you in undertaking the use of sand. There is some tendency to make a soil of this type consolidate unless you use a good deal of sand. This, of course, is not a new proposition to you, for you have no doubt observed that when sand and clay are mixed in the right proportions, there is a tendency for the soil to cement, as in the case of sand-clay roads.

INOCULATING SOY BEANS.

J. A. S., Milledgeville, Ga., writes: A man on our farm planted a large crop of soy beans this year. I noticed this morning in places a good many were dying. On examination the roots seemed to be affected. I am sending a specimen of the diseased plant, and ask that you examine the same, and ask that you give me what suggestions you can with reference to the plant and the disease.

The roots of soy beans enclosed would indicate that the land on which the crop was grown was not inoculated for this particular crop, though it is possible that the nodules which should ordinarily form have been dried up or shattered off as they are very fragile. In our experience we have found it much better to sow soy beans in drills 24 to 30 inches apart rather than to seed them with a grain drill where every tube is left unstopped and the crop stands thick upon the ground and in rows six to eight inches apart. We have found it much better not to cover the seed too deeply. It is important to have the ground for this crop in the very best possible condition when it is planted. If the ground has been worked wet or is a heavy sobby piece of clay, the beans do not do well as a rule. Of course, you can inoculate the seed by getting earth from a field where soy beans have grown successfully before, or you may use an artificial culture. In our experience broadcasting this crop has not been satisfactory. It seems to respond well to some cultivation when young, and we are disposed to think if you will follow the suggestions made in this letter in the future, you will have better success in the cultivation of this crop. It often happens that when soy beans or cowpeas do not do well on a piece of land the first year that succeeding crops do better. You should also bear in mind the fact that your land may be strongly acid, thus preventing the development of the bacteria which enable legumes to assimilate atmospheric nitrogen through the nodules forming on their roots. An application of caustic lime if it is acid at the rate of one ton per acre will be profitable for many years, and will put the land in condition to insure greater success in the cultivation of soy beans.

NOTES ON ALFALFA CULTIVATION.

E. W. M., Eatonton, Ga., writes: I want information in regard to the cultivation of alfalfa. Can it be grown successfully in this section, and is it necessary to inoculate it?

Alfalfa is not an easy crop to establish and maintain, and those intending to sow it should prepare the land somewhat in advance of the seeding. It is well to plow under a crop of cowpeas or velvet beans. Alfalfa is a deep-rooted crop and does best on lands well drained and sufficiently porous for its roots to penetrate to a considerable depth. Land intended for alfalfa should be limed at the rate of not less than one ton per acre of caustic lime. Put the lime on shortly after you have broken the land and work it into the top soil with a harrow. Then let the land stand for a couple of weeks. Fertilize with 1,000 pounds of a 10-3-6 mixture which may be broadcasted on the land and worked in with a harrow. Then sow twenty pounds of recleaned American-grown seed, and cover with a weeder. The seed should be sown not later than October 1 if the season is good, so as *to permit of a good stand being se-*cured before cold weather comes on.

One of the great enemies of alfalfa in this section of the south is crab grass. You should hold this in check as much as possible by liming liberally, fertilizing highly and keeping the alfalfa clipped very close so as to prevent the grass from obtaining a foothold and developing sufficiently to choke or crowd out the alfalfa. It is not well to mow for alfalfa when it is young. It should be cut for hay when just coming into bloom.

Alfalfa is a very valuable hay, making an admirable substitute for other hays, and it will pay you to test small patches of it, and thus acquire the experience necessary for its establishment on larger areas of ground. You should inoculate the seed before sowing it. This can be done by securing about 200 pounds of earth from a field where alfalfa has been grown successfully before, and scattering it over the surface of each acre of ground, or you may mix the seed with the soil before sowing.

How Long Do Dreams Last?

(London Chronicle.)

The probability is that the snatches of sleep at odd moments when we suppose ourselves to have remained continuously awake is supported by the phenomena of dreams. Mark Twain, we remember, has his own "disappearing visitor" experience by the belief that he had unconsciously had a very short nap; and many have explained visions of ghosts as due to dreaming during short naps. For nothing is better established in connection with dreams than that an apparently very long one can occur during an extremely infinitesimal one. Alfred Maury had a long, vivid dream of the Reign of Terror, including the trial of himself before the Revolutionary Tribunal and his execution, and was able to show that it all happened during the moment of awakening by the fall of a rod from the bed canopy upon his neck.

Most of us have our special form of bad dreams, born of ill advised and ill digested supper, usually. The commonest of the nightmares is the experience of facing a drawing room of a public thoroughfare without clothes. But I suppose we all have our special horror on the edge between sleeping and waking. My own is the belief that I am in for my finals at Oxford and have not yet looked at Aristotle, and simply can't get before the time at my disposal. And when I really wake to the certainty that I have passed all my examinations until the day of judgment—that is the most joyous moment of distinction.

OLD MAN OF THE PRISON

"OLE DAVE" reminds you of "Ole 'Stracted."

"Dave" is ninety-four years of age, and is the old man of the state prison at Milledgeville.

The prison building has a hospitable front, a green lawn, a picket fence, and the air of a home for old men.

Only those who are too old or too sick to work are sent to the prison farm, and they encourage it's homelike effect.

These white-headed men sit in groups on the neat green lawn and talk politically, or they refresh themselves with soft drinks from the stand which a peg-legged prisoner has set up in the rear.

To the left of the stand, is the building of the blind men. Six blind negroes and one who can see, are found there. The seventh has known twenty years' imprisonment, and has come to feel more at home with prisoners who are blind than with those who see.

He says that the twenty years in prison have "sort of crippled him," and that he doesn't feel right when he is with other folks that are "real able-bodied."

After all, what can he see?—neither home nor friends, nothing but the inside of a prison. Why shouldn't he feel himself more a brother to the blind than to those whose sight is undimmed?

"OLE 'STRACTED'S DEATH.

Even to "Ole Dave's" eyes, as to "Ole 'Stracted's," the things which have gone are clearer than the happenings of today or tomorrow.

'Stracted—as Thomas Nelson Page wrote—lived until his master was dead, until the old plantation was gone, until he himself was alone. But when the morning came upon which 'Stracted was to lay down his burden, he thought that his old master had come back to him, and he dropped off to sleep happy in the thought.

It maybe that "Ole Dave" will die in that way. It seems that a morning should come when he will have another glimpse of the old plantation.

"I uster belong to the Greens," he said. "Then the war came, and all my white folks died, and I'm the only one left of all them that lived on the old place.

"I'd like to see it again. I'd like to see the folks I uster to belong to. But they're all gone now. I'm the only one left.

"Plantations was like families then. A nigger wasn't a nigger. He was a human being. We never was set to working in the field till we was grown and had our full strength. And then we worked 'cause we wanted to please the master and not 'cause we was afraid of him.

THE YOUNG "MARSTER."

"If we ever wanted anything, we went to him; and when it was the right thing we always got it. I was a body servant of the young marster and went along with him a little in the war. And 'fore then we played together when we was chulluns.

"But long toward the second year of the war he was killed, and at that time I was back at the old place. We did lots of work to help along the soldiers, and for one thing we shelled corn to send to them. I've shucked and shelled corn until I went stone blind.

"Then the war was over and the plantation was sold, and we all broke up, then my folks began to drop off till they wasn't any one left but me.

"And after that I got in trouble up at Ft. Gaines, and they sent me here.

"They promised to turn me out, but Mr. Brown never signed the papers, and I'm still here."

There he remains, the old man of the prison—one who has outlived his generation and who casts a wistful eye back over the years that have gone.

LIKE "MARSE CHAN."

When he talks about the young master who went off to the "big war" and never came back home, you think of "Marse Chan." "Ole Dave" shakes his head a little, smiles, shuffles one foot, then looks upward in a wistful way.

"I think about him and the old days more than I used to," he goes on. "I never saw him after I came back to the old place and he stayed with the army. I didn't stay with him 'cause somebody was needed to look after things at home. Then we heard he was dead and that they'd buried him somewheres up in Virginia.

"I'd like to get out and mebbe go back and see the old place. I'd like to do that. But I guess I'll get out soon whether they turn me loose or not. Even a slavery time-nigger can't live much more'n 94 years.

"There ain't any use in livin' so long. You outgrow all the folks you ever knew, and there isn't anybody left to look after you.

"The marster dies, the old place gets sold, and there isn't anything or anybody left. You're by yourself and mebbe you get into trouble. One thing everybody ought to do is to die in time."

A CHEERFUL PRISON.

But the remainder of the prison agree that the time should be distant. The "farm" has an air of content, rather than of depression. This prison for old men bears up cheerfully under its burdens.

Few are under fifty, many are over seventy, and as the age increases the crime charged becomes more serious.

Of those who follow closest after "Ole Dave" in age is "Uncle Bob" Davis, who shot his son to death, and is doing five years for this murder. Often "Uncle Bob" is to be seen sitting upon the lawn, chatting with his daughter who has come upon a visit. His expression is benevolent, his manner seems to mean that age has sweetened his temper.

After "Uncle Bob" had been sentenced he was given money and told to go to Milledgeville to serve his five years' imprisonment. And he did so with never a thought of violating the trust that had been imposed in him.

Then, there is "Dad" McCallie, 73 years of age, a rather numerous and whimsical character, who speaks in a low voice and is distressed by the merest quarrel among the old men. "Dad" is sentenced for killing his wife.

C. J. Binter, aged about sixty, and I. W. Williams, aged sixty-three, are charged with the same offense.

Among those whose infraction has been of less serious character is a former member of the legislature. He even loaned his aid to the abolishment of the convict lease system, and he directs the political discussions which are characteristic of the "farm."

He speaks of 1913 tariffs; but "Ole Dave" lapses back to slavery-time plantations, to his stories of the young "marster," who was like "Marse Chan," to his memories, to his regrets, and while he talks it seems that "Ole 'Stracted" himself has come to life and is speaking.

NEWS OF THE "MARSTER'S" DEATH.

Romance of the Ghetto

By Mary Boyle O'Reilly.

THE GHETTO, Aug. 23.—We tenement people call Orvina Larson "The Other Woman" as we watch Olava passing in Madison stret, and I, whose French grew flexible on Guy de Maupassant, leapt to rash judgment: Which goes to prove how much of modern culture is found in what one should not read. Anna Kolsbottel of the life-saving delicatessen round the corner tells the story as one whose word is beyond question.

"Ach, Gott!" mused Anna Kolsbottel, "true love never dies, which does not make eet iny easier to bear. Many a time I have gried about dat Olava Larson. You know her? Always dat bundle on her shoulder, limping to der sweat shop, so. But I think you never saw her smile. Why? Ah, dut ees der story. Listen.

When he was yoonge Gustave Larson—you know heem—he lived een der old country, een Norway. Dem times he was a fisher, sailing der deep sea. You see how big he es? When he was yoonge every girl see, too, how he was handsome. If he have a temper, why dey say, dat ees much der better. So he got married.

"Dat was twenty year ago. Her name was Orvina and she was a goot woman. More women loff in spite of a man's faults den becaue of his virtues, I know. It takes a patient wife to protect a man from his pleasures. Orvina Larson was a goot woman, but she was nod patient. Why es it der lack of charity begins at home? I dok't know. Pretty soon Orvina she tell her husband 'Der man busy doing his best es too busy to talk about eet.' So she word brought another. Eeet is always so. Whatever would become of beace and prosperity eef der whole truth was always told?

"Do I blams that wife. Nod. Me, I thing any woman is acting odd when she does not try to get even. Pud. Get der better of a man und you soon see his worse side. Ya.

That night Gustave Larson sailed away and never game back for six months. When he did gome home he would not find his wife and child. Mad? He was grazy. Next day he start for dis country. Dat was sixteen years ago. He was nod rich, but der sorest poverty ees being friendless. Me, I was Gustave's friend. When he gome to dis shop from his work I sell him cheese, salt fish—wienerwursts. Den one day he tell me about his baby. So I say him:

"'Gustave Larson, it ees a sin. Think it over. When we are afraid to examine our conscience it ees a sign we need to. You are sorry. Write eet to your wife. Some way she will get dat letter.' He did what I told him, bud der letter game back. Den, in a year, he wrote again. Bud der second letter game back, too. After three years I say to him, 'My friend, she' ees dead. You should have a home. Why nod marry again?'

"Me, I have der very girl in my eye, but did I tell him? Nod. A month more und I say, o innocent, 'What a nice girl ees dat Olava Olafson. How hard she work on coats for dat sweat shop. She ees alone in der world, but always so neat und sweet tempered.

"Den Gustave ask her to marry him he tell her about Orvina. Dat was wise. Der man dat leads a double life does not have twice as much fun. Well, Olava Olafson think it over und den she take him for better, for worse.

"Me, I am glad. I lose one good customer, but still I am glad. Eeet ees good to know dat der poor can be so happy as dos two. Eef you can see dat Olava Larson how happy she was. All day she clean und cook, making home for her man. When dat Jew sweater ask her to finish coat—just a few in der day—Gustave he shout at him in Norse and Olava she laugh und laugh.

"Bud it seems der man who tells der truth is sure to be found out. One evening a strange woman und grown boy came into dis shop to ask eef I knew Gustave Larson. Me, I nevver think till I told them. Den it ees too late. No neighbors saw dem meet. But der Other Woman und her boy stayed half der night. Next morning Gustave Larson went away for good. I met him at der corner. His eyes looked wild.

"'Frau Heber,' he says to me, 'it is terrible. I can not think. But Olava wills it und, und I go. Promise me you will be her friend.' Well, I went to her dat night. She sat by her kitchen table finishing coats. If she had gried no one knew it but herself.

"'Frau Heber,' she tell me, 'eet ees nod my Gustave's fault nor—nor Orvina's. Eeet seems I am nod Gustave's wife. Orvina she say eat es not my fault. But I tell her she must take Gustave away where I will nevver see him any more. Now I will stay here alone, like I was before. Me, I must nod complain. Whatever is is for the best. Else eet would not be.'"

Corn Is Withering On the Western Farm Lands

BY W. B. KENNY.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 16.—I have just returned from the corn belt where the rain hasn't fallen, except in scattered showers, for more than a month and, where the burned up corn stands on millions of acres, rattling, noisily, in the wind—dried up! Dead!

For the first time in twelve years, there is drought in the corn belt. Six weeks of uninterrupted and terrific heat, which sometimes sent the thermometer up to 115 and never let it drop lower than 100, has almost destroyed the corn crop.

The corn belt, that section of the central west especially adapted by climatic conditions for the cultivation of corn, consists of the western parts of Missouri and Iowa, all of Kansas and Nebraska and the northern portion of Oklahoma.

Now, corn thrives on heat—provided there be an occasional rain. Since July 1, the total rainfall in this area, has measured about .70 of an inch. The result—a crop about one-third normal or, instead of from 35 to 40 bushels to an acre, about 10 or 12. Even a rain cannot save it now.

The pitiless sun has spared nothing—grains, fruit, even the trees are burned, until as far as the eye can see there is nothing but a dingy yellow waste, where should be only green. Great splotches of yellow leaves cover the trees, while the dust rises in choking clouds at every gust of wind.

Where once ran creeks and brooks now stand dry ravines. It is desolation pictured.

But despite their great loss, the farmers of the corn belt are cheerful. Two counties in Kansas are typical of the corn belt, and these counties I have just visited—Shawnee, in which is located the state capital, Topeka—and Johnson, whose largest city is Olathe.

Six miles south of Olathe is one of the six large farms owned by Frank Ogg, a lawyer. This farm, called No. 1, is nearly a thousand acres in extent and is planted in corn. Mr. Ogg is a practical farmer, and a graduate of the state agricultural college, as are many of the farmers in the corn belt. His farms are worked by hundreds of trained men, each under the personal supervision of a superintendent, graduates of the agricultural college. These men keep in close touch with experimental stations established by federal and state departments.

Stress is laid on this fact, to show just how intense must have been the sun's rays, to cut Ogg's corn crop to a third of the average yield per acre.

To Ogg farm No. 1 the correspondent was driven early in the morning. A sharp wind was rattling the dead corn stalks and the dust was choking. As the chauffeur pointed out the furrows between the stalks and explained how even continuous cultivation had failed to improve the crop, there came the whirl of a high-powered motor car.

"Here's the superintendent," he said.

A tall, slender, tanned young man jumped out of the car, and learning the mission of his visitors, said:

"Pretty bad, isn't it? No, there's no chance to save the corn now, anywhere in the corn belt. If the yield is 10 bushels to the acre, I shall be greatly surprised. The heat has been so intense that the ears withered before reaching maturity.

"Discouraged? Not a bit of it, sir. Emphatically, not a bit, sir. We have had twelve splendid years. And even this year, we had a bumper wheat crop, we have thousands of tons of hay in mow and clover seed was never so plentiful.

"Then, too, I believe, as most of the farmers in the belt believe—that the soil by lying fallow one year, will be doubly enriched for years to come. Looking at it in that light may we not be grateful, even for the drought? I do not believe that any of us have cause for worrying."

Everyone in Olathe and Topeka spoke in the same tone, as indeed do men from all sections of the corn belt.

In some parts of Kansas, especially in the valley of the Kansas river, as well as along the Arkansas, the corn crops will be fairly good, in some sections 25 bushels to the acre. In the far west, however, conditions are much worse. In the counties, the farmers propose to use the burned up corn for winter feeding.

The lack of water is being felt keenly in many Kansas localities. Those counties not traversed by either of the state's two rivers or their tributary creeks, are much in need of water.

Many of them are importing by the train load from other sections of the state. This is especially true of Johnson county, where the city of Olathe alone is paying $1,800 a month for water hauled from Kansas City.

This lack of water and pasturage is making it impossible to feed cattle. Dairies, too, are being closed and cows sold in many counties. This same course is forcing many cattle raisers to ship thousands of cattle to market before fattening. Meat on the hoof is now selling lower than for six months, but the consumer is not noticing any perceptible decrease in prices. The packing houses seem to have plenty of refrigerator space and will hold the meat for higher prices.

The consoling feature of the entire situation is that the corn belt farmers absolutely refuse to fret. They regret, of course, the loss of the year's crop, yet they see good, even in an apparent visitation.

And the reason? The modern farmer is scientific. He has had years of plenty. Speculation has had no attraction for him. He saves his money in his fat years and he knows, that despite all science can do, there will be now and then a lean year.

Death All But Barred From the Operating Table

This young man, it appears from medical journals, has all but BARRED THE ANGEL OF DEATH FROM THE OPERATING TABLE.

His name is George W. Crile. Despite his youth, he has long been a noted surgeon. It was he who was called to the deathbed of E. H. Harriman to decide if an operation would save the railroad wizard. He decided that it would not.

The news in the medical world is that Crile has invented a method which frees surgical operations from shock—from the agony following the knife!

Do you know what that means?

You thought, perhaps, that the use of chloroform and ether and other forms of anesthetics keeps the patient from feeling the pain of an operation. It does but—ONLY WHILE THE ACTUAL OPERATION IS IN PROGRESS.

The use of ether or chloroform has never been able to free the patient from the terrors of anticipating the operation. They have not softened the awful night of pain and fear immediately following an operation. In a word, they have not been able to prevent a terrific SHOCK to the entire human anatomy. And time out of time you've heard of operations that were entirely "successful," but the patient died of shock.

Dr. Crile's discovery has just been formally announced before a great meeting of eminent surgeons in London, where his method and his name were accorded the greatest honor.

Following that meeting, London "Lancet," the greatest medical journal in the world, secured from Dr. Crile a description of the new surgery. His paper in "Lancet" was lengthy and was written especially for the eyes of medical men, but from the article we have secured the following brief account of "Surgery Without Shock:"

When the patient comes to his hospital, he examines him carefully. He finds out, first, what operation is necessary. Then, if he finds that the case, in his opinion, is one upon which he can properly operate, he places the patient under treatment for a day or two. He realizes that it is the personal fear and the reactions from the knife's pain that causes deaths from shock in a word, that these are shocks. So he systematically goes about removing this fear and eliminating the pain.

The treatment of the patient consists of putting him under the influence of anesthetics. Dr. Crile uses practically three kinds of anesthetics. One kind is called local. Cocaine is of this type. Cocaine put on the flesh stops all sensation in the part to which it is applied. Dr. Crile uses a preparation similar to cocaine.

And he also uses an anesthetic like either or chloroform that puts the patient to sleep. He usese these two once or twice under the form of treatments.

The first time the patient takes them he is assured that he is not to be operated on. He falls into a pleasant sleep and whe he wakes he feels fine.

The next day the same thing is done. By the time the third day arrives the patient has lost his fear of taking the stuff the doctor gives him.

This time, after he has fallen asleep, he is wheeled into the operating room and the operation is performed. Then another substance is injected into the tissues around where the operation has taken place which prevents the sensation of pain, and this effect of absence of pain lasts for several days after the operation has been performed.

After the work of the knife is completed the patient is put back in bed. When he wakes he doesn't feel any pain and he is not conscious of having undergone any unusual experience.

By the time the effects of the drug wear off so has an reason for pain, and all the patient has to do is to wait until the muscles that have been separated in the operation grow together again to be as active as he ever was.

PICTORIAL WEEKLY

THE group of five swimmers standing by a big silver cup at the left hand corner of the page, are teacher and pupils. "Ideal," the diver, taught the four little girls much about the sport of swimming, when she paid a recent visit to Atlanta, and you can see for yourself what great chums they all got to be. Skirts, as these little bathers, found, are a great inconvenience when you go swimming; so, they started a new fashion in bathing costumes.

IN the upper right hand corner of the page is one of the polo players from Fort McPherson just about to whack the ball off the corner of the page and then gallop out of the scene. The pony which he is riding is one of the best trained polo players in Atlanta. You know, the game of polo has developed a new sort of horse—one which has the courage of a hunter, the swiftness of a race horse, and an intelligence that makes him equal to every fine point in the game. No factor in polo is more important than these fleet-footed, nimble-witted little ponies. When the Englishmen invaded the United States two years ago, much of their failure was due to an insufficient relay of ponies.

The little kids all in a group are one of the pleasant sights you can see any day at a city playground. These playgrounds are among the most important institutions in Atlanta. They not only offer children the means of play, but also instruction in how to play. It is surprising how many of the little folks have never known how to play. They have been kept so busy over books that play, a much more important study, has been neglected. At the bottom of the page you see two of the patient fishers of Piedmont park. What does it matter whether or not they catch anything? They enjoy the sunshine, the sight of the cool, rippling water, and the hope that they may land a five-pounder.
